No reason was assigned for Germany's withdrawal of the safe conduct, but it was understood the Nazis cancelled the agreement to emphasize its "paper blockade" of America.

Suspicion that the Axis powers might be attempting to get saboteurs or spies into this country in the guise of friendly aliens, caused the government to institute the most rigid scrutiny of passenger credentials ever conducted in any eastern harbor.

SUPPLIES TO RUSSIA

The fates and the weather were good to the Russians last winter. But now another twist of fate and the weather are working against the United States and Russia.

It so happens that the polar ice cap this year has come farther south than at any other time in 100 years. This has pushed the shipping lanes by which U. S. convoys carry supplies to Murmansk, closer and closer to Norway and the powerful Nazi bases there.

Result is that only 200 miles of sea separate the polar ice packs and the coast of Norway—a very narrow gauntlet for ships to run, facing simultaneous attack from Nazi submarines, airplanes and destroyers.

This is why there have been losses on the route to Russia. It is also why the United States has not been able to deliver all the supplies promised Russia—though it has tried desperately and the Russians have tremendously appreciated the effort.

To prey on this shipping, the Nazis have developed one of their strongest bases at Trondheim, Norway. There they have not only submarines, but land-based airplanes. They also have the advantage during the summer of nearly 24 hours of daylight.

Therefore, convoys skirting the north tip of Norway have to fight a running battle for three days before they can reach Murmansk. It is continuous day and night fighting, with scarcely a wink of sleep for the crews. Merchant vessels bristle with armament. Guncrews have been giving a magnificent account of themselves, but the odds are tremendous.

FRANCE GOES ANTI-NAZI

It can be no secret to the Nazis that scores of Frenchmen are sneaking out of France to England by small boat or even airplane. Some eventually have found their way to the United States.

The story they tell is one of the most encouraging of the war pictures, but it shows our state department to be lagging months behind in its policy toward France.

The people of France, say these heroes of midnight channel-crossings, are so far ahead of the U. S. state department that it would be humorous if it were not pathetic. U. S. food shipments to French North Africa, they say, won't help win over the French people; if anything, will retard the independence movement there.

The French have been won over by much greater issues than food, and are insulted at the state department's idea that they would sell their souls for a mess of pottage.

Here are the major developments which have really influenced France:

1. The behavior of the Germans in France.

2. The fact that Britain was not only able to prevent Nazi invasion, but now is so effectively bombing the continent.

3. The resistance of the Russians.

4. American entry into the war.

Of all these, one of the most effective incidents was the British bombing of the Renault motor plant (Frenchmen had been tipped off to leave in advance), and the dropping of the French flag along the Champs Elysee by a British fighter plane last week.

So when the Big Push does come, it will find an enthusiastic French people anxious to co-operate.

Note: The French fleet, these Frenchmen say, now will not be turned over to Hitler—not because of food shipments, but because the French sailors won't permit it; and the Nazis haven't got the 35,000 naval personnel available to man them.

AXIS OILFIELDS

Behind the frequent Jap bombing raids on North Australia is a very important fact which has escaped the headlines. As long as General MacArthur's planes are based on North Australia, the Japs can't go ahead with their long-cherished plans to develop the oil fields of Java.

For long - range U. S. army bombers can carry pay loads to Java and make a shambles of oil tanks and oil wells.

That is why the Japs still want to take North Australia, though since the Coral sea battle they have cooled off on the idea of landing troops in the more populated and richer areas of southeast Australia—which, incidentally, are now strongly defended.

This same principle of long distance raids by U. S. army bombers is cutting into Hitler's oil supply in Rumania. For Rumainan oil tanks are well above ground and easy targets.

To date, Hitler's only source of gasoline, so vital to his tanks and airplanes, are (1) synthetic plants in Germany, and (2) Rumiana. That's why he has to take the Russian oil fields or the war can't continue. So the most valuable help army bombers can give Russia is to blow up Rumanian oil wells.

A SMARTLY flounced blanket chest with contrasting cushion is a useful addition to any bedroom. It serves as a convenient seat; and extra covers are right at hand on chilly nights. A pair of these, covered to match spreads, would go well with twin beds.

Plan the size of your chest to fill your needs and space. It may be made of one-inch pine and should be about 15 inches high without the cushion. Make the flounce with double fullness—that is, twice as long as the space it is to fill after it is gathered. The cushion may be filled with cotton padding, feathers or down.

To make a jelly bag, use a piece of thin muslin, hem the top after seaming it. Leave the hem open a little at each end. Run two strings or pieces of tape through the openings and fasten the ends of the tape. This leaves you a string to pull at either end. When fruit is in the bag, pull up each string, tie them together and hang on a hook to drip.

Apply several coats of boiled linseed oil to the soles of your shoes and let dry thoroughly to conserve them.

Save all soot that accumulates in fireplaces and chimneys. Applied dry as a dressing on lawns or in liquid form to plants it makes an excellent fertilizer. After mixing soot with water let stand until water is clear. Twice a week is often enough to use it on plants.

J. Fuller Pep
By JERRY LINK

Sittin' down in Jed's General Store the other day, it was kinda impressed on me that the weaker a fellow's argument is, the stronger the words he uses!

Well, when I get to talkin' about KELLOGG'S PEP and vitamins I don't need any high-powered words. You see, to feel really good you got to eat right, which includes gettin' all your vitamins. And while PEP hasn't got 'em all, this swell-tastin' cereal is extra-long in the two that are oftenest extra-short in ordinary meals—B₁ and D. Try PEP, won't you?

Kellogg's Pep

A delicious cereal that supplies per serving (1 oz.): the full minimum daily need of vitamin D; 1/4 the daily need of vitamin B₁.

'Impossible'

By DUFORD JENNE

McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

THE words followed Mary to her room like a dooming sentence. In going down the hall of the boarding house she had passed Edith Lyman's room, and the door had been ajar. A group of girls were evidently discussing with Edith, who was a leader among them, some party planned for the evening; and Edith had said:

"Oh, we can't ask Mary! Ted wouldn't go with her—she's impossible!"

That was all Mary heard, but it was enough. She closed her door and stood in stricken silence. "Impossible"—how the word rang in her ears!

She was almost on the verge of tears when there was a knock on the door. She hastily controlled herself, and Edith stuck her bright head into the room.

"Hello, Mary, we're going out to a dance tonight, and couldn't you go?"

Mary's heart skipped a beat, but she was almost on the point of saying, "No!" for she knew she was being asked just to "fill in." But she was hungry to get away from the drab routine of her days, and said hesitatingly, "Yes, I'd—I'd love to go, Edith."

"O. K., then, Mary, Ted will take you."

Mary sat still a moment—Ted, one of the most welcome of the boys who came to the house, whose kindly, attractive face always had a pleasant smile for Mary.

She dressed as carefully as she could, and she was ready when Ted came.

On the journey to the dance hall, through the crowded subway, Ted's kindness and thoughtfulness pleased her and drove away some of the chill the word "Impossible" had left.

At the hall, she entered into the spirit of the evening with all her soul, warning herself that this chance might not come again.

When the evening was over, however, and Ted had left her with a kindly good-night and in the silence of her room she "took stock" she was aware that he had shown no more than courteous interest in her.

"And I was so happy with him! If he would only ask me again!" she whispered to herself.

But he didn't, not that week-end, nor the next; and in the meantime, Mary brooded on the word that had condemned her so simply.

Finally, in desperation, she went to motherly old Mrs. Ober, who worked in some dressmaking shop, and told her the whole story.

Mrs. Ober listened, and said gently:

"Then, listen, my dear. Every girl has something of charm about her; and it is her duty to study in every way she can to bring it out. Now your—your dresses ought to be changed; it's not a matter of cost but of right choices. You see, some women have a gift for figuring such things out; and some haven't. Now, it's my business to help those who haven't; and suppose we see what we can do?"

Mary's eager agreement made the older woman smile, and they went ahead with their plans.

So the day came when Mary, while Mrs. Ober looked on with interested eyes, faced herself in her mirror in a real party dress. She was amazed at the change. Her bobbed hair had been changed in such a way as to bring out the oval of her face and the curve of her slim neck; and the dress, simple enough in design, did the rest.

"You see?" Mrs. Ober said, and Mary turned and rushed into her arms.

Things seemed to happen after that. She was hurrying down the hall to Mrs. Ober's room for the purpose of having a small change made in the dress when she met Ted at the top of the stairs. He looked at her with sudden, keen interest.

"Hullo, Mary, I hardly knew you! What is that—a new dress?" he asked with frank admiration in his eyes.

His glance set something to singing within her. "A real party dress!" she announced, as she slipped by.

Then came Edith's comment later on. "Midget, where did you get that bob? It's the work of an artist!" Then, happiest of all, came Ted with his own invitation to join him and his own special group at an evening dance.

It was in the quiet of one of the alcoves of the beautiful room outside the dance floor that he turned to her. "Mary, you are the same girl and yet you aren't, and I can't figure out what has made the difference. You remember the other time? I enjoyed having you with me then, but I feel now as if it were almost somebody else." He was smiling, but his ways were frank and he could not hide his puzzled thought.

Mary was chanting to herself, "I won't be lonesome any more," but she said to him: "The reason—oh, only a woman knows! But you don't think I'm 'Impossible'?"

He caught her hand in a tense grasp. " 'Impossible'!—I should say not—and it's going to take a darned good man to get you away from me!" he said with decision.

THORSBY INSTITUTE NEWS

Miss Helen Jenkins, Principal of Thorsby Institute, has just been attending, as a delegate from Alabama Congregational Churches, the biennial meeting of the General Council of the Congregational Christian Churches held at the University of New Hampshire, Durham, N. H. Over 2,000 delegates were present from this country and abroad. As the moderator for the meeting, Ex-Governor of Colorado, Wm. E. Sweet, died recently, the Council was called to order by acting moderator John V. Sees, Esq. of Kansas. Addresses of welcome were given by Governor H. H. Blood of New Hampshire, introduced by Rev. R. G. Armstrong, Secretary of the New Hampshire Congregational Christian Conference, and by President Fred Engelhardt of the University of New Hampshire, introduced by Rev. E. G. Hangen, Pastor of the Durham Community Church.

Two former moderators present were Rev. Oscar Maurer, pastor of the First Congregational Church of New Haven, Conn., moderator of the previous council held at Berkley, California, and Mr. Roger Babson, noted statistician upon whose advice in business investments many business men rely, a great believer in the church and that America needs more interest in religion and church work. Mr. Babson was moderator four years ago at Beloit College, Beloit, Wis.

Various seminars were held each afternoon. One seminar, led by Prof. Paul Vieth of Yale University, was on Religious Teaching. It was the concensus of opinion that in the earlier schools of this country religion was taught as a part of the curriculm, but of late years, especially in the public schools, there has been a secularizing tendency in education which has taken the teaching of religion from the curriculm, and that some way should be planned whereby Bible inctruction may be given in school time. It is being done in some public schools now. It is also felt that the parents should arrange for their children to attend Sunday School regularly and that teachers should be better prepared for the Sunday School lessons and should be on time and plan to get the interest of the class in various ways. Visiting parents to get their co-operation was suggested. Sunday school officers and teachers should meet once a month, if possible to talk over plans. Also a training course should be held.

One of the interesting addresses was by Rev. H. S. Leiper, D. D., Secretary of the General Council of Churches, which is international in its scope. He is a Congregationalist, but his work is among all the churches that have become members of this Council.

An incoming British broadcast of greeting from Rev. Sidney Berry and Rev. Albert Peel of the Congregational Union of England and Wales was received between 8:20 and 8:30 on Wednesday evening.

Rev. Gerald H. Smith, a Thorsby Institute graduate of the class of 1932, who is now pastor at Rapid River, Mich., was a delegate to the General Council of Congregational Churches held from June 18-25 at Durham, N. H. While the General Council meeting was being held, a Pilgrim Fellowhip meeting for young people was held about sixty miles away at Deering Community Center, Hillsboro, N. H. Miss Ouida Wright, a Thorsby Institute graduate of the class of 1939 was a delegate at this meeting. She is the niece of Mrs. H. R. Maddox.

131, 132, 133. There will be many more bulletins from time to time coming to you outlining work to be done, and I might say that must be done if we expect our program to be a success in Alabama.

In addition to the work outlined in the above mentioned bulletins it is also necessary that you report to us weekly progress on your monthly quota and also report to us weekly on form which we have provided names of all companies and business establishments who have agreed to adopt the Payroll Savings Plan. In addition to these two reports we expect you to report to us on form ASA-A26 on the first and fifteenth of each month the activities of all of your committees. I am sure you understand these reports together with many others you will be called upon to make from time to time will require office help and someone to keep records as well as to carry on the details of the program. The Finance Committee is essential to your program.

You must maintain an office at all times. This should be publicized throughout your county so that people may feel free to come by and secure information as well as material you will have for distribution. Almost monthly you will receive several sacks of promotional material for distribution purposes. There is so much work connected with the development of this program and the promotion of the sale of War Bonds and Stamps that can be done by a secretary, thereby affording you the opportunity of doing work that cannot be done by secretaries. In event you attempt to do it all you will be spending the major portion of your time doing detail work and things that could be done by a secretary.

I hope this fully explains to you part of the work you have before you. I mean this letter together with the bulletins which I mentioned above.

Always come to see us when you are in Birmingham and remember we are anxious to hear from you from time to time. Please feel free to call upon us for any service we may render you.

Cordially and sincerely yours,

FSA News

Looking months ahead in planning a year-round food supply, 350 low-income farm families participating in the Farm Security Administration program in Chilton County will have plenty of Irish and sweet potatoes, peas, collards, and turnip greens to contribute to a good, balanced winter diet, MISS PATTON home management supervisor said today.

Chilton County farmers cooperating with the FSA will have planted an estimated 1400 acres in these 4 staple food crops during the next five weeks. Meanwhile fresh vegetables will be coming in from the gardens for the summer months.

"Collards, potatoes, and edible cow peas are easy to grow and keep, "MISS PATTON pointed out," and they provide excellent food for the family during the winter months."

Crowder peas contain minerals, Vitamins and, particularly important, muscle-building material that may be used as a meat substitute, MISS PATTON tells FSA familes. Collards are valuable green leafy vegetables rich in vitamins and minerals, and sweet potatoes are a good source of Vitamin A, she said.

Both sweet and Irish potatoes help balance a meat diet. FSA families are learning to bake both varieties to conserve the minerals that are lost in deep peeling. FSA farm and home supervisors are teaching farmers the best way of harvesting and storing their vegetables to prevent loss, and the families are studying lesson leaflets on preservation in their neighborhood group meetings.

With these four vegetables and a good supply of canned vegetables and fruits (a 100 quart per person quota has been set for FSA families), plenty of milk, eggs, and meat from Food for Freedom poultry and livestock, Farm Security families will have a plentiful supply of nutritious foods.

MISS PATTON believes that all Americans have a greater opportunity to enjoy more and better foods through the Department of Agriculture's Feed for Freedom program, at the same time shipping necessary foods to our armed forces and our allies.

"It has become a duty for all to protect themselves against inefficiency and poor health from inadequate diets, MISS PATTON declared.

Citing numerous Army rejections traced in dietary defects, MISS PATTON pointed out another reason why Farm Security is emphasizing home production of nutritious foods by its families—many of which supply manpower for our war industries.

The federal government has authorized $3,000,000 for current military construction in Alabama.

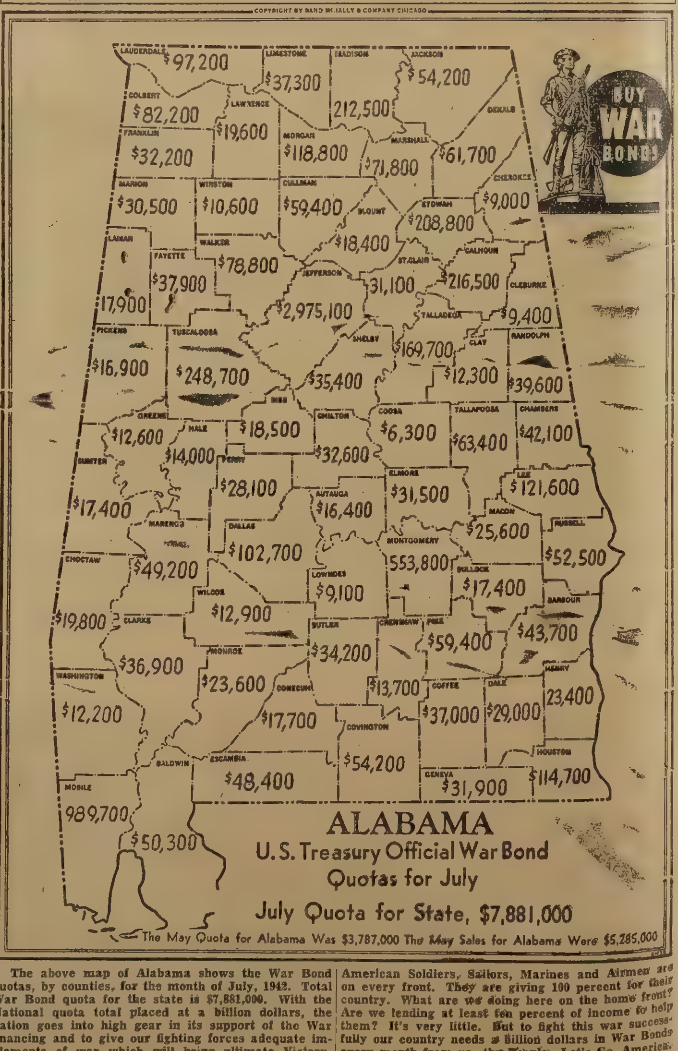
OFFICIAL U. S. TREASURY WAR BOND QUOTAS FOR JULY



The above map of Alabama shows the War Bond quotas, by counties, for the month of July, 1942. Total War Bond quota for the state is $7,881,000. With the National quota total placed at a billion dollars, the nation goes into high gear in its support of the War financing and to give our fighting forces adequate implements of war which will bring ultimate Victory. American Soldiers, Sailors, Marines and Airmen are on every front. They are giving 100 percent for their country. What are we doing here on the home front? Are we lending at least ten percent of income to help them? It's very little. But to fight this war successfully our country needs a billion dollars in War Bonds every month from us—the People. Let's Go, America.

Low Interest Rates Now Effective On Land Loans

Legislation continuing the 3½ per cent interest rate on land loans through national farm loan associations and on first and second mortgage Commissioner loans has been approved by President Roosevelt and is now effective D. W. Waite, Secretary-Treasurer of the Chilton County National Farm Loan Association announced today. The reduced rate on both Land Bank and Commissioner loans has been extended until June 30, 1944. The interest rate on direct loans and purchase money mortgages was reduced to 4 per cent.

Mr. Waite stated that continuation of the lower interest rate will save local farmers with Land Bank loans several thousand dollars annually and will also permit loans at the lowest [illegible] cost to those desiring new credit at this time.

He also reported that farmers in this section have made substantial reductions in their farm debts and in the past two years and that some have mad deposits in the Future Payment Fund to be applied on their obligations at some future date when conditions might not be as favorable as now.

Local Markets Join In Fat Drive

Clanton Markets are cooperating 100 percent in the collection of and salvaging of fats and oils for the national fats salvage program.

The retail merchants, both independent and chain, have undertaken to assist in moving waste fats from the house-wife's kitchen to the guns of the United Nations.

The meat markets in Chilton County will buy waste kitchen fats from housewives and store it in their refrigerators until they can be collected by the renderers. Perhaps before next week we can quote prices that the market operators are required to pay per pound for this oil and fats.

New Leases For Farm Tenants Landlords

A step has been taken in Alabama to obtain farm leases for periods long enough and binding enough on both sides to permit soil improvement, building improvement, community participation and other long range development, it was reported today by Marvin Durbin, Farm Security Administration supervisor for Chilton County. Mr. Durbin reported completion of 190 ten-year leases in Alabama as result of the Farm Security effort to build security of tenure. This, he said, was the first step in a program which is expected to increase in scope. Ten of these ten-year leases are in this county.

Mr. Durbin said that the 10-year lease program opens the prospect of a new day in landlord-tenant relationships, for the benefit of both parties and of southern farming generally. For lack of definite agreements in the past, the tenant has lacked incentive to improve land, change types of farming when necessary, go farther in food production, and enter into community life.

The "new day" leases involve agreements of mutual obligation between tenants and landlords to make improvements. In Alabama 89 of the leases carry agreements for kudzu plánting, 93 for terracing, 134 for pasture improvements, 183 for dwelling improvement, 152 for improve of barns, 81 of Smokehouse, 69 of poultry houses, 113 for financing, 153 for water improvement, 156 for sanitaton.

In addition, Mr. Durbin reported, a large percentage of the leases provide for better care and protection of woodland, rotation of crops and in some instances options to purchase.

The long leases were made possible by activities of the Farm Security Administration's section on Farm Debt Adjustment and Tenure Improvement, and by its function of making loans when necessary for the needed improvements. Outstanding features of the historic new arrangements, Mr. Durbin pointed out, include compensation for tenants upon termination of improvements that they have made, leases for the unexhausted value of compensation of the lease is terminated without lause, and also in many cases the acceptance of improvements in lieu of rent.

F. B. Folmar, FDA and TI Specialist, is in charge of the program in this area and a committee of substantial private citizens aids him in the county, the members being Willie Hamilton, E. R. Piper, and Jadie N. Cofer.

Save Grease! Right And Wrong Way:

SPOTLIGHT OF THE HOME FRONT turns to the kitchen, with the fats and grease salvage program under way all over the nation. Alabama housewives are being called upon to turn their kitchens into miniature munitions factories, by saving grease. Ten pounds of waste fat contains enough hidden energy to fire 25 anti-tank guns. The grease ordinarily wasted can be made into glycerine, then into nitroglycerine. Left, Mrs. Frank M. Dixon, demonstrates the proper way to save grease (in a metal container). Right, the wrong way, in a glass jar. Turn your salvaged grease in to your butcher, who will pay you four cents per pound and send it on its way to a war plant. Farmers Are Advised Plant Fall Gardens

Farmers who are looking forward to having fresh vegetables from their garders during the fall months are busy replanting their gardens. July is the best month for fall gardening, and plantings should continue in most sections of the State throughout August, September, and early October.

Chilton's War Chest Quota Is $5,070.00

Chilton county's quota for Alabama's War Chest Appeal which has been tentatively set for October 20th, with atotal goal of $589,500 is $5,070.00 according to advices reaching Haygood Patterson, Chairman of the District which includes this county, from W. A. Steadman, State Appeal Ch'm.

Allication of the War Chest quotas for all counties in the state was set by the Budget Committee of the War Chest Appeal, which submitted its report to the Executive Committee at a recent meeting in Montgomery. In fixing the total War Chest quota for the state, the Budget Committee invited applications for inclusion in the War Chest from all legitimate war service agencies. The committee examined the aims and activities of these agencies and their national quotas and then determined what sum would be allocated to each agency. Those approved were:

United Service Organizations, Inc. $272,000; Navy Relief Society, '42,500; 000; Greek War Relief Association, British War Relief Society, Inc., $25,- Inc., $25,000; Russian War Relief, Inc. $35,000; United China Relief, Inc., $60,000; War Prisoners' Aid Committee-YMCA $10,000; Queen Wilhelmina Fund, Inc. $5,000. A contingency fund was also set up to provide for additional war agencies which might seek application for inclusion in the War Chest Appeal.

Allocation of county quotas was fixed after consideration of six economic factors, including total bank deposits in each county, number of automobiles, assessed value, farm and non-farm population, white and colored population and total population. Because of density of population, increased activities due to war expendimake money-raising easier, quotas of tures and other factors which should the larger counties. were set substantially higher relatively than those of rural counties. All counties raising their quotas will remain 8% of the amount raised in the county. Counties oversubscribing their quotas will retain the surplus, which may be expended for any war purpose under the direction of the county Chairman, subject to approval of the War Chest Executive Committee or may be earmarked for the County and credited to the county's next year's quota.

All District Chairmen have been asked to proceed as rapidly as posible with the organization of their respective counties.

HOUSEWIVES URGED TO SALVAGE GREASE AND BUY WAR BONDS

Home Demonstration Clubs, 4-H Clubs, food leaders and other neighborhood organizations in Chilton County were called upon today to join in the fats and grease salvage program which will help supply the explosives used in shells and bombs for America's armed forces.

The call was issed by Miss Edna McGaugh of Auburn, state home demonstration agent and state co-chairman of the fats salvage drive, at the request of Governor Dixon and the War Production Board.

In a letter notifying all county demonstration agents of the drive, Miss McGaugh suggested that all proceeds from the sale of grease, for which butchers will pay housewives at the rate of four cents per pound, could be well used to buy War Bonds and War Stamps. Three hundred thousand meat dealers in the United States will buy grease, strained through cheesecloth into clean metal containers, and send it on the way to American war plants.

Citing estimates that approximately two billion pounds of fat are wasted annually in America in normal times, Miss McGaugh said: "I am sure that the homemakers of Alabama will welcome this opportunity to aid in our drive for victory.

She pointed out that 10 pounds of waste fat will yield one pound of glycerine, which in turn can be made into 2¼ pounds of nitroglycerine.

At the same time, the serious situation in the general salvage field -- particularly the growing need for more scrap metal to keep America's war plants humming -- prompted P. H. Baker of Birmingham, chairman of the Alabama Scrap Harvest, to advance the harvest, previously scheduled for September to August.

"The most important crop ever harvested in Alabama must be brought in during August," Mr. Baker said.

"Merchants all over Chilton County as well as farm machinery companies, are being relied upon to set up depots where scrap iron and steel and other metals, as well as scrap rubber, can be collected.

"It has not been long since 40 blast furnaces in various cities in the United States were idle because of lack of scrap. We must get out the scrap harvest, because beyond the scrap harvest lies the harvest of victory."

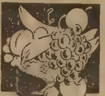
Prepare for Winter With Delicious Canned Fruit
(See Recipes Below.)

Fruit Canning



Plan now to put up those fruits from the market or your victory garden while you can still capture their garden-freshness and summer sweetness. This year's canning will require more careful planning than ever before, for waste in the fruit itself, canning jars, rubbers or sugar is highly undesirable.

Chart your plans before embarking on the canning program. Consider first how much sugar you will have available, with the five pounds per person allotment for people who are canning. Plan this amount so it will do for the jams, jellies, preserves, and sugar syrups for fruit canning.

If possible, can in the early morning hours when you are rested and your mind free from too many other thoughts. You will then be able to follow recipes more carefully, to work with more energy and spirit. The day before you will, if you are the bright and alert homemaker, have gathered together your jars, washed them, bought necessary supplies of rubbers and covers and other equipment.

Bring out the preserving kettles and pressure cookers, too. See that they are well scoured, that you have the racks, petcocks, pressure gauge, and steam-tight cover on the pressure cooker well in order.

A hot water bath is best for processing fruits because they are acid. They can safely at high temperatures, and texture, flavor and color are best. Oven canning is good also. For the hot water bath, use a large wash boiler or vessel with tight fitting cover. Fit this with a rack at least ½ inch from the bottom. Fill the rack with enough water to cover jars at least one inch over the top. Count the processing time as soon as water surrounding the jars begins to boil. There should be free circulation of water around jars.

For oven canning, set the temperature at 250 degrees. Set jars on a rack in the cold oven, however. Start counting time when oven is switched or turned on. Do not allow the temperature ever to exceed 250 degrees as this causes liquid to boil away and evaporate.

In placing your jars in the oven, allow for free circulation of heat between them. Do not allow the jars to touch each other, as this will often cause breakage, and do not allow them to come in contact with the sides of the oven.

If liquid evaporates during the processing in the oven, do not fill the jars after you take them out. Some evaporation does not affect successful canning of the fruit.

The Sugar Question.

Fruit may be canned successfully without sugar or sugar syrup with water or fruit juice used in its place. Sugar, however, does mellow and ripen the fruit, giving it a better flavor. You might try making your fruit syrups for fruit canning less sweet than usual if you are short on sugar.

Honey may be used in place of sugar in making the sweet syrup, but the fruit will be somewhat more dark than if sugar is used and the fruit flavor will be intensified. Use honey for each cup of sugar in the substitution.

White corn syrup is another acceptable substitute, but since it is less sweet than sugar, substitute 1½ cups of corn syrup for 1 cup of sugar.

Syrups to Use.

Thin syrups (No. 1) are used for small, soft fruits such as cherries and berries. Make the syrup by using three parts of water to one part of sugar.

Medium syrup (No. 2) does best by sour berries, acid fruits as cherries and rhubarb, and peaches. Boil two parts of water with one part of sugar.

Heavy syrup (No. 3) is prescribed for the large, sour fruits in which you desire extra sweetness. Measure one part water to one part sugar and bring to a boil.

Apples or Pears.
(Hot Pack)

Wash, pare, core uniform-sized apples and cut to desired sizes. (If fruit is to stand long enough to discolor, drop into water which has been slightly salted, until ready to use.) Drain from brine. Boil 3 to 5 minutes in a medium syrup and pack into clean jars, filling with syrup to ½ inch of the top. Put on cap, screw band tight, process in hot water bath 25 minutes, or in the oven (at 250 degrees) 75 minutes. If using a pressure cooker, process at 5 pounds for 10 minutes.

Apples or Pears.
(Open Kettle)

Select uniform fruit, wash, pare and core. Cut into halves or slices. Drop into boiling No. 1 syrup, and boil for 20 minutes. Pack into clean, hot, sterilized jars and seal tight.

Peaches.
(Open Kettle)

Select firm, ripe peaches. Peel or dip peaches in hot water, then in cold and slip off peel. Leave whole or cut in halves or slices. Boil 20 minutes in No. 2 or 3 syrup, and pack in clean, hot, sterilized jars. Seal tightly.

Peaches.
(Hot Pack)

Prepare as above, removing peel and pits. Precook for 3 minutes, then pack into clean jars, add syrup to within ½ inch of the top. Put on top, screw on firmly, and process in a hot water bath for 20 minutes, or in the pressure cooker for 10 minutes at 5 pounds, or in the oven (250 degrees) for 68 minutes.

Plums.
(Hot Pack)

Use the same method and time as for peaches, except do not peel the fruit, merely prick the skins.

Berries.
(Cold Pack)
(Except strawberries and cranberries)

Wash, stem and pack berries. Pack into clean jars and add No. 2 or 3 syrup. Put on cap, screw tightly. Process in hot water bath 20 minutes or in pressure cooker 8 minutes at 5 pounds or in the oven at 250 degrees for 68 minutes.

Cherries.
(Cold Pack)

Wash, stem and pit cherries, if desired. Pack into well cleaned jars, fill with No. 2 or 3 syrup depending on the sweetness desired. Put on cap and fasten tightly. Process 20 minutes in a hot water bath, 10 minutes in the pressure cooker at 5 pounds, or 68 minutes in a 250-degree oven.

If the directions for the fruit you desire to can are not given here, or if you have any query on other canning problems, write to Miss Lynn Chambers, explaining your problem to her. Address your letters to her at Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Illinois. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

Lynn Says:

How many jars are you putting up of the fruits? Here's a guide to help you pick out jars:

Cherries: 9 baskets yield 2 pints pitted, 7 pints, if whole.

Peaches: 2¼ pounds (small basket) yields 1 quart.

Plums: 1 14-pound basket yields 25 pints.

Strawberries: 1 crate yields 26 pints, if canned whole; 31 (7½-ounce) glasses of jam.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

Had Abiding Faith Freemen Would Make Free World

NEW YORK.—At Londonderry, in Ulster, the U. S. A. has its first naval base in Europe—the first in history. It is an operating base and it is now operating. This is a reminder to this department that the ancient and adaptable "Londonderry Air," obtainable in any one of many guises at any song shop, never failing to re-align ragged basses and tenors and bring them through to a valorous finish.

It was over half a century ago that John Addington Symonds, great English literary critic, wrote his adaptation of the "Londonderry Air." He made the old song "News Today." Here are his words:

Come day of joy, when lustier men and nobler
Than ere the world hath known shall rise,
With flame of freedom in their spirits,
And light of knowledge in their eyes.
They shall be gentle, brave and strong of heart,
To spill no drop of blood, but they shall dare,
All that may plant man's lordship firm and free
On earth and fire and flood and sea and air.

Till race with race and people blent with people,
Unarmed shall live as comrades free.
In every heart shall beat the love of human kind,
The pulse of one fraternity.
New arts shall bloom, of lustier mould more beautiful,
And mightier music thrill the skies,
And every life shall be a song of pure delight
When all the earth's a paradise for all.

In school we took a lot of punishment from an aggressive pedagog, assaulting us with Symonds' "Predecessors of Shakespeare." It was not until years later that we understood that Symonds had been fanning up that "flame of freedom" of pre-Elizabethan England, and that in Webster, Marlowe, Green, Dekker, Peale and Heywood, he found unfettered spirits, making a great literature and a great England. If the teacher had had us sing the "Londonderry Air," as above, we might have understood.

Rates an Assist When Our Planes Score a Put-Out

SOMEBODY is always giving Dr. J. C. Hunsaker a medal, so turnabout is fair play when he gets on the sending end and hands one to Brig. Gen. James Doolittle, for obvious reasons and with appropriate sentiments. As chairman of the national advisory committee for aeronautics, he conferred on the Tokyo bombardier the Daniel Guggenheim medal which he himself received in 1935.

Most people would be willing to settle for Tokyo in honoring General Doolittle, but Dr. Hunsaker, a careful scientist, weighs in the general's other achievements and emphasizes the award as "not given for any single act." That puts both the general and Tokyo in a long perspective, which is characteristic of Dr. Hunsaker.

He is the head of the faculty of aeronautical and mechanical engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, a former commander and aircraft designer in the navy, and co-ordinator of navy research. He designed for the navy the NC4 flying boat which made the trans-Atlantic flight in 1919, made the first wind tunnel for experimentation in aerodynamics and designed the Shenandoah, the biggest dirigible built in America.

From Creston, Iowa, he went to Annapolis, and was graduated in 1908. He studied aeronautics in Germany, getting some interesting close-ups of Zeppelin design, and returned in 1912 to begin his wind-tunnel research at MIT. There he gained his degrees in science and engineering and was an instructor from 1914 to 1916. He was in the construction corps of the navy from 1909 to 1926, advancing to the rank of commander, retiring from the navy in 1927. In that period, he was assistant naval attache at London, Paris, Berlin and Rome.

He became a director of the Goodyear Zeppelin corporation in 1929 and vice president in 1935. In addition to the Guggenheim medal, his awards include the Navy Cross and the Franklin medal.

AFTER a battle of many decades, Britain takes over her underground coal deposits from the ancient ownership of dukes, marquesses, earls and the Church. Nationalization is for the war period only. The transfer is a victory for Sir Ernest A. Gowers, who has made more or less of a career in the cause of public ownership of coal mines. He becomes chairman of the commission of five members in which ownership of the mines is vested. He is little known in British public life outside of coal issues.

Fly Is Paralysis Carrier

Discovery that common flies carry the virus of infantile paralysis has been made by Drs. John L. Paul and James D. Trask at Yale university medical school.

It is now evident that poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis), which cripples 10,000 persons and kills from 500 to 1,000 every year, is a disease of the intestinal tract as well as the spinal cord, and that flies may carry the virus from sewage.

The discovery of Drs. Paul and Trask makes the common house fly more than ever an enemy to health and even to life itself, especially among children.

MORAL ECHOES

By Rev. D. W. Haskew, D. D.

A young man came to my town and went into the grocery business. He was energetic, cautious and courteous. I watched this young man enlarge his store and increase his stock and after four year I said to him. "How is business?" With a smile he replied, "Not bad, I am putting all I made back into the buiness and you see what I have." That young man was a success, because he worked hard and put all that he made back into the member of the church? How well are business. How long have you been a you getting along with your religious life? This determined by the way you relate yourself to what you get out of the church. If you are putting back into the church all that your church produces for you, there is no question but that you will be a success as a child of God. Invest and grow.

A carefree youngster went away to college from my church. We had doubts about his future, but at college he had a christian vision, and at once he was a changed student. On his return home, his face carried a new light. For four years I saw that young man come and go. It was a delight to see him grow. He snapped out of his listless living and hitched his wagon to a star. On his graduation day, he was ready for big things. I have watched gardens grow. I have watched fowls and animals grow. I have watched the saplings grow to be great trees. The most delightful growth I have ever seen is when young men and women grow into the power of manhood and womanhood. In four years time a young life can grow into a thing of power and beauty. Young people, grow in the graces of real life.

About the year 1933 there was a youth movement in Germany, and a hundred thousand of these young men gathered to greet Hitler. Clad in their black shirts, they were formed into letters before the rising German leader, and the formation spelled out these words, "Hail Her Hitler. We are thine. Use us." Almost ten years have passed since that day when they gave themelves to this unscrupulous leader, and now he has them weltering in a sea of blood. If the youth of Germany had given themselves, in a like manner, to a christian leader, history would have had another story to relate. Youth of America, let me beg of you to form your life into an organization that will say. "Oh Christ, we are Thine, Use us." If the youth of all the world would today make this formation and stand behind Christ in consecration to do His will, then we would have an everlasting peace.

* * *

When Her Hitler was rising to power, he sought for leaders for his army. The young men of Germany were called to meet in a large auditorium and at a given signal, a terrific bomb exploded. The debris scattered everywhere and there was pandemonium. Hitler was using psychology, and in the midst of it all he was looking for men to take charge of his army. Out of that testing time came the dauntless, heartless leaders who are today facing the battlefronts of Europe. This test was made eight years ago, and we are not surprised to know what is taking place. Men of steel nerves and of heartless attitudes, are leading Germany today. God grant that in America we may have men to lead us who are dominated with Christian ideals. To be sure we have got to fight to save our gaces and to save our civilization, but we must not junk the attitude of Jesus towards his enemies.

* * *

A devout pastor sent his only son away to college, and in a few months word was brought back to the minister that his son was living a wild, shameless, sinful life. The father wired his boy to meet him at a certain hotween his home and the college. Father and son met, and the father removed his coat and opened his shirt. Then he took a long knife and handed it to his son saying; "Son, take this blade and plunge it deep into my heart." The boy knew what his father meant and fell upon the floor weeping. Then his father plead with his boy to give up his sinful life. The boy had learned his lesson and he turned unto his father's God and lived as he should. Oh how sin hurts the innocent. Many a youth is killing his parents by degrees.

Here's Where The Old Rubber Goes

There is nothing new about the process which wil convert the discarded overshoes and useless rubber hose, broken hot water bottles, worn-out galoshes, and other scrap rubber turned in during the Petroleum Industry Scrap Rubber Drive, into rubber products will tend to alleviate the rubber shortage and help win the war. For many years a number of "reclaiming plants" have been taking junk rubber and converting it into serviceable rubber; rubber, which met commercial standards of itself in a number of items and which, mixed with a certain percentage of new crude rubber, was in many respects the equivalent of crude rubber itself.

Most of the rubber ordinarily used by the reclaiming plants -- the capacity of U. S. reclaiming is roughly 320-000 long tons a year -- comes from old automobile tires. Old automobile tires were flowing in great quantity to the reclaiming plants in the days when no one worried about getting the last few thousand miles of wear out of their casings, and a large portion of the scrap collected during the rubber campaign is in the form of the casings which have blown out or casings with so little tread left that retreading is impossible.

Here is what will happen to the rubber you have contributed to the war effort: When enough of it — the dismal looking tires from your garage and the garages of your townsmen, the rubber boots and nipples, and galoshes, and mats and hose, even the rubber toys and the rubber balls, everything but the rubber plant in the hall has been collected to make shipment worthwhile, it will be loaded into a railway car, which eventually is shunted into a siding at a reclamation point.

Here the carload containing your scrap, along with the scrap from perhaps a thousand homes and farms and garages, is routed to the plant from other areas. This junk rubber is stacked in neat piles on either side of the tracts. Automobile tires are placed in great rectangles in one spot, and the garden hose, hot water bottles rubber sheets and mats, and other miscellaneous rubber articles, are placed in another.

Let us assume that among the rubber scrap which you contributed was a wornout tire. This tire, if it is to be reclaimed by the "alkali digestion process," the process most commonly used in the reclaimation of rubber, passes into the plant, and the bead, composed largely of a fabric and metal, is cut off by a "debeading" machine. Then the "scalped' tire is prepared for the "digestion' process by being cut and ground into small pieces by rapidly rotating knives and rollers, in the same way that food is prepared by the teeth for digestion.

After the scrap is ground into pieces, it is passed over magnetic separators, which remove a large percentage of the magnetic metals, such as iron and steel. Then the scrap rubber is ready to be "digested".

It is placed in steam-jacketed autoclaves equipped with devices which stir caustic soda and certain oils, which act as the "digestive juices," into a "moal" of from 2 to 4 tons of ground up tire scrap. At the same time high temperatures and pressure do their work. This takes from 8 to 24 hours. Bus and giant truck tires require longer times than passenger tires, because they are generally tougher.

Once digested, the scrap must be washed free of dirt and of the caustic soda which remains. It is then put through a squeezing press to take out as much water as possible and dried on bolt dryers operating in a temperature of from 200 to 275 degrees.

At this point, certain ingredients are added to give the reclaimed rubber such specific qualites as may be desired. Afterwards, it is rolled into a very fine sheet to eliminate any unsoftened pieces and strained to remove non-magnetic metals. Finally, it is wound on rotating drums, and ends up as a square slab. These slabs, after being dusted with powder to keep them from adhering to others, are ready for use in military or essential civilian manufacture.

The reclaiming of other rubber is similiar to the reclaiming of tire casings, except that the rubber is carefully sorted in advance, and there is no "debeading."

About 209,000 long tons of reclaimed rubber were produced in 1940, according to the Rubber Manufacurers' Association, most of which came from automobile and truck tires. As of October, 1941, the rubber industry was using about 4.5 pounds of reclaimed rubber for every ten pounds of new rubber. Old tires turned in for reclaiming purposes are doing much to keep military and essential civilian vehicles in use.

RUBBER PROFITEER CHARGES PUNCTURED,

Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones and Donald M. Nelson, War Prduction Board chairman, in vigrous statements spiked charges of rubber salvage profiteering.

Nelson wired Gov. Dixon, branding as "utterly unfounded statements" the charges made by Elliott E. Simpson, counsel for a House subcommittee in Washington, that fur companies acting as sorting agents for the Rubber Reserve Corp. were reaping huge profits. Secretary Jones explained that scrap rubber must be sorted before it is processed and announced the companies in questoin have several thousand men on the job.

SLOT MACHINES HIDEN FROM SALVAGE AGENTS

Since Governor Dixon's suggestion that the Alabama Salvage Committee work out a plan for salvaging slot mchines, the one-arm bandits have been hidden out in most counties. Many slot machine operators are moaning that the movement to turn their machines into scrap metal for American war use came just after they had paid the annual federal license fee of $50 per "roscoe."

This Is War!!

Germany's conquest of France in the summer of 1940 resulted in the birth of America's National Defense program. Soon railroad traffic began to boom as defense plants sprang into being and thousands upon thousands of soldiers and selectees began to move. Railroad facilities everywhere—locomotives, cars, additional tracks, connections for defense plants—were installed and operations were stepped up to new peaks. Then came Pearl Harbor and the War of Survival was on in earnest.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad has gladly played its part in the accelerated progress of this Defense and War effort.

In the past four years the Old Reliable has authorized or spent over $45,000,000 on additions and betterments to its properties and for new equipment. Outstandingly, 7,799 new freight cars have been purchased, as have 14 Diesel electric switch engines, eight Diesel electric passenger locomotives and 14 steam freight locomotives.

And now the L. & N. and its far-flung employes are intensifying their effort to give the best possible service for individual as well as military needs. They are behind Uncle Sam 100 per cent and their watchword is

RIGHT OF WAY FOR VICTORY

• • •

Railroading in time of war is quite different from railroading in time of peace. Military traffic has precedence. All of us have a big job to do and we're trying to do it in the safest, most efficient and most pleasant way possible. It is inevitable that our one-time normal routines must suffer. Some inconvenience and delay may at times be experienced on the Old Reliable, but we are sure that our patrons will understand and patiently bear with us, remembering that

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

Here is published a letter that we received this week from one of our Selectees and is well worth publishing. We are not printing the name as we haven't Mr. Burke Allison's permission, who wrote the letter. We can say however that it is one of the most interesting that we have received to date. P. S. If we can get his permission we will publish his name next week.

Dear Ben,

Have been contemplating writing you for sometime giving you a slant on the army as found at Camp Wheeler. I get your paper relayed to me, sometimes a week or two late, but we in the army know nothing of dates anyway. Was glad to hear of Julian Evans through your column as I had not heard from him since we were inducted May 16, 1942.

As for army life at Camp Wheeler it's mostly a routine as follows; we leisurely lay in our bunks in the morning until 5:30 E. W. T., then we take our time with our dressing, that is if our time conforms with the regulation of dressing and turning our mattress, and making our bunk, washing our face by 5:40, we then grope our way to Reveille, then we take our time to breakfast-that is if the line forms ahead of us. After breakfast all we have to do until 6:45 is scrub floors, pick up cigarette butts, for 150 feet of barracks, scrub toilets, shine the brass fire extinguishers, see that everything is clean (emphasized) then we have nothing to do until the named time of 6:45 at which time we line up and to keep from getting cold until the sun gets things warmed up (it's seldom over 90 degrees until after 9:00 o'clock) we fall in platoon formation and do left faces, about faces (like some of our political friends after they are elected) right faces, and a few ugly faces when officers are not looking, then hand salute, rifle salute, count cadence, open ranks, close ranks, count off and stack arms. By then we have gotten sufficiently warm to start our hike or march to the mountains. We have our light pack which aren't to be confused with heavy packs, which have a couple blankets. Also combat equipment this as a unit composes the following: pack, tent, half mess kit, tent poles and stakes, a pick or spade, canteen, first aid kit, raincoat and gas mask. Then for combat we have the rifle and bayonet which only weigh ten pounds. With this ballast we march on. Pretty soon a jeep with the Medical Corps Dr. passes, then we see the ambulance every once in a while, of course they don't do anything worse than Guard House duty to anyone who falls out! After 4 hours with 3, 10 minute rest stops we have squandered, the ham wagon comes along and to warm us up they keep the food good and hot, plenty potatoes, stew meat which is pretty sloppy. I guess that is because of late they are drafting a lot with bad teeth and the order says they must be able to eat army food. Sometimes we get a little of something sweet for desert and the K. P.'s have an uncanny way of dropping it into the deepest portion of stew, but its like they tell you, it will be mixed anyway and in the army they don't believe in putting off anything that can be done now. And mixing the desert with the stew can be done instantly with a simple twist of the spoon. After lunch we hang around amid the ants, and Georgia has more ants than peaches, poison ivy, cactus and nettles and enjoy the glorious Georgia sunshine till one o clock then we reverse our course and come in.

When we arrive back at the camp we are cautioned about staying out till after 12 which is a serious offense, told to clean our rifles, then get ready for retreat. Well we fall out for retreat at 5:45 with shoes shined and dressed and spend 15 minutes drilling as we did in the morning just to keep our muscles flexible, then at six, we get a good hot supper to warm us up. After supper the Sarg informs us of a lot of stuff that the commanding officers said we had to know by morning or else, since most of us have found out what else means we decide we want to go to town after all. So we just lounge around the barracks. We don't want to go to bed to early as we may get tired of bed and get up to soon and wake some one who wants and children a few days this week. cludes the day in the army. Just in case you would like to know what the life in the army is.

From all reports Clanton is sending her share to the army. Guess "Buck" will be going before long as he was looking for it while I was there. We have lots of married men here who were drafted. In most instances their wives were self supporting and selectee's were reclassified from 3-A to 1-A.

The army could be a lot worse and is nothing for a fellow to dread and for the overweights it will certainly trim your waistline. When they issued my uniform I told them it was too tight, but they informed me I would be altered to fit it, which has already become an actuality. I really think Red Wagner and Chick Fiquette could benefit from being in the army. They don't do it by dieting either, won't say much about the exercise though.

I have only about one more week here as now scheduled as I have been assigned to non-combat duty and they altered my basic training in Infantry from 13 weeks to 7 or 8, guess they gave up making a soldier out of me.

I always enjoy reading your columns and am missing all the good people back in Clanton.

With regards to everybody back home I am,

Readers must not digest what they are reading these days. Last week we made an awful mistake when we stated that the telegram we received at 1:30 was sent from Los Angels at the same time. Only one reader called our hand on it, and that was Prof. Patterson Hicks. He says he caught it the minute he read it. After all, the sun does rise in the East and sets in the West you know.

They've had selectees, draftees and all the "ees," but now we have an arrestee. For the first time since Selective Service the Local Board has had to arrest a registrant. One James Henry Hawkins, a colored citizen has been playing tag with Miss Virginia Ware for the past year. James Henry was transferred from Montevallo to Local Board No. 1 for his physical. When the time came for the examination he was in Montevallo or somewhere else, Miss Ware couldn t locate him. Then he would appear in Montevallo and they would again send him here. Usually, according to reports, it took him about two months to get here. The last time Virginia caught him he begged off and promised if they wouldn't arrest him that he would report for examination on the day specified. He didn't show up. Whle going home Monday night Virginia saw him standing in front of Bell Hardware and called to him. Nigger like, he grabbed his hat and started to leave those parts when she told him that if he ran she would call Mr. Bell and some other men standing there he stopped. Well, the highway officer couldn't be located at that time and he was escorted to the County jail by none other than Miss Virginia. Tues. the Patrolman took him to Montevallo where they turned him over to the Local Board there. He will remain in jail until the next crowd is sent to Induction Center where we bet he don't leave for awhile anyway.

Through an error at the Local Board (goody not here) Mr. Charles Edward Mims name was left off the list published last week of boys who left earlier in the month for induction in the U. S. Army. So here we go. We apologize for them and for us.

Marvin Durbin, who is the boss up at the FSA office called us out the other morning to see some peaches that he had gathered out at Willie Hamilton's on Route 4. We have seen beautiful peaches and then we have seen beautiful peaches, but this was the kind that put in half-bushel baskets, and believe me, it took just 30 peaches to fill the basket. Georgia peaches either variety can't top Clanton's and Chilton County's.

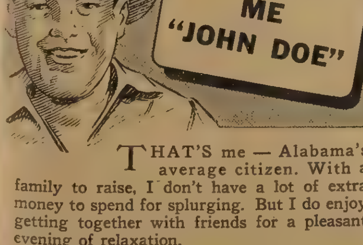
The national increase of profits on armaments is $13,000,000,000. That is more money than Adam would have if he had received $4 per minute since he was created until now. And of course saved every penny of it. In case you don t believe it, count it up.

And while we'er fact finding look this over. "Under man's touch coal becomes comfort in the home or death at the battle front; yields corrosive acid that smells like a bad egg, but is as harmless as a chicken; is transformed into colors that make the rainbow envious of their brightness and variety, and into explosives that make the thunderbolt jealous of their power."



THEY CALL ME "JOHN DOE"

THAT'S me — Alabama's average citizen. With a family to raise, I don't have a lot of extra money to spend for splurging. But I do enjoy getting together with friends for a pleasant evening of relaxation.

My family and friends like to drink beer in clean, law-abiding places. That's why we're strong for the "Clean Up or Close Up" program that the Brewers and Alabama Beer Distributors Committee carry on in our community. I know they'll keep up the good work.

Nazi Steamroller Pushes Soviets Back In Struggle for Control of Caucasus; Government Wheat Sells for 83 Cents; Wage Pattern Set by Ruling on Steel

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Coast Guardsman Jack Cullen, 21-year-old hero who confronted the Nazi saboteurs who landed on American soil from a submarine, is shown as he was congratulated by Vice Admiral Russel R. Waesche, commandant of the U. S. coast guard, for his devotion to duty and outstanding performance that led to the capture and trial of the spy ring. Cullen was advanced from seaman to coxswain in recognition of his service.

RUSSIA:

Nazi Steamroller

Adolf Hitler had demonstrated that the long delay before he launched his monster offensive against the Soviet Union had not been wasted and that despite terrific losses his tank forces had lost none of their striking power.

For the mighty thrusts which started originally in the Kursk and Kharkov areas had steadily gained in weight and momentum, forcing their way through the Don basin. The attack developed three spearheads aimed to split the armies of Marshal Timoshenko in the Ukraine and those of Marshal Zhukov in the Moscow area. The northern objective was Voronezh on the Moscow-Rostov railway; the central thrust was aimed at Kuibyshev; and the southern had Stalingrad as its goal.

Moscow made no effort to minimize the danger of a broad breakthrough. For once holding a line from Rostov to Stalingrad, the Nazis would be in position to swing southward to Astrakhan on the Caspian sea and into the Caucasus itself, where waited their supreme prize—the fabulous oil pools of Tiflis and Baku. Moreover, such a move would pave the way for a junction by Nazi Marshal Von Bock with the armies of Japan poised on the borders of India far to the east and those of Field Marshal Rommel, on the shores of the Mediterranean.

EGYPT:

Collision of Tanks

Air-borne from Crete came Rommel's long-awaited reinforcements. Tough and battle-seasoned were they and expert at storming defenses such as the British were manning against them in Egypt's crucial El Alamein sector.

Tricky Marshal Rommel employed a battle device that had won for him on many a previous occasion—that of beginning his attack at dusk when the sun was in his opponents' eyes.

Bringing up heavy tank reinforcements, both sides battered each other in battles on which the fate of Alexandria and Suez depended.

The Nazis' immediate goal was a desert coastal ridge five miles west of El Alamein which the British had won from him days before. In the fiercely contested struggle, the RAF was actively engaged, with fighter bombers and light bombers scoring many direct hits on tanks and ranging far to the rear to harass Rommel's thinned-out supply and communication lines.

DRAFT:

'War Effort'

"Contributing to the war effort" will be an important factor in determining the draft status of married as well as single men.

In defining what constitutes "contributing to the war effort," selective service headquarters outlined 34 different types of jobs which would place a man in that category and thus delay his induction. Draft officials emphasized that the supply of single men of all classes would have to be exhausted first.

Trends were clarified in the revised policies announced by Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of selective service. While reiterating that "bona fide family relationships will be protected as long as possible," General Hershey instructed local draft boards that when the time comes for calling men with dependents to service, those who are not contributing to the war effort should be called first. Last class to be inducted would be married men with children who are contributing to the war effort.

WAGES:

Raise for Steelmen

In a decision regarded as a yardstick for future wage disputes, the War Labor board laid down the principle that workers were entitled to a 15 per cent increase, based on higher living costs between January, 1941, and May, 1942.

The ruling was made when the board approved a daily wage increase of 44 cents for workers employed by the so-called "Little Steel" companies: Bethlehem, Republic, Inland and Youngstown Sheet and Tube. Directly affected were 157,000 men. Indirectly the decision was expected to affect more than a million workers, including 600,000 throughout the steel industry generally and 400,000 automobile plant workers.

The CIO United Steel Workers originally had asked for a $1 a day increase. The WLB voted the compromise wage increase 8 to 4, the labor members dissenting.

SURPLUS WHEAT:

To Sell at 83c

News bulletins had carried the bare announcement that the house of representatives had concurred with a senate proposal to convert government owned surplus wheat into United Nations war needs by feeding it to livestock to produce meat, milk and eggs.

But back of that announcement was the story of the breakup of a six-months' legislative log-jam, a victory for the administration's anti-inflation program and acknowledgement by the farm bloc that it must accept less than a parity rate for the sale of this grain.

Twice before the house had voted to bar the sale of surplus wheat unless it was made at the full parity price of $1.35 a bushel. Now it agreed to go along with the senate and allow the sale of 125,000,000 bushels of government-owned wheat at 85 per cent of the parity price of corn—or about 83 cents a bushel—for feeding cattle and hogs. The house also agreed that any amount of government-owned grain might be sold below parity prices for the manufacture of alcohol for rubber or munitions.

MIDWAY SAGA:

Better Than Expected

When a naval communique released the first official detailed account of the Battle of Midway, the steadily growing conviction that the United States had won a victory of major importance was confirmed.

The communique revealed for the first time that Japan had sent an armada of 80 ships to assault Midway as a prelude to the conquest of Hawaii.

Final score of the battle was 20 Jap ships sunk or damaged, including four aircraft carriers sunk and three battleships hit; 275 planes destroyed, and 4,300 men killed or drowned. American losses included the destroyer Hammann sunk, the aircraft carrier Yorktown put out of action and 307 officers and enlisted men lost.

SUBMARINES:

Menace Grows

Official acknowledgement that something drastic must be done to counteract the Axis unrelenting submarine attacks on United Nations shipping was seen in Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox's announcement that a convoy system had been set up in the Caribbean area and would be established in the Gulf of Mexico.

Coastwise convoys, however, would have to get along without the help of destroyers, it was indicated.

CHINA FRONT:

Doolittle Sequel

Ever since the attack on Tokyo by Brig. Gen. James H. Doolittle and his squadron of American bombers, Japanese objectives in China have been the seizure of areas from which United States bombers might strike again.

Thus when Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's battered armies acknowledged the loss of Wenchow and Juian, seaports in southern Chekiang province, after steady withdrawals from strategic points in the Kiangsi-Fukien-Chekiang area, another air threat to Tokyo had been removed.

Bravely, however, a Chinese official spokesman pledged that with increasing air support from the United States, the Chinese army would intensify its counterattacks and would immobilize more Japanese troops in China than ever before.

Elaborating on China's view of the war and her role of tying up large numbers of Japanese, the spokesman said both Germany and Japan were "now making desperate bids, as they must score certain successes this summer in order to sustain a long war against the United Nations."

'FIGHTING FRENCH':

U. S. Encourages

More effective co-operation between the followers of Gen. Charles De Gaulle and the governments of the United Nations was forecast as a result of several steps which coincided with the celebration of Bastille day.

First of all, the De Gaullist movement acquired a new name—"Fighting France" instead of "Free France." At the same time the French National committee became an administrative central body.

To symbolize the new relationship the United States announced the appointment of Admiral Harold R. Stark, commander of U. S. naval forces in Europe, and Brig. Gen. Charles L. Bolte, chief of staff of the army's European headquarters, as military representatives to General De Gaulle's headquarters in London.

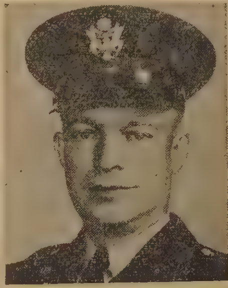
This step did not affect United States relations with Vichy, already badly strained by Pierre Laval's refusal to accede to President Roosevelt's request that French naval vessels interned at Alexandria, Egypt, be removed from the danger of Axis capture.

SECOND FRONT:

Dress Rehearsal?

From London came two significant reports indicating that plans for the long-heralded Anglo-American second front in Europe were going steadily forward. Just when such a front would be possible, however, no military observer would hazard a guess.

Described as a "prelude to what may be major military operations on the European coast," powerful American and Canadian forces plus units of the Royal navy and marines carried on the greatest raid and invasion maneuvers ever held in European waters.



GEN. DWIGHT EISENHOWER .

At the same time, Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander-in-chief of American forces in the European theater, continued methodically the job of setting up the organization that will carry on the offensive. Giving attention to land, air and supply forces, he announced that Maj. Gen. M. W. Clark would command all ground forces, Maj. Gen. Carl Spaatz would command air forces and Maj. Gen. J. C. H. Lee would be responsible for supplies.

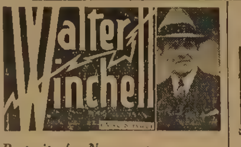
OPA:

'Politics Out'

Price Administrator Leon Henderson has won many an enemy among professional politicians for his blunt disregard of partisan tactics. Hence his latest warning to OPA employees that any political activity would result in instant dismissal, was not calculated to gain him any new friends among the politicos. But observers believed it would step up the OPA's efficiency.

"No one in the OPA organization is going to be permitted to play politics with the war effort," Mr. Henderson said, in an administrative order reminding workers of their status under the Hatch act.

"I have said from the beginning that OPA is going to be run on nonpartisan lines. I do not want anyone to have the slightest doubt about the consequences that will result from failing to comply with the law. As I have said in the past, if the Hatch act doesn't get them, the Henderson axe will."



Portrait of a Newspaper Reader Mumbling to Himself:

Get the editorial writers sore and they perform at their sockiest. They hit glory on their pieces on the Nazi inhumanities at Lidice. Now they show their teeth again, hooraying Pres. Roosevelt for naming a military board to try the eight Nazi saboteurs . . . Hitler will let out his customary howl about our uncivilized methods, but how can he expect us to hear him? He lost his right to squawk at Lidice . . . Anyway, what did his chumps hope for in case they got caught with trunks full of explosives and bribe money? A scolding?

Another thing—how did the Reich act when a bomb went off under a Munich rostrum a few minutes after Hitler minced off it? The Gestapo lured two Britishers over the border to pin it on them. No crime was ever proved against the prisoners. They were just executed to give Hitler a cue for another tantrum . . . Most of our senators and congressmen in Washington are honest men. Good Americans, reliable citizens. The few legislators who are busy calling their critics smear artists have good cause to worry . . . Election isn't far off, and their critics are giving them insomnia . . . These worried congressmen call their exposers—Communists . . . Hmf! . . . Their most persistent critics are Raymond Clapper, Time magazine, the conservative N. Y. Times and the arch Republican N. Y. Herald Tribune. And 95 per cent of the newspapers in America . . . What some congressmen call Communistic propaganda is actually their voting records and speeches from the Cong. Record.

Once a ball player gets into the big sugar he gets unpopular in the press boxes. Ruth used to take rides when he bickered for a heavier wage. DiMaggio was assailed also for trying to do better. The latest patsy is the Red Sox star, Ted Williams . . . He got fed up with the hoots of the bleacherites and let them know it. For just losing his temper he was practically outlawed . . . Why shouldn't he blow up? Others do, and nobody considers them criminals . . . Actors in night clubs carry on steady warfare with the crude ad libbers, but they get cheers when they fight back . . . Maybe baseball wouldn't be such a dull business if they let a few more tempers loose. There are too many coppers running the game . . . Football coaches get all heated up, telling their players to go out and fight. In baseball, apparently, the athletes are instructed to go out there and remember the customer is always right. Not over at this desk!

Hollywoodites are going into the army and navy just like other Americans. Remember all the blah-blah in congress when it was said the actors would rate deferment? . . . Movietown was recently criticized for making films about the war. Now Variety complains because they don't make enough war films. Ho, humph! . . . The dimout doesn't mean much to New Yorkers, but it robs the visitors of the thrill of seeing the Incandescent Belt at its gaudiest . . . The White Way was Broadway's trademark, and the first peep at it always left the looker gasping . . . Best comment of all on the sight was offered by G. K. Chesterton, as A. Woollcott once reported. Chesterton stared and marveled, then said: "What a thrill this must be for anybody who can't read!"

Man About Town:

This is the way Harry Hopkins proposed to lovely Louise Macy . . . The night before Mr. Churchill returned to London Louise went to the home of Mrs. Averell Harriman to dress for dinner, where Mr. Hopkins called for her . . . As they were having a cocktail (prior to leaving for the White House) Mr. H. (a shy sortuvachap) asked Miss Macy to marry him in this manner: "I was just talking to the President and I asked him whether he thought you would say 'yes'—if I asked you to marry me—and the President said he thought you would" . . . Her answer belongs in the history books . . . "As usual," she said, "the President is right."

New Yorkers Are Talking About: Fred Allen's high blood pressure, which sent him hurrying to Mayo Brothers at Rochester, Minn. . . . Lindbergh's definite threat to announce his candidacy for office soon via the page ones.

The Magic Lanterns: "United We Stand" is a stiff reminder to all of us that Hitler thrives on our disunity. It chronicles events from the Treaty of Versailles until Pearl Harbor, highlighting the Axis "divide and conquer" technique . . . "Eagle Squadron" shows Yanks in the RAF, with the blitz and the British reprisals contributing a powerful Sunday punch. Diana Barrymore, Eddie Albert, Robert Stack and others show up handsomely, but the fattest role is played by the high explosives.

ALEUTIANS IMPORTANT

Behind the army-navy attempts to blast the Japs out of the Aleutian islands is more than natural antipathy to having an enemy on American soil or the fear of an invasion of Alaska.

These are important. But, in addition, events in Egypt may mean that more than ever we shall have to use these vital stepping stones of the Aleutian islands to carry the war to the heart of Japan.

To get the full significance of the picture it is necessary to recall that ever since Pearl Harbor there has been an honest difference of opinion among U. S. war strategists as to whether we should concentrate on fighting Japan in the Pacific or Hitler in Europe.

At one time, shortly after Pearl Harbor, high-up U. S. naval advisers worked out an elaborate war plan, which is no longer a secret, for concentrating almost all our naval strength in the Pacific and making a direct attack on the Japanese islands—at a time when the Japs had their lines dispersed to Manila, Singapore and the South Seas.

But the plan meant leaving the Atlantic coast relatively unguarded, also virtually abandoning convoys to Britain and Russia. In the end it was decided that the Russian front was all-important and must be supplied at all costs. The wisdom of this decision seems to have been borne out by subsequent events.

Japs Worried.

However, those who urge the all-out war in Asia have persisted, and their argument has been strengthened by recent developments. One is the fact that the Japs, obviously scared at the prospect of a second front in Asia, are fighting feverishly to clean out the Chinese before China gets important help from us. Fear of a second front in Asia also was why the Japs nipped part of the Aleutian islands.

Main development, however, was the defeat at Tobruk and the serious Nazi threat to the entire Near East; for if the Near East falls, with its vital supply route opened by American railroad engineers from the Gulf of Persia to the Caucasus, then it may be absolutely imperative to open new supply lines to Russia via Alaska and Siberia.

And, even more important, the entire focus of the war, so far as the United States is concerned, may turn to the Far East; for, if Hitler secures the oil of Iran, Iraq and Mosul, it may be the wisest strategy to knock Japan out of the war first—because the Nazis will have the resources to continue for a long time.

WHAT IS AN EXPERT?

When Federal Communications Chairman Lawrence Fly appeared before the house interstate commerce commission recently, he was asked by Representative Clarence Brown of Ohio:

"What is your definition of an expert?"

"Well," replied Fly, "I once heard an expert described as any damned fool away from home."

"Do you pick your experts at the FCC on that basis?" inquired Congressman Brown.

"No," said Fly. "We generally take them from the industry, where they have proven their worth."

"I am asking these questions because of a peculiar experience I had recently," explained the Ohio congressman, and went on to tell how a congressional committee had referred him to an expert on accounting, "a young man who graduated from college in 1939 and was still a trifle wet behind the ears."

A short time later, Brown continued, he called at the War Production board on another matter and was referred to an "agricultural expert." Lo and behold, the expert proved to be the same young man.

"Following this, I again called at the WPB on a matter pertaining to metal," said Brown. "This time I was referred to an expert on copper and, believe it or not, Mr. Fly, it was the same agent."

"And," Brown warned the chairman of the Federal Communications commission, "if I ever come down to your commission and find this chap, you and I are going to tangle."

GIVE an old wicker chair a smart cover of gay chintz and it will be ready to start a new life. The chintz for this chair has a quaint pattern of strawberries with green leaves and the skirt with its trim box pleated corners is plain green. The cover is removable with a zipper opening down the center back and long stitches with heavy thread through the cover and the wicker are used here and there to hold it neatly in place.

CUT 3/4 LARGER THAN COTTON
THE REST OF CHAIR COVER IS WITHOUT PADDING

The padding for the inside of the back lends both style and comfort. The cotton batting is fitted and cut on the chair. It is then used for a pattern to cut a slightly larger muslin foundation and the chintz, as shown at the upper left. These three layers are then basted and stitched together to make the puffed ridges for this part of the cover. Plain seams are used to stitch the pieces of the cover together.

GREER GARSON claims that Loretta Toomey is the good luck stand-in of Hollywood. Miss Toomey was stand-in for Sonja Henie, Ellen Drew and Joan Davis before going to Metro to be stand-in for Hedy Lamarr and Ruth Hussey. All of them did all right, you'll remember. Three years ago she became Miss Garson's stand-in—and how that young woman has forged ahead! Now Miss Garson has lent her for a second time (the first was when Theresa Wright got her for some scenes in "Mrs. Miniver") to Susan Peters, for scenes when Miss Garson doesn't need her in "Random Harvest"; they're rivals for Ronald Colman's affections, in the picture, but never meet.

Incidentally, some exhibitors thought so highly of "Mrs. Miniver" that they advocated showing it at advanced prices. But the suggestion was turned down, on the theory that this swell picture really belongs to the people, and that the greatest number should see it in the shortest possible time. Nicholas Mc Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., Metro distributors, is responsible.

Jean Hersholt, the kindly "Dr. Christian" of the CBS Wednesday night series, has completed the first of his two albums of children's tales recordings. This is the first step in a plan that he has had for many years, to bring worthy translations of Hans Christian Anderson's Danish fairy tales to the American public.

Barbara Moffett, 18 year old equestrienne, breaks into pictures playing the feminine lead opposite Tim Holt in RKO's "Red River Robin Hood." She was discovered while doing trick riding, roping and shooting as the star of a rodeo troupe. So this won't be the ordinary Western, since the heroine will be given a chance to do her stuff, instead of just looking pretty.

Joe Pasternak, who produced Deanna Durbin's films for so long, has discovered a new singing star, Mary Croft. He gave her a role in his first Metro picture, "Tulip Time," then sent her to New York for a year's study before making more pictures. So when you see the picture, look for her—you may have the satisfaction of seeing a future star's first performance.

Warner Brothers bought screen rights to "The Miracle," the religious spectacle play, some years ago as a vehicle for Bette Davis. After several script writers had tried their hands at adapting it it was shelved. Now we hear that it may be screened.

Vox Pop begins its third year of programs from military, naval and armament establishments along with its eighth of network broadcasting. It was the first radio program to adapt and contribute its facilities to national defense, the first to present the voices of selectees in training, the first and only one to undertake a Good-Neighbor Latin America tour.

Randolph Scott, Glenn Ford, Evelyn Keyes and other members of the cast got a real western reception when they arrived in Utah for "Desperadoes." Local cowhands held up the train and "kidnaped" the stars. Miss Keyes is the first Hollywood actress to make a hobby of collecting military insignia representing armed forces of all the United Nations—has more than 300 insignia buttons.

ODDS AND ENDS—As a parting gift when she left New York for a vacation, Kate Smith's sponsor presented her with a three-year contract renewal . . . Walter Reed, young leading man discovered recently by RKO, has been assigned an important role with Pat O'Brien, Randolph Scott and Anne Shirley in "Bombardier" . . . "Mrs. Miniver" started a "Mrs." cycle —Metro is making "The War and Mrs. Hadley," and has bought "Mrs. Parkington" for Greer Garson . . . Carol Anne Beery, Wally's daughter, gave him a silver mounted bridle for his favorite horse. He had to leave soon after for Hollywood and "Salute to the Marines."

WHAT are the toughest, hardest running distances for man and for horse? We shoved this debate along to a number of well-known trainers who handle both the human and the equine breed.

Grantland Rice

"Years ago, many years ago," an old-time track coach told us, "we figured it was the quarter mile, which was all sprint. Then we moved it up to the half, which now is all sprint. But in the last few years we've decided that the mile is the hardest test on the human system. It was different when they were running the mile around 4:18 or 4:20. But when you turn in a mile at 4:10 or better, you are giving out all the system has to offer.

"It is possible to run a mile around four minutes flat. But we won't see that for some time. Such miles as Glenn Cunningham ran were largely sprints. They were terrific. I should say that a fast 4:10 or better mile today is the toughest race on the track."

Same for Horse

"This distance goes for a horse, too," John Partridge, the veteran, said. "The mile is the hardest race. I mean a fast mile.

"You hear people talking about the strain of a mile and a half or even two miles. They forget that in these longer distances there is a lot of half loafing. Steeplechasers can go two miles or longer, carrying 150 pounds, taking the jumps, without being worn down. But when a horse runs a mile around 1:36 he is going all out. He can't be saving anything."

This recalls Johnstown's speed and what it did to him. Johnstown in more than one workout beat 1:34. No other horse ever ran that fast.

"You hear a lot," an observing old-timer said, "about the fighters and the ball players and the football players and other competitors from years ago outranking present stars. Don't believe it. Everything is getting better. And I can prove it."

"Just how?" I asked.

"Because everything that can be measured or timed shows a sure and steady improvement over old records. New records are being set in every sport from year to year. Can't you remember when 13 feet was a record pole vault? Warmerdam will make it 16 feet before long. They are now close to seven feet in the high jump. You'll see 9.1 seconds in the 100 soon. Look at all the old swimming records. Look at practically every competition you can time or measure."

Going On

"They talk about the great pitchers of the past," he continued. "We know they were good. But suppose Bob Grove or Bob Feller had been allowed to work with a dead, half-black, or fuzzy ball? Or Dizzy Dean? You'd have seen 20 strikeouts more than once. And you'd have seen more than a few no-hit games.

Bob Grove

"Can't you remember when around 295 was almost sure to win a National Open? Today they are shooting at 280. Or at least 285. I know the clubs and the balls are better and the courses are better, but the main point is that year by year they are setting new marks for a target.

"It's the pressure of competition that is forcing a faster pace.

"Certain critics are always talking about the millions who sit and watch the few play," the old-timer went on. "I wonder if they know how many millions are also playing games? Football and basketball are two of our fastest games. If you take the high schools and the colleges and the clubs, there are more than a million or two taking active part in these sports.

"It is only natural that anyone who plays a game, whatever the game, is interested in seeing stars at play in his favorite sport. But that doesn't mean that all those who sit in stands or sit and watch don't also play when they get the chance.

"Notre Dame, to many, is a university with 40 crack football players. Do they know that in one form or another Notre Dame has from 500 to 1,000 football students?"

About Jock Hutchison

Chicago has had another brilliant and colorful golfer in Jock Hutchison. Jock won the British Open, but he was never quite able to land on top in the U. S. major show.

In the old days they had to qualify in the National Open at 36 holes, and then move the next day into the tournament proper. Using his first 72 holes of play, under this order, Jock would have run away with several championships.

JUST KIDDING

Synthetic Golf

"Has the rubber shortage affected your golf game?"

"Yes, but for the better. I play it now without losing a ball, and I can walk around the 18 holes without losing my temper."

Old Ezra says temperament is just a fancy name for plain cussedness.

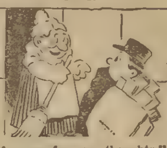
And How He Did!

"A burglar broke into our home last night."

"Did he get anything?"

"Yes; my wife thought it was me coming home late."

COLLECTING



"A penny for your thoughts."

"What do you mean?"

"There's a cent due on this returned letter."

'Twas Ever Thus

"The price of everything has gone up since the war began."

"No, talk is just as cheap as ever."

He Pushes It

The taxi was a very ancient one and had taken a long time to reach its destination.

As the passenger paid his fare he remarked:

"How do you manage when your fare is in a desperate hurry?"

"Ah," said the driver, confidentially, "I keeps on changin' me gears and honkin' me hooter."

Admirals may be admirable, but that isn't where the word comes from. It comes from an old Arabic word "amir-al" meaning "commander of." That's what the Admiral is, the top-ranking officer in the Navy. Top-ranking cigarette with our Navy men is Camel—the favorite, too, with men in the Army, Marines and Coast Guard, according to actual sales records from their service stores. Camels are their favorite gift, too. Local dealers are featuring Camel cartons to send anywhere to any member of our armed forces. Today is a good time to send "him" a carton of Camels.—Adv.

When Your Back Hurts—
And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par
It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

War Stamp Law To Be Enforced

Under the present law, covering ales of stamps to be used on cars, at 5.00 per annum, postmasters are required to turn back to the Government at the end of each month all unsold stamps available for the month closed, and keep on hand for sale stamps covering the remaining part of the year.

A car owner, for example who has not bought his stamp by July 1st, can buy a stamp for a whole year, including July, only at the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue, Birmingham, Alabama.

As a friendly notice to the public, that part of the public who may own cars and who may not as yet have bought use stamps for the current year, I have decided to assign all zone deputy collectors, thirty-five in number, during a part of the first half of August, to devote their entire time to [illegible] cars which do not bear these [illegible] The owners will be dealt with [illegible] to law. The penalty will be [illegible] together with cost of the stamp.

This will apply to every car that is found in the state of Alabama not bearing the stamp, when this state wide campaign begins, early in August. Every county, city and hamlet will be visited; and the violators of this federal law will have to meet whatever penalties are provided.

This is a friendly warning, and I hope it will prevent many car owners serious embarrassment.

THE FLOWERBED

This poem was written by Mrs. Walter W. Broadhead, mother of J. C Broadhead who was killed at Pear' Harbor Dec. 7, 1941.

In my bed of flowers
There are three blossoms fair
The objects of their parents love
The subject of their prayer.

These flowers grew and blossomed
Until one day last fall
In answer to his country's call

He sailed across the ocean wide
To fair Hawaii's golden shore
And there he for his country died.
I'll never see him anymore.

My heart is aching for my son
Who was my pride and joy,
This handsome lad so proud and strong.
My darling baby boy.

The Japanese have taken a life
That was very dear to me
And tho this truth is hard to bear
He lies withering in the sea.

For I am one who gave a son
But don't waste your pity on me
Your sympathy is welcomed
For blessed liberty!

CORINTH HAS OLD FASHION REVIVAL

The revival at Corinth is one of the real old fashioned kind. The Rev. Clark Burkhalter is doing the preaching and needless to say, he is bringing some powerful messages. Bro. Burkhalter is one of the coming young preachers of Chilton county, and we are glad to have him with us this week.

Someone said that the revival started off in the best way in many years at Corinth. Two fine girls from Pell City were beautifully converted while visiting friends and relatives here. They are: Miss Pauline Thomas and Miss Fay Rich. The latter was converted out in the church yard after the benediction Tuesday evening. Both of them said they were going to return home for baptism in the Baptist church in their home town. We are writing the pastor immediately in their behalf, and praying God's blessings upon them.

The services will go through Friday night. We are looking for you to come. Don't fail us. This means one and all.

Peach Crop Brings Nearly $5,500 Here

Figures given out early this week by Chilton County Peach Growers Association show that there have been shipped through the association a total of 2,491 bushels of peaches bring the growers $5,419.95. It is pointed out however, by officials of the association that many of the larger growers of the county marketed their peaches outside of the association. That being all brought into consideration, there must have been twice as many peaches as went through the association.

The association has done a splendid job of looking after the situation and should be highly complimented for it's work.

Rubber Moving Out Of State At Rate Of 4 Carloads Daily

What is being done about all that rubber which citizens of Chilton County still see in many sections, still waiting to be collected

That question was answered today in a statement by Earle M. Hearne, special secretary for the Alabama Petroleum War Council, whose office in Montgomery is handling all scrap rubber shipping instructions.

"We already have issued shipping instructions on about 60 carloads and some 15 or 20 carloads in addition previously have been shipped by oil companies on orders from the Rubber Reserve Corp., the government agency handling rubber reclamation," Mr. Hearne said. "Because of wartime congestion on the railroads, Alabama is permitted to ship only four carloads of scrap rubber per day, but this is mounting up.

"All the scrap rubber collected by the oil industry in Alabama is being shipped direct to and being received by the Rubber Reserve Corp. or such reclaiming plants as they designate. All citizens may rest assured that their rubber donations will reach only Uncle Sam's hands.

"The government, which is buying the rubber, knows how much the oil industry sells to it at $25 per ton, and each company must account to the government and turn over to the USO Army and Navy Relief and the Red Cross $5 per ton, the difference between the one cent per pound paid for it and the $25 per ton the government pays for it. The full $25 per ton will go to those organizations for all rubber donated free.

"The oil industry made a specific agreement with the President to colcharge, even thougt the drive has, and lect and handle the rubber free of still is, costing every oil company, every commission agent and every service station operator an immense amount of money. The oil industry has done this solely as a patriotic matter. They have done a swell job and the public has responded beautifully and patriotically, as have the many participating organizations, the press and the radio.

"Alabama citizens have done a big job and have every right to know what disposition is being made of their rubber.'

Uncle Sam Wants Your Typewriter

Colonel James P. Barnes, Alabama chief of the War Production Board, today appealed to Alabama citizens to sell to the Government every typewriter they can possibly spare.

"Uncle Sam needs 600,000 used typewriters." Colonel Barnes stated. "He needs them because the typewriter industry is now making guns, and because such new typewriters as are on hand must be sent to sea and to the fighting fronts.

"The Government will buy standard typewriters, if they were manufactured in 1935 or later, and the Government will pay you a premium price. Here's the way it works:

"If you've an extra standard typewriter or typewriters of a model not earlier than January 1, 1935, get in touch with the nearest typewriter dealer whose store has been designated an official U. S. Typewriter Purchase Depot, authorized to act as buying agents for the Procurement Division of the U. S. Treasury.

"The price you will be paid for your machine will be the factory trade-in allowance for a typewriter of its model as of February 1, 1941.

"The dealer will clean or recondition the typewriters he receives and will ship them to supply depots of the Army, Navy or Government war agencies."

Normal needs of the Navy alone include 59 typewriters for each battleship; 55 for each aircraft carrier, 30 for each cruiser, and for each destroyer, 7. A ship cannot risk having its orders misunderstood because of illegible handwriting.

SEGREGATION FAVORED BY WHITE AND COLORED RACES SAYS GOV. DIXON

Governor Dixon in vigorous language told the War Production Board he would not sign a contract containing a clause which would be "used as a pretext to bring about the color lines in the South." Assailing efforts of Washington social reformers "to force negroes and white people to work together, intermingle and even bring about the situation where white employees will have to work under negroes."

"Those of us who have long been friends of the negro race regard the present attempt to abolish the segregation of the races as disastrous,' the governor said.

Decrying the machinations of "those who seek to foster their own pet social reforms in a time of national crises Governor Dixon pointed to the failure of the previous federal attempt to abolish segregation in the South, during Reconstruction times. The segregation principle is favored by leaders of both races.

MARK L. TUCKER

HE CAME TO CLANTON IN 1938 AND TOOK OVER PUBLICATION OF THE CHILTON COUNTY NEWS HERE

(From Montgomery Advetiser)

Mark L. Tucker, 70, publisher of The Chilton County News of Clanton, and former member of the State [illegible] Commission, died in a local hospital Tuesday after an illness of several weeks.

A veteran newspaperman who graduated into politics, he was widely known over Alabama and numbered his personal friends among all groups and factions. He was known as a man of kindliness and good will, with a reputation for unquestioned integrity, who went through vicissitudes of politics without scars or rancor. News of his passing was received at the State Capitol, where he was remembered by many, with expressions of regret from men and women in all phases of public life.

Mr. Tucker was an original supporter and warm personal friend of the late Gov. Bibb Graves whom he followed and fought for with the devotion Bibb Graves inspired in numerous followers. He held official position during both Graves administrations, 1927-31 and 1935-39, being a member of the State Tax Commission during a portion of the first term, and heading its license division during his second tenure of office. He moved to Clanton to take over publication of the weekly newspaper there the latter part of 1938.

In the gubernatorial campaign this spring, Mr. Tucker took his stand with the group of Graves loyals who held that Jim Folsom most nearly represented the ideals of their departed leader. He managed the Folsom campaign, which was accorded scant consideration at the start, and wound up well-nigh winning a place in a run-off.

Besides his widow, who was formerly Mamie [illegible], of Selma, he leaves nine children and a number of grandchildren. Children are: Mrs. Floyd Clark, Anniston; Henry C. Tucker, Tuscaloosa; Wilmark Tucker, Ind.; Mrs. Vernon Cargile, Birmingham; R. M. Tucker and George Tucker, Clanton; Mrs. Toliver Meadors, Mrs. Roy Grimmett, Birmingham, and Mrs. Cecil Blow, Santa Ana, California.

Funeral services will be held in Birmingham Thursday morning at Forest Hill Cemetery.

Forestry Telephone Lines Being Rushed

Field personnel of the Division of Forestry, Department of Conservation, are taking advantage of the usual summer lull in forest fire fighting activities to install new telephone communication lines and improve present systems.

Forestry towers are fulfilling a useful mission in the state's defense program and completion of connecting telephone lines is on the Division of Forestry's priorty list.

Learning to Fly 'Sky Pups'

The U. S. Balloon Barrage Training Center at Camp Tyson, Tenn., provides the training necessary for the handling, sailing and repairing of the huge bags which are flown as an aerial stockade against attacking bombers. These balloons are flown in critical areas to prevent enemy aircraft from bombing at low altitudes and can be raised to great heights in a few minutes.

"Alarm! Balloons aloft!" At this command, squads of balloon men rush to their posts, as pictured here.

Accidents, Deaths on Farms Preventable

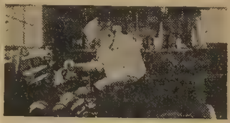
Take Necessary Steps Now To Ward Off Tragedy

Farming is a dangerous business. Every day at least 10 persons on U. S. farms lose their lives by fire or accident, and at least 800 are injured.

Many of these accidents and fatalities could be prevented by making farm repairs promptly.

Today when every farm worker is needed in agricultural production, it is doubly important that preventive measures be taken on all farms to avoid the tragedy of accident or death, or interruption in the work program.

Every farmer should make up a household tool kit consisting of a small hammer, a small and medium size screw driver, an adjustable S-wrench, nail sets and pliers.



Put the tools in a homemade tool roll fitted with pockets or in a carrying box.

Easier to Repair.

With such a tool kit handy it is a lot easier to take care of repair jobs.

Engineers of the U. S. bureau of agricultural chemistry and engineering place loose floor boards and stair treads high on their list of farm and home hazards. The short time required to repair such conditions could well be spared from even the most important farm work. Uneven and badly worn floors are dangerous, too, as are loose or broken hand rails, especially at steep stairways.

Broken window glass should be removed. Badly worn sash cords, often factors in accidents, should be replaced.

Weak or broken ladders are the cause of many injuries. Going through ladders is more unlucky than walking under them. Stepladders are a special hazard because they are used so frequently and are not so simple in their construction as straight ones.

A loose board or a door with a broken hinge can be picked up by the wind and do great damage. The farm shop usually has the equipment for such repairs.

They should be made as soon as the need is noticed. Boards with nails in them left lying around are a frequent cause of serious accidents and a threat of dread lockjaw.

They'll Last Longer

Now that the production of all farm equipment requiring rubber tires, except combines, has been discontinued, farmers who have rubber-tired implements and tractors can make them last longer with a little extra care.

Some of the most important points in tractor care are to keep tires properly inflated at all times, keep tires from contact with oil and grease or other material harmful to rubber, inspect all tires regularly for cuts, bruises and other damage and make needed repairs promptly.

Tractor tires should be well weighted at all times, especially under heavy load, to prevent excess wheel slippage which also causes rapid tire wear.

Unnecessary traveling over rough, sharp rock-strewn and gravel roads cuts down on the life of a tractor tire.

Wherever possible keep off the road, and on the earth which wears tires down less.

Heavy Yielding Hybrids

Still in the "laboratory stage" a decade ago, hybrid corn is being planted on 30,000,000 acres of midwest farm land this year, according to estimates of the Middle West Soil Improvement committee. Hybrid owes its amazing popularity to its heavy-yielding qualities. It makes a heavier drain on the soil than open-pollinated varieties. Thus it is necessary to see that the soil's resources of nitrogen, phosphorus and potash are replenished each year.

SEEMS as if a doffing of hats to Gene Autrey, who enlisted in the Army Air Corps, is indicated. "He will not receive a commission," announces the report. He'll get one, of course, eventually—he's bound to, because he's the stuff that officers are made of. But when so many men of the motion picture industry are stepping right out as officers at the start, isn't it swell of Gene to begin at the bottom? Reminds me of one movie executive who told me that he had applied for a commission as lieutenant colonel in the army; if he didn't get it, he'd stay out! P.S.—He didn't get it!

A Little Visit

By GERTRUDE ROBINSON
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.)

MARY JANE put the big blue-gray cat on the table back of the red geraniums and Mums stuffed her arms into the sleeves of her red coat so they stood out like fat sticks.

She could see into Mums' room. It used to be Daddy's, too. Now she had to go upstairs to the spare room when she wanted to play five little pigs with him mornings. This morning he didn't play a bit with her, just told her to take a nap.

Next thing she knew his truck was rattling over the bridge and then there was breakfast all alone with just Mums and Baby Dan. Now Mums was all dressed up in her dark blue suit and her fur coat was out in the car.

"Isn't Daddy coming, too, Mums?" Mums' eyes were blue as blue could be and they didn't see her a bit.

"We can't wait for him." Mums kissed her and her lips were cold and stiff. "You know he went to Rutland with the load of potatoes, and he's coming back this afternoon to get another."

Mums didn't sound like Mums. The kitchen was queer, too, with the table set for one. There was a cloth over cake and cheese and bread, and on the stove in the tiny skillet was hash ready to warm up.

Mums put her in the front seat of the car, with Danny between them. The back seat was full of suitcases.

"We're really going visiting, Mums?" Mary Jane hadn't believed it before.

"Maybe." Mums started the engine.

"Then I must get my visiting, go-to-church bag. Please, Mums." Mary Jane was out of the car. In the sitting room closet was her red leather bag. Daddy had given it to her on her last birthday when she was five. There was a round, shiny dollar in the bag and her hanky with the blue flowers in the corner and the little book of stamps Daddy had given her so she could write at least a weekly letter to her Grandma.

On the way out she stopped to kiss Bubs on his black nose. He was curled up on the little table beside the lamp. Right near him was a letter. Mary Jane knew a letter was meant to be mailed. This one had no stamp on it. Mums had forgotten it. She took the precious stamp book out of her bag and carefully stuck one on the envelope and slipped the letter into the bag. When they passed the letter box she'd reach out and drop it in.

When the sun had gone down they stopped at a bit of a house beside the road. Outside was a sign. "Tourist Camp," it said in letters so big Mary Jane could spell them out. She could see Mums cooking steak over a big fire outside, with lots of other women. Danny was asleep in the funny bed fast to the wall. There were the suitcases opened and things popping out. Maybe this was where they were going visiting.

Just then a man came up in a rattling car, all excited. Mary Jane heard something about a truck and potatoes spilled all over the road.

"Mums! Mums! Was it Daddy?" She ran to her mother and began to cry.

"Sh-sh-sh—" whispered the women.

Mums didn't say a word. She tucked them into the car again and they were off like mad, leaving the fragrant steak behind. When they came to a telephhone office Mums went in. "He didn't answer. Nobody's there," she said when she came out, just as though Mary Jane understood.

The church clock was striking twelve in the dark when they drove into their own yard. The kitchen was just as they had left it, the table all set and the skillet with hash in it on the cold stove.

"Thank God!" Mums' voice sounded all choked. "He hadn't been here before it happened. He didn't know—" She stepped to the little table and felt under the lamp. "He did—come in. It's gone! He didn't stop to eat his lunch even."

"Just then the telephone rang. "Yes, John! Oh, John, you're not really hurt?" Mums' voice was so glad Mary Jane danced up and down. "No—I was—out when you called up—and this afternoon—"

The telephone went dead. Mums lighted the fire in the stove and pulled the tiny skillet forward. Then she fairly flew upstairs and came down with her arms full of Daddy's things.

The next thing Mary Jane knew a truck was rumbling over the bridge. She got out of bed and trotted to the kitchen. Mums was putting wood on the fire. The sun was just getting up, round and red.

Then Mary Jane saw her precious red bag on a chair. "O, Mums, I forgot! I put a stamp on and then I didn't drop it in the box." She opened the bag and took out the letter.

Mums gave a little cry as though she couldn't believe something. She snatched at the letter and stuck it, beautiful stamp and all, right in with the stick of wood. Then she caught Mary Jane in her arms and ran to the door. She hugged so tight it hurt. And then there was Daddy hugging them both.

Summer Salads

Salads with summertime meals form a perfect alliance bringing your family precious pep-giving minerals and vitamins. Vitamins A, B, and C are well represented in crisp celery, golden skinned carrots, rosy cheeked tomatoes, green glowing cucumbers and lettuce. Dress them up with a light liquid salad oil blended with seasonings to bring out the hidden flavoring of the vegetables, and you have a perfect warm weather meal.

 Tossed Garden Salad

Wash and drain dry your favorite salad greens—such as lettuce, romaine, watercress or endive; a combination of two or more may be used. Cut or break into pieces and combine with portions of diced celery, cucumber, green pepper, radishes and minced onion. Chill thoroughly. Then place in a salad bowl; add Basic French Dressing and bits of tomato. Toss lightly until well blended. This type of salad may also be served with just an oil and vinegar combination as a dressing.

Basic French Dressing.
(Makes ¾ cup)

½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon sugar
¼ teaspoon paprika
Dash white pepper
½ teaspoon dry mustard
½ cup mild salad oil
¼ cup cider vinegar or lemon juice

Combine first five ingredients in a jar and blend well. Add vinegar, cover and shake; add oil and shake again thoroughly. Just before using, shake again. Or simply mix ingredients together in a bowl and beat with mixer until well blended.

Leftover meats and vegetables served daintily in lettuce cups make tempting main dishes for lunch or supper. Have a hot soup, potato chips, thin bread and butter sandwiches and fresh fruit to serve with salad. The next three salads are perfect as a main course.

Veal Salad, Summer Style.

2 cups cold veal, diced
1 cup string beans or celery or both
6 hard-cooked eggs
Salt and pepper

Lettuce and parsley

Chop eggs coarsely, combine with veal, oil, vinegar, salt and pepper. Let stand 30 minutes. Add mayonnaise to moisten. Arrange salad in a mound and garnish.

Jellied Green Pea Salad.
(Serves 6)

1 tablespoon green pepper, chopped
Allspice, cloves, nutmeg
Green pepper rings
1 cup tomato puree
1½ cups peas
1 hard-cooked egg, sliced

Lynn Says:

Save Washing Time: So many new demands are being made on your time these days, it is wise to make the best possible use of each minute. One way is in how you use your washing machine.

For instance, long washing is not necessarily good washing, and it wastes time. Soap undergoes a chemical change after it has been used a little while, suds "break down" and the soil is actually deposited again on the fabric. Then it is practically impossible to get the articles clean.

Only individual experimentation can show how short to keep the washing of each load, and yet be thorough. Tests have revealed one woman taking only half the time of another to wash a practically identical washing, yet doing it better.

Twenty-minute soaking hastens washing by loosening soil. Then remove water by wringing the articles into the first washer full of sudsy water of the right temperature.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—One fancies that the least of current worries of Col. Julia O. Flikke, superintendent of the army nurse corps, is involved in the question whether or not she is entitled to retain the silver eagles which accompanied her new commission as colonel.

Eagles in Flight Can't Carry Away Her Qualifications

By the same token the commission itself seems to be in danger as a result of the pryings of legal comma hunters who after the manner of their kind are probably rejoicing in a point they have extracted from their study of the law creating the army of the United States. The law says that "qualified persons" are eligible for commissions. By virtue of this ruling Mrs. Flikke's colonelcy was sanctioned by the surgeon general, the adjutant general and the judge advocate.

High authority indeed; none the less it is questioned on the basic ground that there were no women in the army when congress passed the law; that, therefore, promotions of women are outside the law. The United States controller general, an important official since he passes on all pay vouchers, is inclined to accept the point raised. If, he says, congress meant women to be eligible for army rank, it would have said so. So there we are and so specifically is Colonel Flikke.

Even should the nice distinction be upheld, she will still, as major, be the highest ranking woman in the United States army. Commander of nearly 10,000 nurses, she is well-fitted to her responsibility, colonel or no colonel. A native of Veroqua, Wis., she went to Chicago, married there and was there left a widow. She prepared for nursing in the Augustana hospital in Chicago and after a post-graduate course in nursing and administration at Columbia university, she returned to Augustana hospital as assistant superintendent.

When World War I involved the United States she joined the army, serving three years in France, China and the Philippines. Subsequently she was attached for 12 years to the Walter Reed hospital in Washington and in May, 1937, succeeded Maj. Julia C. Stimson as superintendent of the army nurse corps.

◆

ELEVEN years ago Eugene J. Houdry, a Parisian scientist and inventor, arrived on these shores with his wife and two small children. Established in Philadelphia the family eventually moved to Ardmore, a main line suburb. Then 38 years old, Houdry had been at work in his native country over a period of years on a method for the catalytic cracking of oil by which the crude is converted into vapors at lower temperatures and pressures than had hitherto been used. These vapors, then, are brought into contact with a catalyst and are condensed into their various derivatives in proportions which can be controlled in the operation. In the midst of these researches in France—having already invented a process for obtaining octane gasoline vital to aviation—his money ran out. He could get no more and seeking practical encouragement in the United States, he migrated hither and found two great oil companies eager to finance his laboratory. Some $10,000,000 was paid out in perfecting Houdry's process and in devising and making apparatus for its use on a large commercial scale.

Great, Varied Are Returns on Our Free Enterprise

Now Eugene Houdry is cited as having succeeded in applying his catalytic cracking process to the commercial production of butadiene—something for which an eager public has been waiting since war began and our supply of rubber was cut off. For butadiene is the main ingredient of a very fine brand of synthetic rubber. Consequently, if all is well with the Houdry process, the present shortage in an essential commodity may be overcome much sooner than had been hoped.

In such case a currently dreaded event will be postponed, if not forever averted — the requisition of your tires by the government.

Immersed since his arrival in this country in scientific research Mr. Houdry, now a naturalized citizen, found time after the fall of France to help organize here that aggressively militant organization, "France Forever," a large national group of Free Frenchmen of which he is the president and its chief spokesman.

"Only here," he has said, "could I have achieved such scientific success as has been vouchsafed me."

Chilton County Farm Loans Total $70,410 For The Year

Loans totalling $70,410 have been made by the Farm Security Administration during the fiscal year which ended June 30 to 350 low-income farmers in Chilton County for farm operations.

In addition to these "rehabilitation' loans, Marvin Durbin, county supervisor said, $15,500 in tenant purchase loans were made, helping 6 farmers to ownership and independence during the past 12 months. This brings to 51 the number of Chilton County farmers who have been enabled to buy their own farms through Farm Security's tenant purchase program.

Seven community and cooperative services for purpose of group ownership of machinery and brooding stock as well as medical and dental associations, show progress in group action in the county during the 1941-42 fiscal year. The Chilton County purchasing and marketing associations did $15,514 worth of business with local merchants, final tabulations show. Outstanding purchases made by the association of Farm Security families were: garden seed, fruit jars, field seed, and fertilizer.

Loans totalling $14,961,412 were made during the 12-month period to small farmers in Farm Security's Region Five, comprising Alabama, Mr. Durbin reported. These loans Florida, Georgia, and South Carolina, made possible the broadening of operation of 70,902 small farmers, and increased their capacity to take part in the larger food production made necessary by the war.

The total for the four states was $4,500,000 more than that for the preceding fiscal year, a fact due partly to an increase in the number served, but more significantly to an enlargement of the farm plans of the borrowers to include greater food production.

In 1941 special loans for a "Food for Defense" program were made. As a result, several million chickens, 20,000 milk cows, 20,000 brood sows were added to the livestock possessions of small farmers in the four states. The hogs have increased three-fold in the natural process and two million more hens are in egg production. Repayment in the last fiscal year of amounts due on previous loans were made at the rate of more than 80 percent.

In addition 2,200 landless farmers were helped to farm ownership by loans totalling $8,470,835, an average of $3,954 per farm. Forty-year tenant purchase loans have been made available to 5,289 landless farmers in previous years, bringing the total to 7,428 who are buying their land through the tenant purchase program. Of the $637,888 due in 1941, $634,624 was paid or approvimately 99 percent of maturities.

More than two million dollars worth of goods were bought by farm families in the four states through 266 purchasing and marketing associations established during 1941-42. Group service loans for purchase of machinery necessary to carry on food production under war conditions were made to 527 Farm Security groups during the past fiscal year.

Through 181 group medical associations 32,024 families, comprising 176,121 individuals obtain adequate medical care at a fixed yearly rate they can afford to pay. Dental Associations of families who have a part in the Farm Security program have been established in 89 counties and serve 86,488 individuals. There are 112 veterinary associations providing for adequate treatment and care of work stock at an economical yearly trade.

Isabella FFA Members Study Leadership

In working out a chapter activity program for the year, we tried to include those things that would give us general agricultural education as well as to develop those qualities of leadership which every future farmer should possess. Now, as we look back over our year's work, we feel that we have accomplished our aim.

Last summer, a group of FFA members along with Mr. Camp and Mr. McPherson went on a tour of points of interest in Alabama, Florida, and Georgia. This tour not only afforded the boys with plenty of enjoyment, but it enabled them to observe some of the farming practices used in other sections of the country. We are trying to maintain this tour as an annual affair.

In our community service this year, we have culled about 1,650 hens, pruned about 7 orchards, sprayed 5 orchards, dehorned cattle, treated oats and cottonseed, repaired farm tools, and treated livestock for the people in the community. Then, of course, Mr. Camp, our adviser has given a good deal of helpful advice to the farmers on various agricultural problems.

In the improvement work around the school we have built new steps for the agriculture building, repaired several tables for the classroom, put in some new windows in the school building, cut grass and hoed the shrubbery around the school.

From the publicity standpoint, we have put on a P. T. A. program, several chapel programs, sent articles to the school and county newspapers, and turned in regular reports to the state office.

In the activities within the chapter, we are maintaining a pig chain, we have given a movie party, built 3 lamp-type brooders, planted a permanent pasture in the laboratory area, got 20 new F. F. A. manuals, and several of the members have bought Greenhand and Future Farmer pins. We have begun a scrapbook which will contain pictures and general information on the work of the chapter.

We are fully cooperating in the national defense program. The chapter is sponsoring the sale of war bonds and stamps, planning victory gardens, maintaining a garden in the laboratory area, collecting scrap iron, all of the members are taking home garden improvement as a project, and the need of more food for victory is being stressed to the farmers of the community.

Another thing that we are proud of here at Isabella is the young speaking talent that we are developing. This year 5 members entered the chapter speaking contest. For the past two years, the Isabella representative has held first place in the district contest.

All these accomplishments might be summed up briefly by saying that we are learning to really live out the meaning of the F.F.A. Motto:

Learning to do,
Doing to learn;
Earning to live,
Living to serve."

THORSBY, ALA.—Mrs. T. Erskine Campbell of Thorsby, and her family are leaving this week for Hanover, Indiana, where they will reside. Mrs Campbell has been Clerk for Thorsby Institute; her place is being taken for the summer by Miss Helen E. Phillips.

MORAL ECHOES

By Rev. D. W. Haskew, D. D.

At the bank I saw a queer looking five dollar bill. This paper currency had done quite a bit of good in its rounds. It had paid the rent of a widow, bought food for a hungry family, squared several accounts, and had even traveled in the collection plate of a church, but when it came to the bank, it failed to pass. The teller scrutinized it with care and he found it to be counterfeit. To be sure that bill had done quite a few noble acts, but all of its good deeds did not make it pass for a bill of value when its real character was known. Are you betting your hope of heaven on good deeds done, when in your heart you are a counterfeit Christian? Character is what counts.

I once heard of two drunk men who came down to the landing of a bay where their boat was tied. It being dark and both men under the influence of whiskey, each took an oar and started pulling. They wanted to cross the bay in order to reach their home, but were too drunk to know that they had not untied the boat and neither had they taken up the anchor. They pulled faithfully on their oars; but did not make any progress toward home. When the morning came the two drunk men found themselves at the place where they had entered the boat. That is just the way it is with many who try to enter the kingdom of God. They want to finally go home to heaven, but they are tied to this world and while they may pull with some effort, yet they stay close to the world to which they are tied. Cut loose from the world, lift your anchor and then pull toward the everlasting shore.

I hold in my hand two pieces of carbon. One is a lump of coal and the other is a small diamond. The two pieces are made from exactly the same thing, but one is worth a thousand more than the other. What produces the difference in value? The lump of coal when it is placed in the sunlight will drink down the rays and nothing is given out. The diamond held in the sunlight will reflect every ray that comes down from the sun. One piece of carbon drinks in the light of the sun while the other gives out that light. What is it that produces value in the human life? The selfish man drinks in while the unselfish life radiates light and life for others.

Twenty years after the Williamsburg bridge was swung across the the water above Brooklyn bridge in New York, I crossed the bridge with a friend. Before taking the journey over, we had explained to us the magnitude of the project. In order to establish the foundation and to make secure the moorings for the bridge, the engineers had to make twenty two borings with diamond drills. These drills went down 112 feet into solid rock, and thus a secure base was established for the support of that massive structure. The diamond drills of God pierces us to the depth in order to find out if there be hidden delusions within us. God knows whether we be pure within. To swing a life look well after the foundation.

On the summits of the Alps there is a mule's path that is just wide enough for the animal to travel, and these trained animals know how to make the journey in safety. There are awful precipices on both sides of the mule trail, and when a timid traveler is to ride the donkey on that path, he is instructed to drop the reins on the mule's neck, close the eyes and hold on. The traveler may be afraid, but the mule is not, and with closed eyes the traveler is carried over in safety. There are times and circumstances in a believer's life when he must close his eyes, still his fears and leave matters to God. When you are afraid, just drop the reins on the neck of God's providences and trust Him. God knows and God alone can carry us over the dangerous ways of life. We walk by faith and not by sight.

Far up on the Sand Mountains of North Alabama a preacher stood in his pulpit, preaching as best he could, when a Mountaineer arose on the back seat and shouted, "Preacher talk louder." A few moments later the same man shouted the same request, saying, "We can't hear back here." After the same request had been shouted for the fourth time, a man on the front seat arose and addressed the man on the back seat, "Sir, you sit down and shut your mouth and thank God " On hearing this story I wondered if the man on the front seat was not really envious of the man on the back seat. Evidently he was not hearing much, even though he could hear well. It is sometimes true that we hear little when we hear well.

Only a few years ago, the man who first invented the submarine, was asked to speak over the radio. The old man referred back to his early experience, as he labored to produce his first submarine and then finally saw that he had succeeded. Then with a sob in his voice he spoke of the submarine of today, saying that little did he think that it would ever become a machine of war and death. When he produced his first sub, he only thought of it as a vessel of commerce, that could sink beneath the rolling waves in a stormy sea and go on with safety. When the submarine was a reality, the war lords seized the idea and turned it into a serpent of the sea to carry death and destruction to men and ships. How cruel it seems for men to seize our best blessings and turn them into instrments of corruption and death. May God have mercy on us.

With a pole, line, and bait, a fisherman took his place on the bank of a stream that flowed hard by one of the buildings located on the grounds of an insane asylum. The man had fished all day and caught nothing. Late that afternoon a crazy man stuck his head out of a window on the third story and shouted. "Fishing eh. How many have you caught " Not a one sir," replied the man. "Well, how long have you been fishing?" shouted the man. Since early this morning," replied the fisherman. Then the demented man in the window snorted and shouted again, "Buddie, if you have been fishing all day and caught nothing, throw your pole in the creek and come on in here with the rest of us." In this world that is so full of big things to be done, it seems that there is something radically wrong with a man when he lives his life through and does nothing. We should do something or go to the "Bat" house.

The battle of Bennington was won by a crippled lad who did no fighting at all. Colonel Warren was trying to get to the front with his men, when his saddle horse became lame. This lad heard the colonel say that he did not think that he could make it with his horse limping. The little boy then waved for him to stop and dismount. In a jiffy he set the shoe on the horse foot and no longer was he crippled. Colonel Warren then leaped to his saddle and led his men to the front, just in time to save the day. The victory at Bennington decided the battle at Saratoga, which battle decided the Revolutionary War. That crippled lad by the roadside did what he could, and it was his little that pushed the the power forward, and the power won the war. We may not be much power, but we can do our part where we are and push the power to the front, and the victory will be won.

In speaking of what small things will do, we are reminded of what took place in the life of Columbus. One day he was passing on old Monastery in Andalusia and his little boy was crying from hunger Columbus stoped at the Monastery and asked for a loaf of bread for his starving child. He related his story to the Priest and in turn the Priest related his story to Queen Isabella. The Queen sought an interview with the navigator. The final outcome of that interview was that Columbus was soon sailing west to find a way out to India. The discovery of the Western Hemisphere can be traced back to the crying of a hungry child. It was that cry that brought forces together that resulted in such a wonderful discovery. Great events turn on small hinges.

Control Urged In Weevil Poisoning

Alabama farmers are advised not to use lead arsenate nor sulphur as boll weevil control measures.

"Lead arsenate is likely to 'burn' small bolls as well as leaves and sulphur will not kill boll weevil," says W. A. Ruffin, entomologist, Alabama Extension Service. "Sulphur may be mixed with calcium arsenate at the rate of one pound of calcium arsenate to two pounds of sulphur where sulphur is needed for control of sucking insects such as the cotton fleahopper.

"Some farmers are trying to use calcium arsenate as a spray. The Experiment Station has no data on use of calcium arsenate applied in this manner, therefore, its use as a spray is not recommended."

Large Crop Winter Legume Seed Saved

Aaron Fleming and sons, successful farmers of Madison County, this year produced and saved 90,000 pounds of hairy vetch, 33,000 pounds of crimson clover and 7,000 pounds of white Dutch clover seed--a total of 130,000 pounds of winter legume seed for planting this fall.

On 120 acres planted on cotton land and the cotton stalks left to hold up the vetch, they averaged 500 pounds of vetch seed per acre. For six days they harvested 13,000 pounds of vetch seed per day.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Hitler found out that his high powered mechanized and motorized army bogged down in the snow and mud of the Russian Winter. Although our Army is largely mechanized the cavalry horse is still a highly essential factor in this mounted division and in the Field Artillery. The Army also maintains remount farms where many cavalry horses are bred and raised.

These select horses cost from $100 to $165 and our crack cavalrymen are expert riders and carry on the traditions which have followed the cavalry from the earliest days of the Army. Purchase of War Savings Bonds will insure good mounts for the Cavalry. You and your neighbors buying War Bonds and Stamps regularly every pay day can help buy these horses for the U. S. Cavalry. Invest at least 10 percent of your income in War Bonds.

Farm Equipment and Country Merchants to Help Salvage Drive

When the Alabama Scrap Harvest gets under way in September to help feed Uncle Sam's war machine, the merchant's and farm equipment dealers of Chilton County will be organized and ready to serve as the backbone of the movement.

The Alabama Scrap Harvest, requested by the War Production Board, will be part of a nationwide effort to roll in fresh supplies of old iron, scrap rubber, waste rags and other material which can be salvaged for war use.

Final plans for forming a strong working organization in each county were worked out in a conference at Auburn attended by P. O. Davis, Extension Service director; A. W. Jones, state chairman of the U. S. Department of Agriculture War Board; P. H. Baker, state manager for the International Harvester Co., and Leon Gilbert, executvie secretary of the Alabama Salvage committee.

Farm equipment dealers and country merchants throughout Chilton County will be asked to set up depots at which scrap rubber, metals and other needed war materials can be collected. Mr. Baker, who is lining up the co-operation of farm equipment companies over the state announced that many of these firms already have agreed to use their trucks to help pick up salvage where possible.

Dismember a County Hale's Vigorous 'No' Supported by Governor

The full support of Governor Dixon is behind Hale County in the fight to keep the War Department from turning one of Alabama's most fertile farming and dairying sections into an army maneuvers area.

Reports that the War Department is conducting a survey with the object of condemning more than 120,000 acres of farm and pasture lands in Southern Hale County, a rich milk-producing area, caused double consternation in Montgomery.

State officials immediately cited two major objections: (1) That such a move would despoil a vital section of Alabama's dairying country, now supplying 20 per cent of the fluid milk for Birmingham, a great portion of Mobile's supply and quantities for Camp Rucker; (2) That the proposal would include the wiping out of the present state ranch, where the present program of building up Alabama's livestock industry soon is to be enlarged by the induction of selected Western beef stock.

Governor Dixon expressed himself as fully in accord with the resolution adopted at Greensboro which asserted "No such comparable dislocation of an agricultural people has ever been attempted in the history of the South" and "We solemnly protest this proposal to dismember an entire county."

The protest, which pointed out that 9,000 inhabitants would be evicted from their farms and homes if the War Department decides to establish a cantonment and maneuvers ground area, was signed by some 50 leading citizens, including Probate Judge Robert K. Greene, Mayor L. J. Lawson, Jr. of Greensboro, State Senator-Designate L. J. Lawson, Sr., State Rep.-Designate H. A. Taylor, County Commissioner Alex Matthews, County Tax Collector V. F. Crabtree; A. I. Selden, chairman of the county school board, and Hamner Cobbs, editor of the Greensboro Watchman.

The governor offered to help the army find a more suitable and less expensive area. Both the governor and the Hale citizens filing the protest emphasized that, if the territory in question is absolutely necessary to the war effort, it gladly will be surrendered, but suggested the use of less productive land.

The Alabama State Chamber of Commerce issued a statement pointing out the importance ofHale County to agriculture.

Dove Shooting Gets 12 Day Cut As Duck Season Is Extended

Alabama's dove shooters will lose 12 days and its duck hunters gain 10 days under the 1942-43 Federal migratory bird hunting regulations promulgated by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes. Regulations received by Chief Ben C. Morgan, of the Game Fish and Seafood Division, Department of Conservation, provide a 30-day dove season, December 1-30, inclusive, and a 70-day duck season, November 2-January 10 inclusive. Daily bag limit on dove has been cut to 10 birds with one day's bag constituting the possession limit.

Shooting hours on all migratory game birds now runs from sunrise to sunset. Duck shooting formerly had to stop at 4 p. m.

Duck shooters are permitted a daily limit of 10 birds and a possession limit of 20, except on opening day when only 10 will be permitted. Not more than one wood duck may be legally possessed. Other regulations requiring possession of a validated current Federal Migratory Bird Hunting Stamp by those over 16 years of age, three shell limit on repeating and automatic shotguns, and outlawing use of bait, live decoys, cattle, horses or mules remain in force for waterfowl shooters.

Geese, brant and coot seasons are the same as for duck. Two per day and a limit of four in possession is allowable on Canadian geese and Brant with a daily bag and possession limit of six on blue geese. Coot have a 25 daily bag and possession limit. Only six geese in the aggregate of all species may be held in possession.

Rails and gallinules may be hunted November 20 to January 31, inclusive. Sora have a daily bag limit of 15 and not more than 15 is permitted in the aggregate of all other species of rails and gallinules. Daily limits constitute possession limits.

Chief Morgan hailed the new regulations as a victory for the South. At their recent Montgomery meeting, Southeastern game administrators, upon motion of Alabama's representative, asked for liberalization of duck rules. In view of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service s report on the dove shortage, they urged a curtailed season and a bag limit rather than a closed season.

A sportsman is one who realizes game and fish rules are put on the books to assure his son or daughter the same sport he now enjoys. A game or fish hog cares not one whit for the future of hunting or fishing.

Farmers Pool Produce To Meet Army Needs

The soldiers in training camps in the southeastern states are eating their way right through the truck farms of the district and there is a merry and prolonged tinkle of hard dollars as they fall into the pockets of the growers, as a result.

There are, in the office of the Fourth Corps Area Quartermaster here, figures that would indicate the total number of tons of vegetables consumed daily by the soldiers in Dixie, but to give those figures would be revealing something that Hitler and Hirohito would like to know.

Worked out, from these records, on the basis of vegetables supplied to each 100-man Army mess, it is shown that just one training camp with a strength of 50,000 men, receives approximately 2,878,000 pounds of fresh vegetables every month—and that's 96 carloads.

And it is pointed out, this is not just a one-month source of income to the growers. The southeast, because of its climate and soil adaptability, is one of the greatest vegetable-growing areas in the nation, produce dealers assert. This, coupled with the fact that the Quartermaster policy of buying food supplies as much as possible in the area where they are consumed, makes the Army one of the biggest year-around customers of the southeastern food producers.

This buying is done on a vast scale at conveniently located market centers and, by the system adopted, a number of farmers may pool their produce into large shipments, each farmer receiving his proportionate part of the cash returns.

At the market centers, inspectors carefully check the vegetables purchased, to insure that the American soldiers, the best fed fighting men in the world, eat only the top grades.

Greases and Fats Vital To Win War Effort

The WPB is asking all housewives to save their kitchen fats and greases, because they are urgently needed in the war effort. Our supply of vegetable fats from the Far East has been reduced.

Chain stores and other retailers having meat markets will purchase these fats from the housewife at prices set by the government.

The fat should be saved in a tin can with smooth edge and top. Carefully strained and kept in a cool, dark place. Do not take less than one pound to your meat dealer.

Fats make glycerne and glycerine makes explosives for us and our allies.

We need millions of pounds of glycerine and the housewives of America can help supply it.

Prepare Land Well For Crimson Clover

Farmers over the state who are planning to grow crimson clover are busy turning oat stubble and other idle land to get a firm seed bed before planting time.

J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist, says that land to be planted to crimson clover should be turned then harrowed or disked for several weeks before the planting date arrives then planted around the 15th of August at the rate of 15 to 20 pounds of clean seed per acre and fertilized with 400 to 600 pounds of basic slag or its equivalent. Proper inoculation of the seed is absolutely necessary he says.

Branch-Bottom Plot

On every farm possible, a branch bottom plot of ground should be cleared and planted to vegetables in late late summer. Instead of planting only turnip greens, the same variety of vegetables usually planted in the spring can be planted in the fall and thus provide an all-year garden.

This Too Will Pass

A Journal reader recalls a famous saying as an appropriate motto for these trying times when one day brings news of adversity and another day brings news of good cheer The motto is: 'This, too, will pass."

The origin of this saying is obscure, but it is said to be especially popular in the Orient where men have been philosophical about adversity and prosperity for generations One story relates that Warren Hastings, the British statesman and administrator of India, when he was placed on trial by those who questioned his conduct of the office, related this yarn: An Oriental despot offered a great reward to anyone in his court who could frame for him a motto brief enough to be engraved inside a finger-ring, and which should be appropriate for reference in good times and bad: which would be a source of consolation in either adversity or prosperity. Many tried, but his own daughter finally submitted the words, "This, too, will pass," and was given the reward—Alabama Journal

Tractors and motors will never wholly replace the Army Mule as a factor in the mobile units of our army. The Army Mule is a tradition and the "mule skinner" is a breed unto himself. Army Mules are used by the Field Artillery and the Cavalry in areas where the terrain is rough and tractors cannot operate.

Pack trains in mountainous sectors are often necessary and here the mule, slow but sure-footed, plays an important role. Our Army buys thousands of mules paying from $175 to $190 for each. The mule eats less, carries more, and some declare is smarter than the horse. Your purchase of War Bonds and Stamps helps pay for these Army Mules. The SNAPSHOT GUILD

DETERMINING CORRECT EXPOSURE

Correct exposures produce the finest snapshots. Use common sense and an exposure guide, and you'll always get good results.

AMONG the common mistakes in amateur photography are under- and overexposure. That is due almost entirely to the fact that many snapshooters do not give correct exposure the careful consideration it deserves.

If you have been having exposure trouble just remember this: Correct exposure is principally a matter of good judgment, plus the proper use of available exposure instructions. There's nothing hard about that, and any photographer can apply the basic principles to his work in a few seconds.

For instance, take that matter of using good judgment. Don't try to take pictures in deep shade at the same shutter speed you used for snapshooting in the open sun. Open your lens aperture at least one, and possibly two, full stops. And when you take pictures in the sun on the beach, remember to use only half-normal snapshot exposure. The bright sun, and the high reflective quality of the white sand will result in bad overexposure if you're not careful.

Those points may seem rather obvious, but they are frequent mistakes that beginners make—and if you want to produce snapshots which are as good as our illustration you've got to hit correct exposure "on the nose" or come mighty close to it.

To help you master this problem, if your camera has a number of possible lens apertures and shutter speeds, you'll find one of the inexpensive pocket exposure guides a big help. Today those guides have been developed to a point where they are so simple to operate and so accurate that you can tell at a glance what the correct exposure is for almost any given situation. Some films have a general exposure chart included in the instruction sheet which comes with each roll or pack of film but if you do much picture taking a pocket exposure guide and common sense are a team which guarantee the best results.

A LOOK AT THE BOOK

By DR. BOB JONES, JR.

God never asks a man to give up something without giving him something better in return. God called upon Abraham to leave his country and his kindred and his father's house. God asked this man of prominence and of wealth to turn his back on the friends of his childhood and the home of his youth and follow Him without knowing where he was to be led, and by faith Abraham obeyed and "went out, not knowing whither he went" (Hebrews 11:8). Because he was willing to give up the fellowship of the moon worshippers of Ur, he enjoyed the companionship of God. Because he was willing to leave the land of his parents, God gave to him for himself and for his children the land of promise. Because he thought more of doing the will of God than abiding in ease in Ur, he became the father of the faithful, the one from whose seed Messiah came. Abraham was blessed in his obedience and became a blessing to others as he obeyed.

● The man who chooses to do the will of God and who obeys the command of the Lord is always blessed himself and is always a blessing to others. He becomes the instrument through which God's blessing can be poured out and is made joyful in being thus used. There is more happiness in being a missionary than in being a millionaire if one is a missionary in obedience to the will of God and the other a millionaire because he failed to obey the God who wanted him to be a missionary. God's call is always to self-denial and self-restraint. God's call is sometimes to privation and suffering. Privation and suffering in the will of God with the blessing of His abiding presence and in the light of His face brings a thousand times more joy and contentment and peace than can be found in the accumulation of wealth and a life of ease out of the will of God.

● The child of God in the will of His Father finds joy and contentment not only here but also hereafter. The pleasures of the world and its treasures pass away but "he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever" (I John 2:17), and Abraham "sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tents . . . for he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose Builder and Maker is God" (Hebrews 11:9-10).

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

International Court and Police Force For Postwar World Envisioned by Hull; Nazi Drive Increases Russia's Peril; Rommel Stymied by Allied Air Power

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Maj. Gen. Carl Spaatz, chief of the American air forces in the European theater of action (left), pins the Distinguished Service Cross on Maj. Charles C. Kegelman. Taking part in a recent bombing raid on enemy airfields in Holland, Kegelman brought his ship back safely after one motor was wrecked and a wing damaged in fighting with German air forces.

POSTWAR WORLD:
Hull Envisions

When silvery-haired Cordell Hull broadcast an appeal for a safe and saner postwar world, it was clear that a majority of Americans agreed with his thesis that the peace as well as the war must be won by the United Nations if future chaos is to be avoided.

In an address heard around the world, the secretary of state made these points:

1. The United Nations' immediate problem is to win the war—decisively.

2. After the war surveillance must be exercised over Germany, Japan, Italy and their satellites by the United Nations until the aggressors prove their willingness and ability to live at peace with other nations.

3. Disputes must be settled by peaceful means. An international court of justice would provide respect for law and obligations.

4. Freedom is to be assured by removal of economic and political shackles. Errors of extreme nationalism that caused the present war must be avoided.

EGYPT:
Air Power Tells

It had become increasingly clear that air power was assuming a decisive role in the fight for Egypt. Steady reinforcements of the British air arm had enabled the Imperials to launch an offensive along the 35-mile front from El Alamein on the Mediterranean to the Quattera marshes, paced by an RAF onslaught that drove Nazi planes from the sky.

The British drive dislodged the Nazis from oft-disputed Tel el Eisa (Hill of Jesus) in the north and succeeded in making considerable headway along the center.

Activity by the A''ies had followed a week-long assault by American and British planes and British warships on the North African coastal highway on which German Marshal Rommel had rushed reinforcements to offset the capture of 6,000 Italians on the Egyptian front in previous engagements. In raids covering 275 miles of Rommel's exposed supply route, British planes virtually wiped out the El Daba airport near the Egyptian lines.

REQUIEM:
For U-Boat Crew

Burial with military honors is the hope of friend or foe alike, if death in battle is the fighting man's lot. Thus a tradition sanctioned by the ages was followed when the bodies of 29 German submarine crew members were buried in Hampton, Va. The victims were the first enemy dead to be landed on American shores since the beginning of the war.

The bodies and a few empty life jackets were all that remained afloat after a destroyer on Atlantic patrol sank the U-boat. The same honors were accorded the enemy as Americans might wish for their own dead, if the circumstances were reversed. Navy chaplains read the requiem. A navy firing squad fired a salute of three volleys. A navy bugler sounded taps.

RUSSIAN FRONT:
'Terrible Days'

The gravity of the Russian situation could not be underestimated and no attempt was made to belittle its seriousness. Germany's report of the fall of Rostov emphasized the crisis.

As the sorely pressed Russians guarding the approaches to the Caucasus and the Volga river had fallen back before the million-man German army smashing its way southeast down the Don river valley, the Soviet army organ, Red Star, said frankly: "Terrible days face the country." It called upon the fighting men of Russia to emulate the example of 28 Red soldiers, who in the defense of Moscow last winter, died fighting a tank charge with little more than their bare hands.

The speed of the new Nazi drive against the Reds' celebrated defense-in-depth technique was believed to be due to the Germans', use of a crushing, mass maneuver which employed monster tanks, armored trains, heavy mortars and an unprecedented concentration of air power.

Only comforting note in the bleak picture was the success of Russian soldiers in regaining ground far to the north in their counter-offensive around Voronezh. By turning the Nazis back here, Marshal Timoshenko might be able to take some of the pressure off Red forces in the deep South who had fought with their backs to the wall in defense of Rostov.

U. S. CASUALTIES:
Show War's Trend

Casualty figures released by the Office of War Information revealed that the navy's losses since Pearl Harbor were 15 times greater than for the entire span of World War I.

The OWI's statistics disclosed naval casualties thus far totaling 12,143 compared with 871 in the first World war. The current casualties included 3,420 killed; 1,051 wounded and 7,051 missing. Those of World War I included 356 killed in action; 58 died of wounds and 456 lost at sea.

The army's losses in the present war, were placed at 19,767. These included 902 killed; 1,413 wounded and 17,452 missing. That the Philippine Scouts trained under General MacArthur had given a heroic account of themselves was indicated by casualties listing 479 killed; 754 wounded and 11,000 missing.

Casualties for all services were placed at 44,413.

"The bulk of the army casualties fall into the category of missing," the OWI said.

FEMININE ARMY:
WAAC Trains Hard

Every morning at 5:45 a. m. from now until next November 9, 800 members of the newly organized Women's Auxiliary Army corps will leap from their army cots to begin a crowded day of drills, lectures and training at their camp at Fort Des Moines, Iowa.

By November 9, America's first feminine army of occupation will begin to spread out to 19 forts throughout the country to relieve men in the armed forces for active combat duty.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

LONDON: The British information service said that British women are now nearly 100 per cent mobilized. Of 15,800,000 women between the ages of 18 and 64, the agency said, 7,500,000 are doing full time jobs in war production. About 670,000 others are disabled and 5,500,000 are taking care of families. Many others are serving in the auxiliaries of the army and navy.

WASHINGTON: The importance of the $100,000,000 fish industry to the nation's wartime food supply was stressed by President Roosevelt as he appointed Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes to be fisheries co-ordinator. Acting under his wartime powers, the President created the co-ordination office for the purpose of "developing and assuring sustained production."

JAPANESE:
Mixed Tidings

Taking their first offensive action in the southwest Pacific since their disastrous defeat in the Battle of the Coral Sea last May, the Japanese landed an invasion force at Buna, 100 miles directly across the eastern arm of New Guinea from Port Moresby, last Allied outpost of Australia.

A Melbourne communique reported that United Nations planes had attacked the invasion fleet and sank a large transport and barge, but did not prevent the landing.

On the Chinese front the Japs did not have such happy tidings to report to Tokyo. First item of bad news was the recapture by Chinese armies of Kienteh, a key point southwest of Hangchow. Second item was a report that United States bombers had sunk two Japanese naval craft on the Fu river in Kiangsi province.

Meanwhile along the Hangchow-Nanchang railway the Nipponese invaders were being constantly harassed by Chinese guerillas. The official Central News agency disclosed that Chinese farmers had been armed with 30,000 rifles in each county of western and southern Chekiang province. They are organized into units strong enough to destroy small enemy detachments. If superior Japanese forces approach, they withdraw, leaving their villages stripped.

ANTI-INFLATION:
OPA Gets $120,000,000

Price Administrator Leon Henderson was given $120,000,000 with which to fight inflation, when the house of representatives agreed to adopt a conference committee's recommendations to compromise its differences with the senate.

The outspoken Henderson thus got $75,000,000 less for financing his operations than he had originally asked for, but actually $45,000,000 more than the house had first voted. Political wiseacres observed that the result was simply an illustration of the old game of give and take. Henderson had first asked for more than he expected, the house first voted less than he actually needed. The finale was a compromise satisfactory to all.

WAR PROFITEERING:
Halted by House

Drastic steps to curb wartime profiteering were taken when the house of representatives passed a bill outlawing commission fees on government contracts, after Chairman Carl Vinson declared that agents, obtaining war contracts for manufacturers were "fleecing American taxpayers."

Testimony presented previously to the house naval committee had disclosed that three Washington firms of so-called "sales engineers" had earned close to $2,000,000 in commission fees on government contracts in the past six months.

LEAHY:
'Eyes and Legs'

Called from retirement to the newly created position of chief of staff to the Commander in Chief, was Adm. William Daniel Leahy, former chief of naval operations and more recently ambassador to Vichy France.

With all the world discussing the prospects of the United States and Britain opening a second front in Europe this year, the appointment of Admiral Leahy to the new position was hailed as significant of supreme efforts ahead. Regarded as an able strategist, Admiral Leahy, in the words of President Roosevelt, will serve as "his eyes and legs and relieve him of many detail duties."

ADMIRAL WILLIAM D. LEAHY

The Chief Executive, however, made it clear that Leahy would not be supreme commander of the United Nations' forces, or even of American forces. Although Mr. Roosevelt did not use the term, it appeared that the admiral would become an assistant commander in chief, ranking all naval and military officers but the President.

AIR LEVIATHANS:
Aid War Effort

Giant airplanes shuttling across the seven seas carrying men and materials for the world's fighting fronts will become an increasingly important arm of Uncle Sam's service of supply, it was disclosed by Brig. Gen. Harold L. George, commanding the air transport forces, who announced that the army would rely on commercial airlines to operate greatly increased numbers of transport planes.

COLLEGE football plans and aims seem to be obscured in a number of fogs and mists so far as the public is concerned. But I can give you one that isn't. This is Maryland university, where Clark Shaughnessy, late of Stanford and the T-formation, is the man on the job.

We have known Shaughnessy for a brief matter of 27 years, since he started coaching back around 1915. Outside of Lonnie Stagg, now with the College of the Pacific, this makes Clark either the dean of present-day coaches, or close to the mark. And I doubt that football has known any better all-around coach, or any coach with a finer influence on his football pupils.

The main point is that Shaughnessy and Maryland, with the full support of President Curly Bird, has set up a 1942 plan that is well worth looking at.

The Maryland System

"In this last spring practice," Shaughnessy said, "we had 87 men out who were divided into four teams, and matched together in games.

CLARK SHAUGHNESSY

"But this is only a starter. Next fall I expect to have at least 500 Maryland students playing football. And I might say I've been spending more time on fellows who never have played the game than on those who have. And it's surprising how many of these like the game and want to play it, once they get the general idea.

"All together in this country we should have over 200,000 young fellows playing football this fall, even though most of them will never make any first or second team."

A Few Arguments

In the course of an evening's conversation it is only natural that a few arguments should develop. One was the matter of the greatest fullback and the greatest running halfback.

Clark's selections were Norman Standlee of Stanford and the Chicago Bears for the fullback job, with George McAfee of Duke and the Bears on the running side.

Our two nominations were Bronko Nagurski at fullback with Cliff Battles as the top ball carrier.

The Maryland mentor was willing to admit that Nagurski was the best all-around football player he ever saw. But he refused to concede the point that any line-battering back could wreck an entire defense the way Standlee could. McAfee was a great ball-carrying back, but I'll string along with Battles.

About the 'T'

Coach Shaughnessy offered three solid reasons in support of football's T-formation.

"First," he said, "it is the type of game the players all want, since it depends more on speed and smartness than mere crushing bulk and power.

"Second, it is the type of play that appeals to the public since it is much more in the open.

"Third, it is the best type of play with which to win games. It is the most effective winning formation football has ever known. It is almost an unlimited threat against any form of defense. You will find the T-formation used more and more, wherever the material is in any way adapted."

Answering a Complaint

One of the main complaints against college football from many outsiders is this: That football is largely a game in which some 25 or 30 trained athletes perform for the benefit of some 30,000 to 50,000 spectators, who get no physical benefit at all.

He may not have the best 30 football players in the country—he doesn't look for anything like this. But he'd like to have the best 500 players, a much more important idea for the general good of all concerned, including the country at large. And to this football arrangement Shaughnessy also has added an all-around conditioning program for the entire student body, which is even more important.

Shaughnessy's idea is to fill all open fields full of football players, to bring them out by the hundreds.

Give Up "Makeshift" Constipation Remedies!

Why fool with constipation? Why try to combat the trouble after it has already made you miserable?

It may well be that your constipation is caused by too little "bulk food" in your diet, for medical science warns that lack of "bulk" is one of the commonest causes of constipation.

If yours is this kind of constipation, those purges and cathartics can give you, at best, only temporary relief. Eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly, on the other hand, corrects the cause by supplying the "bulk food" you lack and must have! Enjoy this crisp, crunchy cereal daily, drink plenty of water, and like so many others, you'll "Join the Regulars"! ALL-BRAN is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not helped by this simple treatment, see a doctor.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

PROFESSOR VS. SUBS

Governor Rex Tugwell of Puerto Rico was flying from his post to the British island of Jamaica a short time ago, and just before he stepped into the plane, the young naval pilot said:

"I don't suppose we'll see anything. But we might as well be ready just in case."

So they loaded the plane with half a dozen depth charges. It was a small transport plane, had no regular bomb bay, so the depth charges were merely placed on the seats

Out over the Caribbean, suddenly the pilot looked down, said, "There she is." Below them with its conning tower above water, was a Nazi submarine

Both the pilot and Governor Tugwell reached for the depth charges, opened the window. But before they could drop even one, the submarine had submerged. The ex-braintruster came home with no submarine scalp in his professorial belt.

EYE TRICK

The war has spawned a number of rackets, designed both to gain deferment for unwilling draftees and to aid others in passing their physical examinations. But the most ingenious to date was uncovered by the navy department.

A Washington doctor has been restoring 20-20 (perfect) eyesight to applicants for commissions — long enough to enable them to pass their "physicals"—by injecting a high-powered drug. The trick was brought to light during an examination of a young commission-seeker with defective vision.

He had been examined three times and each time was told to go home and practice eye exercises But his eyesight remained 31-9, far below the required standard. After the third test, the applicant was told he would be given one more chance. If he flunked again, he would be rejected.

When he returned the fourth time, he amazed the navy eye doctor by passing with a 20-20 mark. Doubting that the exercises had achieved such a phenomenal result, the doctor decided to make a check. He sent the applicant into an adjoining room and kept him there five hours.

Then he was given another examination. This time his vision was found to be 31-9 again.

The applicant finally broke down and admitted that his temporary perfect vision had been due to a shot in the arm given him by a Washington doctor. This doctor, he said, had told him to make sure he was examined within "four or five hours" after the injection, as its effect would last only that long

NAZI FOOD SHORTAGE

Word from inside Germany makes it clear that Nazi officials are anticipating a hard winter, even if Hitler does take the vast granary of South Russia. They have already completed arrangements for emergency food distribution, in anticipation of serious shortages.

The plan calls for community feeding throughout Germany. It would mean that families would no longer sit down to dinner in their own homes, but would line up at a community feeding center for a government handout.

Under this system, the hausfrau would not buy her own provisions, ration cards would be replaced by meal tickets, and one-dish meals of the "stew" type would be handed out several times a week.

Under this system, the Nazis will be able to distribute food supplies more efficiently, with greater use of substitutes, and with equal treatment for all.

Hitler may not see the irony of it, but this system brings him to communism, from which he professes to be so eager to "save Europe."

Such a Racket Couldn't Be Kept From Landlord

The landlord was showing a prospective tenant the premises. Everything seemed to be satisfactory, when the landlord spoke up. "You know, we keep it very quiet and orderly here," he said. "Do you have any children?"

"No, just my wife and myself," was the reply.

"Do you have a piano or radio?"

"No."

"Do you play any musical instruments?"

"No."

"Do you have a cat, or dog, or a parrot?"

"No, but I feel that in all fairness I must tell you my fountain pen scratches when I write."

Medical officers have long recognized tobacco as an aid to morale among our armed forces. Surveys among the men themselves have shown that tobacco is their favorite gift. If you have a friend or relative in the Army, Navy, Marines, or Coast Guard who smokes a pipe or rolls-his-own, nothing would be more appreciated than a pound of his favorite tobacco. Prince Albert, the world's largest-selling smoking tobacco, in the pound can is recommended by local dealers as an ideal gift for men in the service.—Adv.

Kidneys Must Work Well-
For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

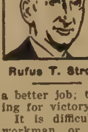
Training for Victory

By Rufus T. Strohm

Dean, International Correspondence Schools

A RECENT survey made in New York City's leading book stores showed a growing demand for books with titles such as "How Your Business Can Help Win the War," "War and Wartime Production," "Do You Want to Be a Foreman," "Better Foremanship," "How to Supervise People," and many technical handbooks.



Rufus T. Strohm

The increasing interest in books of this type indicate that more and more people are striving to learn how to do a better job; they are really training for victory.

It is difficult for any foreman, workman, or unskilled laborer to spend his spare time reading and studying, especially after he has put in a day of hard work. It is that extra margin of effort, however, that will spell the difference between victory and defeat in this war. The enthusiasm for the job cannot be doubted when a man goes home in the evening and spends his leisure hours with a book that tells him how to be a better foreman or how to do his job in a more expert manner.

There is nothing glamorous or romantic about study as such, but the ambitious individual sees far beyond the pages of print into the work of the next day when he may approach a task with greater knowledge and confidence. He is more certain of himself and his place in the world.

The man who prepares is the man who dares.

Defense Councils Strengthened

County Defense Councils of the various Alabama counties have been strengthened by addition of County Agents to their membership. Provision for this was made by the Alabama State Defense Council at a recent meeting. It was unanimously agreed that the County Agent in each county would be a valuable addition to the local Defense Council, to act as contact man with farm groups in the "all-out" war effort. Governor Frank M. Dixon, Chairman of the State Defense Council, is notifying County Agents of their appointment.

About half the money to be raised this Fall by the Alabama War Chest is to go to the United Service Organizations, and thus will be expended for direct benefit of men in the Armed Forces. The USO maintains centers in various cities and towns, to provide for the needs and welfare of men in training. There they are assured of friendly welcome and desirable contacts, provided facilities for reading and writing and varied entertainment of approved type.

In the First World War, more than a thousand "drives" were staged in Alabama and citizens were called on to contribute at random to agencies often operating without supervision or approval from any recognized source. To avoid this multiplication of appeals and be sure that money contributed goes for worthy causes,, Governor Frank M. Dixon recently called a meeting which brough to the Capitol several hundred business and civic leaders from all parts of Alabama. They organized the Alabama War Chest, which will consolidate wartime appeals into a single drive, proceeds to go to approved agencies.

The War Chest Budget, approved by the State Defense Council at a recent meeting, calls for raising $589,500, in a statewide drive for which tentative date has been fixed at Oct. 20th. Of this amount, $272,000 was allotted to the USO. The Navy Relief Society was assigned $42,500, and the YMCA, $10,000. The Budget also made provision for aid to distressed War Prisoners' Aid Committee of the peoples of Allied Nations who have suffered in fighting the common enemy. China, invaded and devastated by the Japanese for more than five years, headed the list, $60,000 being alloted for Chinese Relief; while $35,000 was set aside for Russian Relief; $25,000 each for Greek and British Relief purposes; and $5,000 to the Queen Wilhelmina Fund for the Dutch Relief. Provision was also made for a contingency fund of $35,000 and $50,000 to be divided among and retained by counties reaching their quotas, to be used for local war purposes. Only about five percent of the Burget was set aside for "overhead," $15,000 for administration expenses for one year, and $15,000 for campaign expenses. The Budget was prepared after careful study by a committee of outstanding business men, headed by Oscar Wells, Birmingham banker as Chairman.

NATIONWIDE SCRAP CAMPAIGN STARTS THIS WEEK

Fox Hunters Hold Annual Meet

The Chilton County Fox Hunters Association held its fifth annual hunt on Wed. the 22nd day of July 1942, at 6:30 p. m. The hunt was held at about seven miles northeast of Clanton, Ala., near the banks of Yellowleaf Creek. The Association served its guest with delicious barbecued chicken, pork and kid together with all that goes with a fine supper. Although the picnic was called for 6:30 p. m. the fox hunters and their friends from all over the county began to gather at the hunting grounds early in the afternoon, where old fox hunters met old friends and retold many old fox hunting stories and met and made many new friends.

By the time the Associations business meeting was called to order by President, Mr. Cohen E. Stapp, of Clanton, Ala. there had gathered at the hunting ground about two hundred hunters and friends. At the business meeting Mr. F. J. (Buddy) Ellison was elected President, and Mr. S. E. Thompson Secretary for the next year. With all business finished the [illegible] was served barbecue, cooked [illegible] soned as only the darkeys in the deep south can prepare.

The horn blowing contest was held after serving the supper. It was found that there are many good horn blowers living in Chilton County, in fact the [illegible] blowers were so good until the [illegible] found that the prize should be [illegible] d between M. John Littlefield [illegible] Buddy Ellison. Mr. George Mc[illegible] l John Bolden both of Clan[illegible], and Mr. Davis of Maplesville were the judges.

Among the hunters who brought their pack of Walkers were, J. F. (Buddy) Ellison, C. E. Stapp, C. D. (Cleve) Littlefield, S. E. Thompson [illegible] Easterling, Joe Mullins, Al[illegible]us Edwards, and Dock Baker, all of Clanton, and J. T. Boswell of Cooper and others.

About 45 hounds were cast, and within five minutes they had struck and jumped a fox, who undoubtedly felt that he too was entitled to feast on some of the fresh kid around the barbecue pit, for he led the pack of hounds down the cast bank of Yellowleaf Creek, for about a half a mile, then turned and ran through the resting grounds and the many excited hunters and spectators. Some thought for a split second that they could ru for a split second that they could run with the pack. One hunter declares that he saw the fox cast a hungry glance at the barbecue pit as he passed however he was being pushed so [illegible] by the whole pack in full cry [illegible] ed to give up thoughts of feasting [illegible] kid. The chase lasted for about [illegible] rs, with most all of the hounds running for the kill. During the race there was a summer shower. Soon after the shower the fox sought safety in a hollow log.

In a few minutes after the first race ended the dogs picked up the trail of another fox and after some real good trailing he was routed and again the pack was in full cry. This race ended about midnight when the fox entered his den in the rock cliffs along the banks of Yellowleaf Creek. In the opinion of the hunters these two foxes were grays. Soon after midnight some of the hounds were heard on Chandler Mountain, which the Red Fox in our county must call their own land, as they seem to defy the hounds to follow them over the rough and rocky course that goes rather hard on the best of feet. The fox ran up one side of the mountain and down the other. By one o'clock most all of the hounds were in the chase on Chandler Mountain and the pack was again in full cry. They were last heard about 10 a. m. the next morning still in full cry. It was not known how this race ended as the pack was out of hearing.

All of the hunters proclaimed the 5th Annual Hunt of the Chilton County Fox Hunters Association one of the finest they had ever attended. Some having attended many hunts includng the Chase National. All during the night the dogs packed well. This hunt and the way the dogs ran will long be remembered and talked of. We have in our county some of the best bred and running Walker Fox Hounds in the world, and some of the finest sportsmen to hunt with. We extend to every fox hunter a cordial invitation to attend our meets, or just come and go hunting with some of the boys.

JEAN DONOVAN HAS INTERESTING PAPERS FROM INDIO-CHINA

Jean Donovan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grover C. Donovan of Clanton Route 5, has some very interesting clippings from this paper and that of news items of her cousin.

Her cousin was John Donovan of Montgomery and Clanton, who resigned his U. S. Army commission early in China's fight for freedom to become chief aviation instructor to the Chinese Government.

Young Donovan's life for the last few years reads like an adventure story out of some writers imagination so full of excitment and travel was it. He was killed in an air battle over Indio-China several months ago. He had many friends in Clanton as he was very close to his cousins and spent a part of every summer visiting friends and relatives here. At the time of his death he was with Brig. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, AVG commander. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Donovan, and grandson of the late Daniel Donovan of Billingsley.

The Treasurer gave her report after which the following new business was transacted: The Club voted to donate $25-00 to the Chilton County High School Band to purchase one uniform; Plans were made for the Club to help make the departure of the August selectees more cheerful; The Club pledged to have 10 members attend the Red Cross meeting and help make and pack surgical dressings from August through December.

In addition to the business, a very instructive program on "Pilotism" was conducted by Olive Fiquette. Laura Little gave questions and answers on Pilotism and Mary Will Browder gave a report on "What Pilot International Expects of Local Clubs". An interesting contest was enjoyed by all Pilots.

After a delightful social half-hour, the club adjourned to meet with Dottie and Flora Harris on August 11th.

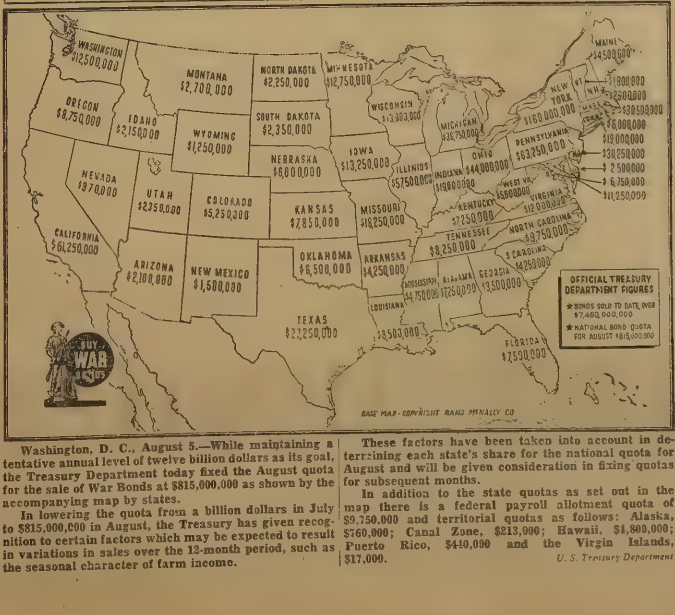
Official U. S. Treasury War Bond Quotas for August



Washington, D. C., August 5.—While maintaining a tentative annual level of twelve billion dollars as its goal, the Treasury Department today fixed the August quota for the sale of War Bonds at $815,000,000 as shown by the accompanying map by states.

In lowering the quota from a billion dollars in July to $815,000,000 in August, the Treasury has given recognition to certain factors which may be expected to result in variations in sales over the 12-month period, such as the seasonal character of farm income.

These factors have been taken into account in determining each state's share for the national quota for August and will be given consideration in fixing quotas for subsequent months.

In addition to the state quotas as set out in the map there is a federal payroll allotment quota of $9,750,000 and territorial quotas as follows: Alaska, $760,000; Canal Zone, $213,000; Hawaii, $4,800,000; Puerto Rico, $440,000 and the Virgin Islands, $17,000.

MISS TUCKER JOINS ARMY NURSES CORPS

Miss Edna Earl Tucker daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Tucker of Maplesville Ala., Route No. 1, left Birmingham, Saturday p. m. for Kelly Field, Texas where she will take up her duties as army nurse.

Miss Tucker finished High School at Isabella in May 1937. In January 1939 she entered the West End Baptist Hospital for nurses training; In January 1942 she graduated from this hospital with high honors.

Immediately after graduating she accepted a position in the operating room of the same hospital as surgical nurse. Here she obtained a fine record of good service, and made a host of friends who will miss her very much. She remained with this position until her assignment to Kelly Field.

We wish for her the very best of health and success and when our brave boys come marching home, she with many other brave girls who have joined up with Uncle Sam, who felt that they too had a duty to perform will come marching home, happy over the knowledge that they too had a part in the Glorious Victory they have wrought.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Russian Crisis Heightened as Nazis Push on Toward Caucasus Oil Fields; 4,000,000 Men in Service, Says FDR; Japs Resume Offensive in New Guinea

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union

Attorney General Francis Biddle (right), who headed the prosecution of the eight Nazi saboteurs before the military commission, is shown as he left the U. S. Supreme court in company with Oscar S. Cox, assistant solicitor general, after he fought the defendants' effort to have the Supreme court transfer their trial from the military to civil courts.

RUSSIA:
Nazi Steamroller

Inexorably the Nazi's monster war machine had forced the Russians back mile by mile from Kharkov to beyond Rostov in the lower reaches of the Don basin.

Throughout the cruel retreat of 250 miles Red Marshal Simeon Timoshenko had shrewdly played his string out. His formula: Fall back before the superior Nazi onslaught; contest every inch stubbornly; inflict the maximum damage on the invading Germans.

By thus staying his hand he had kept his own army intact and had forced the Germans to extend themselves. But the Nazi resources in men and machines had seemed to be without limit, for it was reported that 12 fresh divisions and 10,000 tanks had been poured into the conflict after the fall of Rostov.

Hitler was said to be willing to gamble the lives of a million young Germans to gain control of the Russian oil fields of the Caucasus. To turn aside the onrushing Axis flood, General Timoshenko had thrown his Red army reserves into a titanic struggle for the preservation of Russia.

The grimness of the situation was underscored by Premier Stalin's sharp order to his armies: "Not one step back! Every officer and man must stand his ground and fight to the bitter end."

Inspired by Stalin's appeal, Red forces defending the approaches to Stalingrad hurled the German thrust back. The Russians made a determined stand on the Don river south of Tsimylansk, while on the north flank at Voronezh they dislodged the enemy from strong positions.

4,000,000 MEN:
In U. S. Service

President Roosevelt told the nation that with 4,000,000 men under arms, the slack in America's food supplies is being rapidly taken up and shortages may be expected in specific things to eat. He emphasized, however, that there will be no shortage of food and that America will have enough to eat.

To illustrate his point, the President cited temporary shortages of meat in several sections of the country. A number of similar shortages are likely to occur, he said, and listed these reasons for the beef scarcity: 1.—The usual off-season for beef; 2—People with more money than ever before trying to buy more expensive cuts; 3—Greater consumption of meat by the armed forces than they ever ate in civilian life; 4—The necessity of buying in advance for the services, which further tightens the shortages.

The problem of shortages, the President declared, ties in directly with the scrap salvage campaigns now under way—iron and steel scrap, waste fats, tin cans and rubber.

Mr. Roosevelt said he was appealing to every householder, every shopkeeper, every citizen "to dig deep into his attic, cellar, barn and back yard and turn in every ounce of scrap useful to war production."

ALEUTIANS:
Unified Air Command

Vaporous as the fogs that haunt the Aleutian islands was the announcement by the navy of the creation of a unified command of all aircraft operations in that area.

The announcement was purposely vague, however, for as it explained, exact details as to command relationships and the exact location of headquarters could not be disclosed because they would be of value to the enemy.

EGYPT:
Nature Aids Allies

Superior air power, reinforced mechanized troops and a desolate waste of quick-sand marshes combined to give the British defenders of Egypt the upper hand over Marshal Rommel's Nazi invaders.

The strengthened air power manifested itself in sustained attacks on the German fighting positions, devastating bombing attacks on Tobruk, Matruh and other key Axis supply bases by American as well as RAF planes. The augmented tank forces demonstrated their power in Allied advances from El Alamein on the Mediterranean to the Tel el Eiza sector and in the capture of a substantial number of prisoners and supplies.

Of the favorable factors—the third—the impenetrable marshes of Quattara remained as Rommel's biggest obstacle to reaching his goal of Alexandria and the Suez canal. This vast sink which reaches from the interior of the Sahara to within 35 miles of the Mediterranean coast at El Alamein, prevented the wily Axis general from attempting a flanking movement around the British lines. Although Arab caravans have crossed the tip of the Quattara marshes, the shifting dunes, the quick-sands and the marshy quagmires made the use of tanks and mechanized equipment impossible.

PACIFIC AREA:
Japs in the Jungle

After giving Gen. Douglas MacArthur more than three months time in which to ship men, guns, fighter planes and bombers to the eastern edge of New Guinea, the Japs had resumed offensive movements against Port Moresby and extended aerial feelers toward the Allies' rear bases on the Australian mainland.

The Jap strategy was to advance toward Port Moresby by means of land patrols along a narrow trail leading toward a strategic mountain pass in the Owen Stanley range from their recently won base at Buna.

American and Australian troops demonstrated that they were prepared for the Nipponese infiltration tactics, for Allied patrols drove the Japs back from Kokoda area in the foothills. Specially trained in jungle fighting the Allied troops were able to meet the Japs on their own terms and to deal them their first defeat in a type of fighting that earlier had won Malaya and Singapore for them.

MISCELLANY:

WASHINGTON. — Jurisdiction of President Roosevelt's military commission was upheld by the Supreme court when that body denied the seven Nazi saboteurs the right to have their case heard in civil court. Chief Justice Stone made the announcement, holding that court was not granting the prisoners' plea to file writs of habeas corpus after an army tribunal had completed extensive hearings and testimony as to their guilt.

LONDON: Love is enemy agent No. 1 for British youths training with the royal navy to make commando raids. "It's not drunkenness and careless talk in pubs that causes us the most grief," said an officer. "It's love. We find that in most cases the offender who gives away vital information is a fellow who is not particularly impressive and is trying to be a big shot with some girl."

NEW YORK: New York motorists paying their license fees next year will receive a metal strip reading NY-43 instead of new plates

U. S. MANPOWER:
Total Mobilization?

Mobilization of the total manpower of the United States—estimated at 60 million labor units—was forecast as work proceeded in Washington on the formulation of a national war service bill. This vast reservoir of man power would be assigned as part of the total war effort to essential services in factories, on farms, in laboratories and in educational activities training the nation's youth.

Sponsors of the proposed bill pointed out that it would not only do for this country what the "essential work" order had accomplished for Great Britain but provide additional directives as well.

Back of the sponsorship of the bill, was the urgent belief of the chiefs of the war administration that the longer the war goes on the more imperative will it be for the nation to assign each available man and woman to a specific task in the total war effort.

Looming as a possibility was the registration of 42,000,000 women between the ages of 18 and 65, supplementing the recent registration of all males between the ages of 45 and 64.

LEND-LEASE:
Much More Needed

Critics of the lend-lease administration found ammunition for their offensive when the Office of War Information disclosed that "somewhat less" than 12 per cent of this country's total munitions output was being shipped to America's Allies.

While acknowledging that this was "not as much as they need to do the job," the report declared that in shipments of planes and tanks the proportion was "much higher."

The OWI noted that cash purchases by foreign governments had brought the total war shipments to a figure higher than 12 per cent, but did not name the total.

Although admitting that the lend-lease program was not so large as they wish it to be, the OWI spokesman asked that "other considerations be taken into account."

FARM-BORN PROPHET:
Ford Sees Prosperity

Beginning the 80th year of his life, Henry Ford emphasized his unshaken conviction that beyond the present war lies an era of prosperity unparalleled in the world's history.

The farm-born industrial genius visualized an intensive development of the soil as a preventive of war and as the keystone of a new peaceful world order.

"Intensive production," he said, "means a world busy at work and a friendly, helpful exchange of goods. Such a world has neither time nor incentive for war."

HENRY FORD
"Make idle land work . . ."

Idle land, he added, was a hampering factor and he favored forcing it into production through higher taxation if necessary.

Summing up his philosophy of peace, he declared: "The intensive production of the world's goods, new goods to serve human needs and legitimate desires—that is the broad highway to peace."

HARRY HOPKINS:
17th Groom

Social historians recalled that 16 times before the White House had been the scene of weddings. Thus Lease - Lend Administrator Harry Hopkins and Mrs. Louise Gill Macy became the 17th couple to say "I do" in the historic old mansion on Washington's Pennsylvania avenue.

The close personal relationship between Hopkins and the President was emphasized by the fact that the wedding was held in the White House and witnessed by Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Social historians further recalled that it was 24 years since the last White House wedding had occurred. That was in 1918 when Alice Wilson, niece of President Woodrow Wilson, and the Rev. I. Stuart McElroy were married.

AIR POWER:
'Scourge the Reich'

Even as relays of his four-motored RAF bombers were raining 4,000-pound "block busters" on Hamburg's submarine yards, shipping facilities and war factories, Air Marshal Sir Arthur T. Harris warned Germany that unless it overthrows its Nazi war lords and makes peace, the combined forces of the British and American bombing fleets "will scourge the Third Reich from end to end."

NANA WNU Service

THESE soldiers, sailors, marines, airmen and coast guardsmen have all the work they can handle, but they still have time enough left for arguments, debates and rebuttals of one sort or another.

Grantland Rice

Here is a camp query that covers practically every detail of baseball:

"To help clear up a lot of arguments we've had in this camp would you mind answering the following: Who is (1) the fastest pitcher baseball ever knew; (2) the hardest hitter; (3) the best natural hitter; (4) the best base runner; (5) the best infielder, fielding and hitting?"

Here are the answers from this lookout:

1. Fastest ball pitcher—Walter Johnson, with Lefty Grove second.

2. Hardest hitter—Babe Ruth.

3. Best Natural hitter—Joe Jackson, with Nap Lajoie close.

4. Best base runner—Ty Cobb, going away. Max Carey next.

5. Best infielder—Honus Wagner, great infielder and greater hitter.

Ranking Golfers

Here's another barracks request, this time from a group of golfers:

"How would you rank the golfers from the viewpoint of stroke-making, all-around skill, winning or losing temperaments, putting? If we can get this settled it will shut off a lot of noise in this camp."

1. The best stroke-maker I ever saw, the straightest player, was Harry Vardon.

2. The best combination of stroke-making, hard work and putting belonged to Bobby Jones.

3. The best golfing temperaments I ever ran across were Johnny McDermott, Jerry Travers and Walter Hagen. McDermott and Travers were marvels at concentration. Hagen had less tension. He also had as much golf smartness.

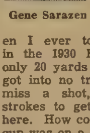
The two best putters I ever saw were Walter Travis and Jerry Travers. In modern play this distinction goes to Horton Smith. Paul Runyan is close.

I've seen Harry Vardon play many rounds of championship golf and I can't recall ever seeing him play a shot from the rough or from a bunker. He was a bad putter, with a nervous stab. It was nothing unusual to see him take three putts from 10 or 12 feet.

About Bobby Jones

Capt. Bobby Jones, taking his training at Mitchel Field before being stationed in a southern sector, believes he worked harder around a course in championship play than anyone else. He was supposed to be "The Machine."

"I was far from this," he said recently. "Machines don't take sevens. Gene Sarazen used to say you can't take a seven on any hole and win. I had three sevens in my last round at Winged Foot in the National Open of 1929. I've had a flock of sevens, which meant I had to work my head off on the other holes.



Gene Sarazen

"The oddest seven I ever took was at Hoylake in the 1930 British Open. I was only 20 yards off the green in two, got into no trouble, actually didn't miss a shot, and yet took five strokes to get down for my seven here. How could this happen? The cup was on a mound. My first chip shot ran up fairly close, stopped, and then rolled back. My second one slipped by the cup, caught a deep slant and trickled 30 feet on beyond. Then I took three putts.

The Worst Temptation

"Championship golf," Bobby said, "is largely resisting the temptation to quit after one or two bad holes. You begin to feel you can't win, so why keep on punishing yourself? The winner has to work for it all the way, take his beating here and there, and then continue to work, harder than ever.

"I believe the hardest-working golfer I ever saw is Ben Hogan. Ben works over every type of shot, even the ones that look simple. He takes nothing for granted.

"Hogan has made no attempt to master any variety of shots. He sticks to a few simple ones, concentrates on these, and never gets discouraged. Byron Nelson is another hard worker, although Byron can play more shots. But no one works quite as hard, round after round, month after month, as Hogan works.

"I had 18 years of tournament golf, from 12 to 30, and I know the nerve and mental beating one has to take if you are out to win. Just one lapse is enough to cost two strokes. There never was a golf shot that played itself."

WALL PAPER WITH SMALL PATTERN AND BORDER MAKES ANGLES LESS DISTINCT · CURTAINS FROM CEILING TO FLOOR ACCENT HEIGHT OF ROOM
ROOM WITH SLANTING WALLS AND LOW CEILING

IF IT ever seemed to you that the walls and ceiling of an attic room were coming down on your head you know how the owner of this room felt before she began to experiment a bit with wallpaper and furnishings.

Large samples of wallpaper were thumbtacked in place to test them. Stripes only accented the slant of the walls. Plain papers brought out angles with sharp shadows. Large designs made the room seem smaller. Wide borders made the ceiling appear to be even lower. But when a paper with tiny evenly spaced pattern and narrow border was tried all these defects seemed to melt away. The long curtains with ruffles on three sides also helped to make the ceiling seem higher. Pink and white striped material to repeat the wallpaper color was used for the chair cover and dressing table skirt. The chair is a remodeled rocker and the orange crate dressing table has hinged arms. Directions for them may be found on pages 4 and 19 of SEWING, Book 5.

Buried Hangars

The type "C" hangars of the RAF in England even defy detection by strangers walking around them, says Collier's. They are vast storage rooms about 50 feet underground, connected by an elevator to a roomless farmhouse on the surface.

As the building has no runways for the planes, the incoming ships are towed from the nearest airport into an attached shed, while the outgoing ones are catapulted from another on the opposite side of the house.

As the British Attack Rommel

A haze of desert dust raised by advancing tanks and the dry wind of the desert furnishes a grit-laden screen which half obscures men and tanks of the British Scots guards as they advance to attack Field Marshal Rommel's Nazi Afrika Korps on the El Alemein front in Egypt. The desert dust often curtails both Axis and Allied air operations.

Yankee Ingenuity Helps Save 18

Two raft loads of survivors from an American freighter torpedoed in the Atlantic approach a rescue vessel. Note the rough shelters on the rafts. When their vessel went down, the 18 men paddled amidst the wreckage, picking up bits of board, canvas and paper to construct the canopies which protected them from the sun's hot rays during their 19 days adrift.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

U. S. FOREIGN LEGION

Most people don't realize it, but there are many enemy aliens who are officers in the U. S. army. In fact the army, true to the American tradition of the melting pot, is made up of American citizens of almost every national and racial [illegible] ground, including 2,720 German aliens, not to mention 2,700 Germans who are naturalized citizens

The Italian total is 2,472 aliens and 3,781 naturalized. In addition, there are 644 Japanese in the army, plus 3,000 Japanese-Americans, formerly of the Hawaiian national guard, most of whom are assigned to the 100th battalion at Fort McCoy, [illegible]

The army goes on the assumption that any man who wants to fight can be a good soldier. Of course, the "enemy aliens" are checked and double-checked before they are admitted for enlistment. The men who pass these tests are found to be even more zealous for the defeat of the dictators than the average American.

Latin-American Battalions.

To make the melting pot more complex, the army has a Filipino infantry battalion, and is forming a battalion for Norwegians in the U. S. and Norwegian-Americans. Instruction and conversation in this unit will be in the Norwegian language.

Equally eager to fight are thousands of Latin-Americans, especially from the nearer countries, such as Cuba and Mexico. The office of the U. S. military attache in Havana is flooded with applications from young Cubans who want to wear the uniform of Uncle San Most of them would renounce Cuban citizenship if necessary.

But what they do not realize is that if they come to the United States, they are likely to be swept into the U. S. army, whether they like it or not. Within five days after entering this country, aliens must register for the draft, and they had better leave the country pronto if they don't want to be inducted.

Not yet arranged, but highly desirable, is a Latin-American battalion. There are now ten Latin-American countries which have declared war on the Axis, and thousands of their young men want to follow up that declaration with something more than police duty at home.

BACK-BREAKERS

An American diplomat returning from Italy tells this revealing story about the true sentiments of the Italian people.

In his office at the U. S. embassy in Rome he found a clerk, an Italian girl, crying. When he inquired what was wrong, she replied: "Oh, I'm ashamed to be an Italian. You remember what boasting the Fascists did about the Greek campaign? They said: 'We will break their kidneys.' But everybody knows who really beat the Greeks; it was not our army; it was the Germans. But now—have you seen the poster on the streets this morning?" And the girl broke into tears again.

The diplomat looked outside at the poster, which that day was appearing all over Italy. It showed a Greek soldier lying on his face, with a steel bar across his back. On top of the bar was the Fascist insigne, and on the side, the swastika

The caption read: "We said we would break their kidneys. Mussolini is always right."

Note: All reports from Italy tell cf a growing disgust with the Mussolini government, and a growing hatred of the Germans. But the people are too cowed to revolt.

Trustbusting Thurman Arnold hails from the small town of Laramie, Wyo., and he doesn't see any reason why he should hire a chauffeur to drive his car. So he drives it himself.

One evening, after he and Mrs. Arnold had been dinner guests of Mrs. Evalyn (Hope Diamond) McLean, they were going out the front door, when the doorman said, in his most elegant manner, "Shall I call your car, Mr. Arnold?"

With a dour expression on his face, Arnold said, "You can call it, but I don't think it will come."

Telling time in the Navy is on the 24-hour system. Morning hours are from one to twelve, but afternoon hours are from 1300 to 2400 (midnight). So if you ask a sailor the time and he says "seventeen," subtract 12 and you get five o'clock in the afternoon. It's simpler if you ask him what cigarette he smokes. Chances are he'll say: "Camel," for Camel is the favorite cigarette among Navy men as well as among men in the Army, Marines, Coast Guard. (Based on actual sales records from service men's stores.) ALABAMA PEACHES

Some of the largest and finest peaches ever seen in Montgomery have been on sale in the markets and on the fruitstands for the past few days. Most of them are Chilton county products from orchards near Clanton. If Alabama can produce this kind of peaches regularly Georgia had better look to her laurels.

"You cannot fight a total war on part time," asserts Harold Denny, American correspondent, just returned from prisons in Germany and Italy.

He believes the American people fail to realize the grimness of the situation, making the same mistake that the British made when the struggle began.

Mr. Denny knows something about the great conflict. He was captured by the Axis during a tank battle in Libya. He has witnessed the all-out preoccupation of the Axis for war making. Naturally, he knows that it exceeds our intenseness and he would like to see the average American convinced that it is his business to do something about winning the war.

The challenge comes to those on the home front, just as effectively as it presents itself to those in the armed services. This is a new type of war. It is an industrial struggle such as the world never before witnessed. It is a home-front war for millions of families, such as the world never saw before. It is a war demanding the full cooperation of every citizen of the warring nations to an extent never seen before.

For the benefit of those who wonder whether huge fortunes are being made out of this war we call attention to the revelation made by Rep. Vinson, of Georgia, chairman of the House Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. Vinson announces that three companies have "re-negotiated" their contracts, with savings of $100,000,000, $73,000,000 and $135,000,000, respectively, to the government. Altogether the Congressman estimates that billions of dollars will be saved before the war is over.

Naturally if companies give up such sums there must have been enormous profits involved in their original contracts with the government. Interestingly, it is pointed out that each company took action after investigations were underway or after officers had been served with subpoenas to appear before the House Committee.

Chilton County News
Clanton, Alabama

Dear Sir:

I was inducted into the United States Army July 11, 1942 at Fort McClellan, Alabama. Was shipped to Fort McPherson, Ga., and remained there seven days. Passed the examination and entered Air Corps along with two other Chilton County boys. Henry Clay Nix Maplesville; and Columbus Cook, Stanton. We arrived at Reception Center, Miami Beach, Fla., July 28, along with thousands of young men from all over the United States.

The scenery here is very beautiful with rows of palm and cocanut trees line the snow white sand covered beach. You see many pretty bathing beauties, but none compare with the belles of Chilton County.

We have black out here at all times, so one can't realize a real one until he has been along the war restricted coast. Of course we country boys never did use a light.

We are staying in swanky hotels and getting three good meals a day. When the war is over we, Chilton County boys would make good house servants, because we do our own washing, clean our own rooms, and wash dishes. Take a hint you single girls, because you might need a helper.

I am proud of the fact that I'm from Chilton County, the best place on the map. We three boys will show Japan and Germany what Chilton County has contributed to Uncle Sam's Air Corps, and we want the backing of all our beloved ones.

We will not let you down.

Thanking you for publishing this.

Yours Truly,

MORAL ECHOES

By Rev. D. W. Haskew, D. D.

When he was young in the ministry a certain preacher bought a blank book and placed it on his desk. This book was labeled, "Complaints of members against each other." When one of his members would come in and begin to criticise another member he would reach for this book of complaints saying, "Hold a moment. I will just write out your criticisms so that I will know them and so that I can correctly present them to the board." At the sight of the complaint book and the ready hand of the parson, he was never allowed to write a line. That clergyman kept that book on his desk for forty years, but was never allowed to write a line in it. The most of us are doing a lot of complaining, a lot of criticising, but none of us is willing that our complaints shall go into writing. A good plan is to refrain from criticising any one until we are willing that the criticism is written for safe reference.

Wilson Wyatt, the mayor of Louisville, was to make an important address and to be sure of his speech he spoke it and made a record of it. Then he sat down to have the record played back to him. He wanted to know the depth of his thinking and the manner of his delivery. When the record started the mayor perked up to listen, but as it proceeded he slumped to rest and before the last of his speech the mayor was fast asleep. I have often thought that if those of us who are up to speak, or preach, had to sit and listen to ourselves that we too would join many in our audience in peaceful slumber. Never blame any one for going to sleep in your audience, that person may not be hearing anything.

When people do you a wrong, or when they do a wrong of any kind, have you ever tried forgiving them? There is a story of a soldier boy who was guilty of so many offenses that his commanding officer despaired of ever being able to do anything with him. The young man being under arrest for the eighth time the officer consulted another officer and asked if he could make any suggestion as to what he could do to save the soldier boy. The officer replied, "Try forgiving him." The soldier was then brought in for trial and asked what he had to say for himself. With his eyes upon the ground he replied, "Nothing sir, except I am sorry." On hearing this the offjcer spoke kindly, "Being that you are sorry, we have decided to forgive you." The young man stood dazed for a moment, then burst into tears, saluted and walked away. He became the bravest and the best soldier in the command. There is something about forgiveness that is inspiring and winning.

The father of Daniel Webster had a beautiful garden and a great big fat woodchuck visited that garden and helped himself to all the vegetables that he wanted. Ezekial Webster set a trap and caught the thief. The two brothers, Ezekial and Daniel, disagreed as to what should be done with the culprit. Ezekial wanted him killed, but Daniel wanted to set him free. They decided to have a trial with their father as judge. Ezekial presented his case showing the vicious habits of the woodchuck, the damage that he had done and the value of the pelt on the market. In concluding he asked for th death penalty. Then Daniel arose, a boy of ten summers, and he started his speech by sayig that the woodchuck was one of God's creation that had no sense of right and wrong. He warmed up to his subject as he pictured the little animal as having a right to life, food and liberty, and his oratory rang out as he made a plea that the beautiful, innocent little thing be given his freedom. While the little orator spoke his father shouted to the other boy saying, "Zeke, Zeke, do let the woodchuck go." Blessed is that individual wh can be dealt an injury and yet deal out forgiveness.

Care In Cotton Picking Pays Off

Farmers can hit a wartime blow and at the same time improve the grade and price of their cotton this fall by observing a few simple rules on picking cotton.

J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist says that cotton should be picked promptly and frequently when the bolls are just opened and mature, but never when the cotton is wet or green. If the cotton seems wet or green after picking it should be spread to dry. Be sure that cotton is free of trash. Store seed cotton in a dry place and stir frequently to prevent heating.

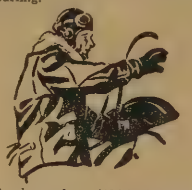
Hog Marketing May Become Jammed Later

Unusually heavy marketing of hogs this fall and winter may jam storage and transportation facilities unless growers weigh the problem well in advance, warns W. H. Gregory, extension livestock specialist.

"Insofar as possible," he said, "farmers should make plans to have their spring pigs ready for market before Thanksgiving and after February 1, in order to ease the unusually heavy load which ordinarily comes in December and January."

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Winter flying jackets for both the Army and Navy Air Corps are regular equipment for our aviators. They cost from $12 to $18 and are made of horsehide leather lined with sheep shearling.



Purchase of one $18.75 War Bond, for which you receive $25 in 10 years, will pay for one of these jackets so necessary for our airmen flying at high altitudes and in northern climes. So you and your neighbors can do your bit by investing at least 10 percent of your salary every pay day in War Bonds to help pay the cost of this equipment for intrepid American flyers. Join the parade, and help top the War Bond Quota in your county. U. S. Treasury Department

Alabama's hog production is up 28 per cent for 1942. Through June approximately 711,000 pigs had been saved, compared to 554,000 for the same period of 1941 and a ten-year average of 582,000.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

We love Clanton and its people very much. Our neighbors and friends could not have been more thoughtful during the sickness and death of our father had we been here all our life. Of course there is no way in which to thank each of you personally for your sympathy and help, but from the bottom of our hearts we do thank you. If there is ever an opportunity to repay all of you, even in a small way, for what you did for us and what your kindness meant to us please let us know.

The Tuckers.

Many years ago Rev. W. S. Cox was preaching at a little church over in Coosa County. The little church was eight miles on the other side of the river. Each Sunday that was preaching day at the church Rev. Cox would hitch a mule to the buggy, drive to the river, cross the ferry there and drive on to the little church where he would meet with his "flock" and they would have a big meeting. On this particular Sunday there had been a big rain the Saturday night before and when the Reverend got to the river the boatman told him that he couldn't take him across. Now in those days, some forty years ago, a little thing like a swollen river meant little to Rev. Cox in contrast to disappointing the faithful members of his church beyond the river. He borrowed a boat, went up the stream some few hundred yards and took off all his clothes and wrapped his Bible up in them and crossed to the other side safely. He then got out of the boat, washed the mud from his feet and put on his clothes and walked the eight miles to fulfill his preaching duties at the little church There's a wonderful lesson in that little story.

Do we hear a rumbling of Labor trouble over at the mill? ...We understand Mr. J. A. Mahan has made an automobile tire out of wood and covers it with an old tire and rides merrily along...Vatchel Lindsey says that he has noticed that the blackberries that he picks out of a graveyard taste different from those gathered else where....Chas. Wade is really getting some good pictures for the Clanton Theatre goers. If he keeps on we will have to take back all those things we been thinking about the ones he's been getting....

Hooray, hooray, we have moved to the country whoray, we moved to the Dennis place below South Clanton Tuesday and first thing we bought a batch of baby chicks and stuff. The chicks were by Jones Seed and Feed Co. and the moving was by John Mullins & Co.

Virginia Is Widening Many of Its Highways

RICHMOND, VA.—One of the major continuing projects of the Virginia highway department which is being undertaken this year is bringing up to a 22-foot width many of the 16, 18 and 20-foot roads now existing throughout the state.

Highway officials said that when, by traffic count, there are as many as 2,100 or 2,200 vehicles a day over a road, it is generally found necessary to increase the two-lane, 22-foot width road to a three-lane highway. When the traffic count reaches a total of 4,000 vehicles a day, four lanes are found necessary to avoid congestion.

Meanwhile, two-lane roads which call for a width of 22 feet have been under construction only in the last two or three years. Most of the roads of lesser width were built in the late 1920s and are too narrow for present-day traffic.

This widening program is being carried out even on secondary roads, if they take enough traffic to warrant the change.

Spanked by Japs in 1901, Vet, 69, to Get Revenge

NEW YORK.—George Humbie, 69 years old, who was retired by the navy in 1922 after 32 years' service, reported for active duty and said he hopes to settle an old score with the Japanese.

He had a disagreement with the Japanese police when his ship, the gunboat Concord, was in Yokohama in 1901.

"They used their flat swords on me and I couldn't sit down at a mess take for a week," he said. "The Japs hated the Americans even then and I've never forgotten that licking. It started smarting again when I heard about Pearl Harbor, and although it's been a long time to wait my chance has come now."

Hurled Paint Identifies Thieves' Car for Police

SUMMIT, N. J.—Caretaker Thomas Smith saw two boys filling the gasoline tank of two large automobiles at a private pump on the Arthur R. Wendell estate.

He waited until the cars started down a driveway and then heaved a jar of paint at one as it sped past.

Sergt. Frank Martin of the Summit police said that the car was easily identified when spotted later by radio-patrol officers. The boys, both juveniles, were held for a hearing.

TO Shoot More We Must Talk Less

The daily use of long distance and local telephone service throughout the "war busy" Southeast is mounting in such increasing volume that telephone lines and central offices are becoming seriously congested with the burden of calls.

We cannot relieve congestion by adding to our facilities because the materials needed are now being used in the manufacture of weapons of war (a machine gun in action uses in four minutes enough copper to make a mile and a half of telephone wire), so in order to keep present telephone facilities available for vital war calls we must all talk less.

With your help, which we are confident you will voluntarily give, we can keep long distance and local telephone lines clear for the urgent messages of war agencies and industries engaged in war work.

How You Can Help

Long Distance Calls
Make only the most necessary long distance calls. Be brief.
Place your calls before 9 a. m.; between noon and 2 p. m.; 5 and 7 p. m.; or after 9 p. m.
Stay near your telephone after you have placed your call.
Plan what you want to say and so avoid the necessity for another call.
Whenever possible, call by number.

Local Calls
Use your telephone sparingly — avoid unnecessary calls.
Be sure to replace your receiver on the hook.
Look up numbers you are not sure of and help avoid the calling of wrong numbers.
Make your conversations brief.
Teach your children good telephone habits.

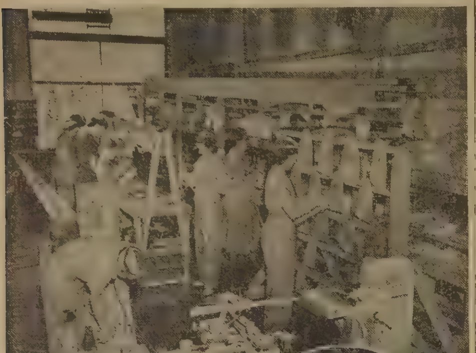
Birth of a Glider

Glider pilots must first gain their experience through "training gliders," which are now coming off the production line for the army air forces. One of the factories engaged exclusively in manufacturing them is the Laister-Kauffman plant at St. Louis, where these pictures were taken.



The TG-4A is a two-place glider which weighs less than 500 pounds and takes a minimum of scarce materials to build. Jack Laister, the designer, and president of the plant, is famous in amateur glider and soaring circles.

A large part of the construction work at this plant is being handled by women. Picture at top shows a group of them busy in the rib and wing assembly section.

Potato Breeders Make Test Plantings

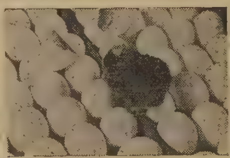
Disease-Free Potatoes Only Control of Ring Rot

How new knowledge of plant science can lift some of the load from the mind of a worried farmer is illustrated by results of test plantings reported by potato breeders of the U. S. department of agriculture.

Ring rot is a serious potato disease. It appeared in Canada in 1931, in Maine in 1932, and spread rapidly causing serious crop losses. The only effective control is to plant nothing but disease-free seed potatoes. Traces of the disease in seed stock are difficult to detect and may lead to serious losses. Ring rot has been reported from 37 states.

If scientific knowledge had not advanced in the last 100 years, says Dr. R. M. Salter, chief of the bureau of plant industry, the potato industry and the country generally might well worry over the possibility of a potato famine such as Ireland had in the Hungry Forties.

Potato specialists do not know of a gold commercial variety that will grow in spite of ring rot. But authors of the article report a trial of 54 varieties artificially inoculated to insure a thorough test. Nearly all were severely diseased, but a precious few came through uninjured.



"Come on out, guys and gals, see what's cookin'," says this newly hatched chick waiting for pals.

Various Spuds Tested.

These include two imported varieties "not commercially promising" and several seedlings. Half the hybrids of the cross between "President"—imported from England—and the valuable American variety, Katahdin, showed no infection. Several other seedlings showed signs of resistance.

These tests indicate that resistance to ring rot can be inherited by the potato. The "President" variety is not commercially valuable, but from a breeding standpoint it looks to be almost priceless. Based on these tests and their experience it should not be very difficult to produce varieties resistant to ring rot with good commercial qualities.

Agriculture in Industry

Alfalfa

Although alfalfa is a fairly recent arrival in the fields of the United States and Canada, it is one of the oldest crops known to man and flourished in Asia and Europe for centuries. For the last 20 years, our farmers have given it great preference and the acreage has nearly doubled.

Being especially rich in vitamins, it seems to offer good possibilities for industrial uses. A pilot plant is soon to be set up to extract pigments from dried alfalfa leaves. These will be used in coloring soaps and foods and in preparing medicines.

Some experiments also have been made in extracting alfalfa juice for human consumption so it may sometime appear on our breakfast tables. At Michigan State college, scientists have been working on the problem on making plastics out of alfalfa in the same way that soybeans are utilized.

At present, the chief industrial product is alfalfa meal which is merely hay ground into coarse particles which can be fed to animals without loss, and can be shipped more cheaply than baled hay. It can be used in mixed feeds for such small animals as rabbits and poultry. Some of the meal in refined form has been used in breakfast foods for humans and experiments have been made to add carotene extraction to tonics and candy.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

PEARL BUCK, head of the East and West association, which promotes cultural understanding between the Orientals and ourselves, wants a list of movies which really represent American life. She ought to include "Pride of the Yankees," starring Gary Cooper, with Teresa Wright playing opposite him. It's the story of Lou Gehrig's life—shows an earnest, rather shy young man who loved his mother and worked hard, attaining success and the honest admiration and affection of his countrymen. A typical American, we hope.

It's too bad that the dim-out forbade the use of Kleig lights for the opening of this swell picture. Never did another picture have such a first night; it took place simultaneously in 40 RKO houses in New York, and more than 100,000 people attended it.

If Richard Haydn develops indigestion it will be the fault of the writers of "No Time for Love." That's the new Claudette Colbert-Fred MacMurray comedy, and Haydn eats in every one of his scenes. Might sound like heaven to some, but not to him!

They probably won't give Jerry Bulkley a chance to dance in "Du Barry Was a Lady"; probably won't even know that she's a dancer. She's gone to Hollywood with a group of fellow models, and if they have an opportunity to do more than just look pretty they'll be lucky. New York models aren't very enthusiastic about Hollywood any more; most of them refuse to go. Even $200 a week for three months or so doesn't tempt them, since they may never face a movie camera in that time, and when they come home folks think they just didn't make good.

Sounds strange, but here's what we hear from Metro about an important role in Katharine Hepburn's picture, "Keeper of the Flame." The actor chosen will portray the star's husband, and will appear in seven important scenes before meeting death in an accident. After that he'll still be a key figure in the picture. But—he'll never speak a word. Swell chance to be paid for keeping mum!

* * *

The latest addition to the new crop of players recently signed by Metro is William Bishop, nephew of Helen Hayes. He's six feet two, with dark brown hair and eyes, and has won fame as a football player. He's played in stock and in various stage plays in New York; in two of them he supported his famous aunt. He has also appeared on her radio program. A coming star, maybe.

Another newcomer to the screen is Lenore Aubert, chosen by Samuel Goldwyn to play opposite Bob Hope in "They Got Me Covered." Born in Jugoslavia, daughter of a general in the Austrian army in pre-Hitler days, she worked in pictures in Vienna. She was discovered by a talent scout while appearing in a play in Los Angeles. Goldwyn did more testing for this role than he has for any in several years. It's a break for Miss Aubert—she has been signed to a seven-year contract.

Bob Hawk's "How Am I Doin' " show has been on the air for exactly half a year, and in that time 211 contestants have walked off with winnings totaling $15,213. The average take, according to Quizmaster Hawk, is from $10 to $480; Mrs. William Riley, a South Bend, Ind., housewife, is the top winner. Six contestants have gone over the $400 mark in the last 26 weeks.

His Will and Way

By H. I. KING

(McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.)

JETHRO GORTON was a bachelor of large wealth and he had a nephew named Cyril. That name, Cyril, stuck in the crop of Jethro. Cyril himself liked it—not realizing that, with his rich uncle's detestation of "fancy names," it might prove to be an expensive luxury to him. Oliver Gorton, Cyril's father, had been the exact opposite of his brother Jethro. While the hard-headed elder brother had gone in for making money and parsimony, the light-headed younger brother had "whooped it up" as a youth, cultivated society and later, he had married a penniless but pretty, socially elect young lady.

The poor social butterfly died when Cyril was born and Oliver Gorton did not survive long after her death.

"If the boy's name had been anything but Cyril, now," thought old Jethro. "If it had been a sensible name like—like mine, for instance—I might—" He was a lonely old man, and the craving had grown on him as his years crept toward their close for someone to fix his affections on—and leave his money to. "Cyril indeed!" the old man said to himself. "However, I'll provide moderately for the young cub.

And so it was. Cyril was sent to a boarding school, and then to a technical school from which he was graduated as an electrical engineer.

"Whether you live or you starve to death will depend entirely upon yourself," Jethro told him.

"I understand that, sir," replied Cyril. "You have frequently conveyed to me that idea. I am very grateful for what you have done for me and it is my hope some day to be able to pay back to you the money you have expended on me."

"Words!" sneered Jethro. "Well, you have been graduated three weeks now. Got a job?"

"Yes, sir. With Peters, Stimson and Jaggers. I go to work tomorrow." This conversation took place in Jethro's library—which was also his office. Old man Gorton was officially put down as "retired from business." But men like Jethro never really retire. He still had in his employ a stenographer-typist-secretary.

She was a pretty young lady about twenty-five years old—the same age as Cyril—and her name was Rachel Granger. Her father had been secretary for Jethro before her; and she had inherited the job and the small salary. As near as one could judge Jethro did not know whether Rachel was pretty or not, young or old. But to Cyril she was ideal. The two had seen more of each other than Jethro was aware of—or rather than they thought he was aware of. You could never be quite sure about what Jethro knew and what he didn't.

The conversation between the uncle and the nephew recorded above took place before Rachel who, busily typing letters, pretended to be an uninterested member of the group. But in spite of their cautiousness, the two young people could not help stealing a glance at each other now and then.

"Let me see," went on Jethro, "I believe that firm you have got a job with is located in Syracuse. I suppose you will naturally go there to live. As after today we may not see one another again, I want you to read this. You will realize then just how you stand." He reached into a drawer of his desk and taking out an envelope labeled "My Will" handed it to Cyril.

The young man opened and read the document. It was a will leaving Jethro's large fortune to various public institutions; no mention of Cyril, no mention of anybody. "Look that over carefully," said Jethro. "Do you see anything wrong with it?"

"No sir," replied Cyril, "except that you have not signed it."

"Well, I'll sign it now," said the old man. "You and Miss Granger can act as witnesses." Hastily Jethro affixed his signature. Calmly Cyril signed as witness. Rachel came forward and added her signature to the witnesses. Then she threw down the pen and burst out crying. "I think you are just horrid," she sobbed, "to—to—treat Cyril that way. I resign, right now!"

"Rachel," warned Cyril, "please now—what do we care? Be sensible. Uncle Jethro has been very good to both of us."

"Cyril, eh? And Rachel, eh?" cried the old man. "Dry your eyes, young lady, and just listen to me. I have had my eyes on you two ever since you were able to walk alone—both of you. Cyril has turned out to be everything I thought he would not be. And you have turned out just as I expected you would. As to the will you have just witnessed—here it goes." He tore the document into small pieces and threw the pieces into the open fire in the old-fashioned grate. "There is another will in the possession of my lawyers," he went on, "dividing my money between you two—provided you marry each other. No, don't say a word, I have watched your sly ogling and love-making! I am bound to have my way."

Cyril did not go to Syracuse; he stayed in New York and helped Rachel manage his uncle's affairs—after he married her first.

No Prospects for the Disagreeing Young Lady

This story was told of Winston S. Churchill by Gertrude Atherton:

"Shortly after he left the Conservative side of the house (of commons) for the Liberal, he was taking a certain young woman down to dinner, when she looked up at him coquettishly, and remarked with the audacity of her kind:

" 'There are two things I don't like about you, Mr. Churchill.'

" 'And what are they?'

" 'Your new politics and mustache.'

" 'My dear madam,' he replied suavely, 'pray do not disturb yourself. You are not likely to come in contact with either.' "

Summertime Means Picnic Time!
(See Recipes Below.)

Sandwiches Plus

Your fling with summer isn't quite complete without one or a dozen picnics with those sandwiches that taste so good, bubbling hot coffee and fresh, juicy fruit to top off that outdoor meal. You'll have fun with these simple things, even if you don't make a long trip in the family car to some far-away, favorite picnic grounds. Try the back yard, the parks, the beach or even that shady spot down the road a mile or so for this year's picnic.

Scrub your favorite picnic hamper clean and sun-dry it to assure your food freshness and cleanliness. Fill it to the brim with exciting sandwich combinations that your family will get such a surprise when they begin digging into the pleasant recesses of the big basket. Remember the salt for the tomatoes, paper napkins, paper plates, plenty of glasses or paper cups and, yes, a gay checked cloth to add atmosphere to the affair.

Are you in a quandary as to what sandwiches to make? Well, glance over the following combinations for some really tasty ideas in fillings:

Chopped bacon (broiled until crisp) and hard-cooked egg, moistened with mayonnaise or softened butter.

Sliced ham and American cheese, lettuce, sandwich spread.

Cream cheese, finely minced onion, chopped stuffed olives.

Chipped beef, ground fine, mixed with crumbled Roquefort cheese, seasoned with Worcestershire sauce.

Liver sausage, mashed, seasoned with chili sauce.

Summer sausage, ground with sweet or bread and butter pickles, moistened with mayonnaise.

Cucumber, chopped fine, excess moisture drained off, mixed with cream cheese, salt and pepper.

Peanut butter mixed with honey.

Tuna or salmon, flaked, mixed with lemon juice, finely chopped celery and mayonnaise to moisten.

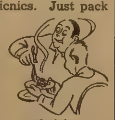
Fillings combined generously with butter are often known as spreads. This facilitates the handling of sandwiches. Just spread the "butter" thickly between slices of bread and your sandwich is made, ready to be wrapped in waxed paper for picnicking.

Cheese Spread.

Blend cream cheese with lemon juice and add 2 tablespoons butter to each package (1-ounce) of cream cheese. To this add one or more of the following: chopped watercress, green pepper or celery; pimiento, green olives, or nuts.

Sardine Spread.

Cream 2 tablespoons lemon juice with ½ pound sweet butter. Spread this on toast or plain whole wheat bread. On top of this place tiny sardines, sprinkle with lemon juice and top with slice of toast or plain whole wheat bread.



"Make-your-own" sandwiches are loads of fun for picnics. Just pack your lunch box with meat loaf or ham loaf already baked at home. Provide the crowd with bread and butter, and let them slice the meat for their own sandwiches:

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: Your best bargains during the present can be found in eggs and cheese, so plan to fortify your meals generously with both of these foods.

The campaign to save fats is really getting under way, and it's good policy on your part to turn all excess fats to your butcher.

Economy's yours if you use a variety of meat cuts in planning your menus. Best bargains can be found in the less used cuts such as liver, sweetbreads, heart, kidneys, rump roasts, etc.

Primary or unlimited production in canned fruits is decreed for the following items: peaches and pears (not whole), pectin, fruit cocktail, fruit for salad, and concentrates of grapefruit, lemon, lime and orange.

*Ham Picnic Loaf.
(Serves 10)

⅓ cup quick-cooking tapioca
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon minced onion
1 pound lean ham, ground
1 pound lean pork, ground
2 cups milk

Combine tapioca with remaining ingredients in order given. Bake in a loaf pan in a hot (450-degree) oven 15 minutes, then decrease heat to moderate (350 degrees) and bake 45 minutes longer or until done. Serve hot or cold.

Munching on golden, crisply fried, cold chicken is many a picnicker's dream of the perfect outing. This is easily managed if you fry the chicken the night before, let it stand in the refrigerator, then wrap in waxed paper to take to the picnic the next day:

*Country-Fried Chicken.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 3-pound chickens
¾ cup flour
1½ tablespoons salt
1 teaspoon pepper
Lard or shortening for frying
¼ cup butter

Clean chickens and cut in pieces suitable for serving. Mix flour with salt and pepper and place in paper bag. Place several pieces of chicken in the bag, and shake to coat evenly with flour. Take out and fry chicken until brown, slowly, in the lard which has been placed in a heavy skillet. When all the chicken has been browned, dot with butter, cover closely and let cook for about an hour over low heat. Or, if you prefer, after chicken is fried, let cook in a moderate (350-degree) oven until done. Uncover during last 15 minutes of cooking time to brown and crisp chicken.

Potato salad made the old-fashioned way with home-cooked dressing is guaranteed to go over big with the family:

Potato Salad
(Serves 8)

6 potatoes, cooked in jackets
¼ cup french dressing
1 onion, chopped fine
1 cup celery, chopped fine
1½ teaspoons salt
1 recipe cooked dressing

Peel potatoes, and cube. Marinate in french dressing for ½ hour. Combine with other ingredients, and chill thoroughly before serving. Garnish with paprika.

Cooked Dressing.

¼ teaspoon salt
½ tablespoon sugar
2 tablespoons flour
1½ tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon dry mustard
2 egg yolks
¾ cup milk
¾ cup vinegar

Combine dry ingredients. Add egg yolks, blending carefully, then mix in butter, milk and vinegar slowly. Cook until thick in double boiler. Let cool before adding to salad.

Col. Faith's Faith In WAAC Kicks Out Guardhouse

NEW YORK. — At Fort Des Moines, where the first 330 entrants of the Women's Army Auxiliary corps take up their quarters, for officers' training, there will be no guardhouse Col. Don C. Faith, commandant of the corps, says "Standards of conduct of women are generally higher than those of men. We anticipate no trouble. If there is, there will be a discharge, rather than discipline."

The tactful Colonel Faith, a genial Hoosier who used to be an army educator, will, however, allow a beauty parlor, if not a guardhouse. He says there's no reason why women shouldn't get a hair-do when they need it and there'll be time out for that. But this doesn't mean a soft time for the soldier-girls. There will be seven 45-minute classes a day and one 45-minute period of drill.

The women who have qualified for officer's training have been chosen from several thousand applicants. The full complement of the fort eventually will be about 25,000 women. They will serve in kitchen police, as barracks orderlies, clerks and messengers and in many other capacities in which men have been used.

The tall, lean Colonel Faith, a trail-blazer in this kind of organization, takes his job easily and casually and gives assurance that the women will be inducted smoothly into army routine. While he is friendly and informal in manner, he is known in the army as a careful and competent officer and, while the girls may get their hair-do and all that, there will be no slack administration of the corps.

"They'll do a grand job," says the colonel.

He has held an army commission 25 years, which experience includes service on the Mexican border and at Camp Logan, Houston, Texas, and in the first World war. He was on duty in the Philippines in 1922-23, and in Tientsin, China, in 1931-32.

Great Britain has made a tremendous success of its women's auxiliary corps, which now includes about 7,000,000 women. Fort Des Moines is just a beginning for us, and Colonel Faith thinks we can do even better.

More Difficult for Japs to Interpret Our Native Idioms

MAJ. GEN. FOLLETT BRADLEY, commanding general of the First air force, with headquarters at Mitchel Field, N. Y., rates slogans as among the least effective of war weapons. He will have none of them around the field, not even "Remember Pearl Harbor." He is, however, hospitable to native, home-grown idiom, just as it happens along, uses a lot of it himself and commends the boys "who keep the flies off the horse's back," referring to the aerial gunners of his command in whom he takes special pride.

"The expression is not mine," said the general. "It's their own and it's very apt. It is a light way of saying that they keep destruction away. If the aerial gunners weren't up there doing their job every time one of our bombers goes out over the Libyan desert or China or the Pacific, many of the bombers would fail in their mission and many would never get home."

This came up in connection with talk of this month marking the general's 23rd straight year in the air services of the army, and the fact that operating a fighter or bomber plane is a matter of a complex organization of human and technical factors, undreamed of when the general first went aloft.

"Every bombing mission is a matter of team work," said General Bradley. "It is not by any means just a piloting job. The aerial gunner is a member of the team without whom the mission might fail. So is the bombardier, the navigator, the engineer and everyone else in the crew. The failure of one can mean the destruction of all."

He said he was getting a "splendid type of young men for all these jobs" and stressed his view that the war would be won by "straight shooting with bullets and bombs." He was overseas in the last big war, both as an aerial gunner and pilot, having learned flying in 1912. A Naval academy alumnus from Omaha, Neb., with an extraordinarily diversified career, he was transferred to the field artillery in 1912, in ordnance from 1914 to 1917, stationed at many air service fields, including the Canal Zone and schooled in several army schools.

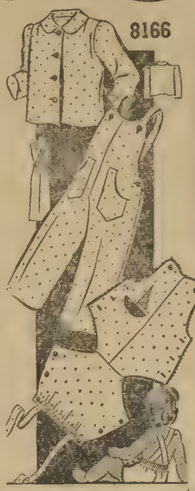
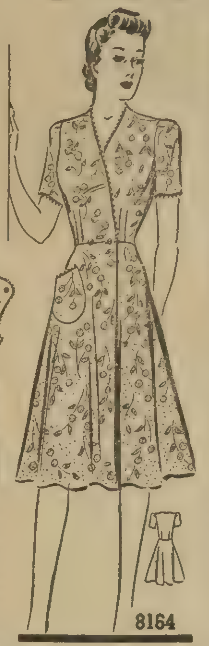
SEWING CIRCLE





YES, your youngster is ready for hours and hours of play when you make her this cunning suit—in a stout durable cotton which "can take it"! We suggest seersucker, poplin, denim or broadcloth. The suit is trimmed down to essentials only—a topper which can be worn tucked in as a shirt, or as a jacket—overalls and an abbreviated romper suit for sun worship. The last named carries a sail boat decoration which can be applied as a bright patch of contrasting color.

Two Towns Are One

Nogales, Arizona, and Nogales, Sonora, Mexico, are two towns geographically, but only one physically, says Collier's. The international boundary line, which runs down the middle of their one common main street, is marked by a barbed-wire fence. Internationalism is so strong that the inhabitants celebrate all American and Mexican holidays.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

It's not a pleasant picture to contemplate, but War calls for "blood and sweat and tears." And the Army Medical Corps, with its efficient nurses and its volunteer Red Cross "Angels of Mercy," needs thousands of surgical beds for field and base hospitals on every front.

These beds cost approximately $22 each. They are the latest thing in modern hospital beds, with elevating springs. In some instances surgical cots are used in temporary field hospitals and there is a folding bed which may be used in ambulances. Your purchase of War Bonds and Stamps can buy many of these beds for the Army. You'll sleep better if you know our boys have every hospital comfort. Buy War Bonds every pay day. Invest ten percent of your income.

It Takes A Ton Of Food To Feed Man

The year's supply for a properly-fed family of five weighs about 8,500 pounds.

It takes at least one ton of food per year for each hard-working man and boy in the family, and even a five-year old in the family eats around 1,300 pounds of food a year. The busy housewife requires over 1,700 pounds.

"This makes the year-around garden, the home orchard, the poultry flock, the dairy cow, and the pigs together with the canning, freezing, drying, curing and pickling of all foods possible an insurance against wartime shortages and shipping difficulties," says Lavada Curtis, extension food specialist.

Culling Flock Means Higher Egg Production

Now is the time to cull the poultry flock, reports John Ivey, extension poultryman, who says that at this time of the year mature hens are mostly out of production and room should be made for the new pullet crop.

Culling reduces feed cost and increases production. Culling of poultry of all ages should be a continuous process because diseased, crippled or otherwise unprofitable birds should be removed from the flock as they are detected. Fall culling of layers should take place between August 1st and the last of October.

Plans Available For Making Peanut Picker

Blueprints for Spanish peanut producers to use in making a small homemade peanut picker have been prepared by the agricultural engineers of the Alabama Extension Service.

The home-made peanut picker is a large bottomless box with a wide mesh wire over the top and hardware cloth as a bottom. The peanuts are passed over the top wire by hand, with the peanuts being pulled off by the wire. The small mesh hardware cloth in the bottom permits the dirt and sand to pass through, but retains the nuts. The equipment may be provided with legs, or may be put on two carpenter's saw horses. Plans to use in making the picker may be obtained free from county agents or from Extension Service at Auburn.

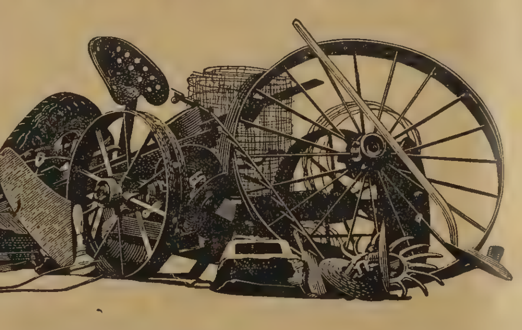
JUNK needed for War

"What's it good for?"
"Guns, tanks, and maybe part of a plane"



In the barnyards and gullies of farms and in the basements and attics of homes is a lot of Junk which is doing no good where it is, but which is needed at once to help smash the Japs and Nazis.

Scrap iron and steel, for example.

Even in peacetime, scrap provided about 50% of the raw material for steel. It may be rusty, old "scrap" to you, but it is actually refined steel—with most impurities removed, and can be quickly melted with new metal in the form of pig iron to produce highest quality steel for our war machines.

The production of steel has gone up, up, UP, until today America is turning out as much steel as all the rest of the world combined. But unless at least 6,000,000 additional tons of scrap steel is uncovered promptly, the full rate of production cannot be attained or increased; the necessary tanks, guns and ships cannot be produced.

The rubber situation is also critical. In spite of the recent rubber drive, there is a continuing need for large quantities of scrap rubber. Also for other waste materials and metals like brass, copper, zinc, lead and tin.

The Junk which you collect is bought by industry from scrap dealers at established, government-controlled prices.

Will you help?

First—collect all of your waste material and pile it up.

Then—sell it to a Junk dealer, give it to a charity, take it yourself to the nearest collection point, or get in touch with your Local Salvage Committee.

If you live on a farm, consult your County War Board or your farm implement dealer.

Throw YOUR scrap into the fight!

JUNK MAKES FIGHTING WEAPONS

One old disc will provide scrap steel needed for 210 semi-automatic light carbines.

One old plow will help make one hundred 75-mm. armor-piercing projectiles.

One useless old tire provides as much rubber as is used in 12 gas masks.

One old shovel will help make 4 hand grenades.

MATERIALS NEEDED

Scrap iron and steel.
Other metals of all kinds.
Old rubber.
Rags, Manila rope, burlap bags.
Waste Cooking Fats—When you get a pound or more, strain into a large tin can and sell to your meat dealer.

NEEDED ONLY IN CERTAIN LOCALITIES: Waste paper and tin cans—wanted only in certain areas, as announced locally. NOT NEEDED (at this time): Razor blades—glass.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

Guess you know how the moron caught the little rabbit He got behind a bush and made a noise like a carrot ... In case you want to know how it's done, go down to Elmore's and take a look at the big peanut that J. T. King made out of candy peanuts . . . we mean window dressing. . . Chas. White son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob White, has been promoted to Sgt. White. . rumors spread and spread, now we hear that they are going to start a synthetic rubber plant near Clanton and that is one rumor we hope comes true.

A motorist drove up to the Service Station down on the corner the other night and asked how far it was to Mobile. Red DeLoach, who was holding up the side of the brick building there at that time answered and gave him the correct mileage. The motorist looked surprised and said, "Why I was closer to Mobile at Montgomery." Well everybody agreed that he was right. They had told him at Montgomery to take U. S. Highway 31. He had, but he was going north instead of south.

Never let it be said that there are not crowds in Clanton on Saturday's. Last Saturday afternoon two cars were in collision in front of the Bell Hardware Company and in less time than it takes to tell it there must have been several hundred people gathered around. Just goes to show these merchants that by doing a little advertising in the News every now and then what a crowd could be brought into their store every Saturday.

Bill Minor is now with the Yellow Front Store. Bill is well known in business circles in and around central Alabama and should be an asset to the business.... James Carl Martin is getting as fat as Mr. Mell . . the old tree stump in front of the Court House has gone the way of all flesh, or stumps, it has been dug up and the improvement is remarkable...Delos Culp, candidate for Superintendent of Education isn't letting any grass grow under his feet. He has already started the ball rolling and the man he beats will have this consolation; he was licked by a dog-gone good man.

Bet if we worked as hard as Johnie Moon we would be able to pay our taxes—nearly. Johnnie works nights at Burdette's Service Station and works days at his farm and dairy. He might sleep sometimes but we haven't been able to find out when it is. It certainly isn't on the job . . . . heard from Chas. (pardon me) Corp. Chas. Simpson this week. Chas has been sent to Fort Knox, Ky., to take 11 weeks course as mechanic. He says after he finishes he will get to come home for a nice long furlough.

No sooner had our paper hit the streets this week when our hand was called on our story about Preacher Cox. This came from Green Rutherford whose father was also a preacher and performed even a more arduous task than did he. It seems back in those days the Circuit Rider was in his glory and Rev. I. O. Rutherford had a circuit ranging all over this neck of the woods. Among others his charges consisted of Lime Springs, Mt. Mariah, Culp School House, etc. Well, on this Sunday after church was over and he started home his mule (that was the model he was driving at that time) picked up a stone and it had worked up into his hoof. He told his small son, who was with him to go ahead home and he would walk in and lead the mule. His son obeyed. The preacher walked. He was eighteen miles from home at the time.

HAVE YOU CUT YOUR POLES FOR YOUR PEANUT RACKS?

You can use your spare time to a good advantage by cutting poles and cross arms for your peanut racks. When digging season comes your time will be valuable.

Cut poles that are at least, (3) three inches in diameter, (9) nine feet in length. Your cross arms should be (3) three feet long. 12-15 stack poles will be needed per acre.

Poles should be set 2 feet in the ground. Cross arms 18 inches above the ground. By doing this the poles will not blow over, also air can circulate under cross arms and hasten curing.

Use small trees that will not produce a fence post or lumber. You may need that in the future. Practically all farms have a few hickory, black jack oak or gum trees, these make good stack poles.

Joe Thornton, business manager of The Gadsten Times, proudly hung on display a 25-year-old 37x5 tire donated by the salvage drive. Judged by size, the tire should have weighed 16 to 17 pounds; it weighed 34.

BOY SCOUT OUTING TONIGHT

Troop 57, Boy Scouts of America, will go on an outing Thursday night for a study of woodcraft, outdoor cooking, and firebuilding. Each Scout will cook his own food over his own fire that he must build with only two matches using native material gathered at the scene of the Council Fire. A fire by friction will be built by Oscar Jones, Junior Assistant Scoutmaster and an Indian Campfire Ceremony with Indian songs, games, and stories will be put on by Scoutmasters Buckalew, Mullins, and Martin. A program of this kind is exceptionally unusual and worthwhile. It is very educational in the study of Indian lore. The Troop cordially invites each and everyone to come out to Mr. George McCain's meadow and see this program and these Scouts in action.

Tank Maintenance

This sequence of photographs shows the operation of an ordnance tank maintenance crew training for the job of keeping these monsters in working order under combat conditions.

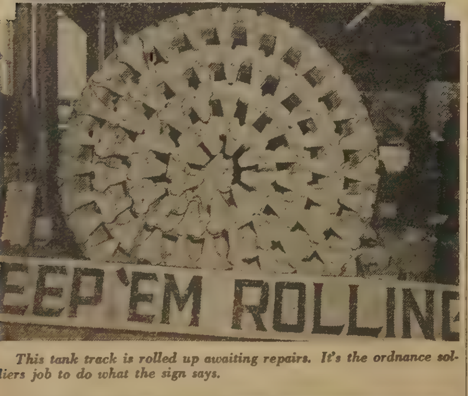
Trapped in a swampy hole this medium tank (at right) awaits a salvage crew. The men are trained under combat conditions.

VICTORY PARADE

"Here she comes boys!' A motor truck powers the winch.

An ordnance maintenance officer directs repair of the tank in a camouflaged position in the "combat" zone. The machine shop on wheels carries the tools, machinery and spare parts needed for repair.

Tanks are powered by engines similar to those used in aircraft.



This tank track is rolled up awaiting repairs. It's the ordnance soldiers job to do what the sign says.

WPB Recognizes Need of Limited Construction

County war boards of the United States department of agriculture will co-operate with the War Production board in handling applications for authorization to begin construction work on farms, the War Production board announced.

The United States department of agriculture is co-operating with the WPB in formulating policies under which county and state U. S. D. A. war boards will make recommendations covering farm residential and agricultural construction. Projects recommended by these boards will be forwarded to the War Production board for final approval.

Order L-41, issued by the War Production board, prohibits the start of unauthorized construction projects which use materials, labor and construction equipment needed in the war effort, and places all new publicly and privately financed construction under rigid control.

The War Production board recognizes that a limited amount of construction by farmers is necessary to maintain and increase production to meet agricultural goals and that certain off-the-farm facilities are also needed for the production, handling and processing of farm products.

A farmer planning to begin construction which needs authorization should consult his county United States department of agriculture war board.

All farm projects, including residential, agricultural, and off-the-farm construction, such as warehouses, processing plants, creameries, etc., will be considered first by the United States department of agriculture county war boards. Applications for projects recommended by these boards will be sent to state war boards and then to the department of agriculture.

The department will consider the recommendations and send to the War Production board for final approval those which are deemed essential.

So far as residential construction is concerned, farm dwellings are covered by the same regulations as other residential construction. If farm residential construction, during any 12-month period, costs less than $500 per farm, no authorization is necessary. Likewise no authorization is required for construction begun prior to April 9, 1942; for maintenance and repairs; or for reconstruction or restoration of farm residential construction damaged or destroyed after December 31, 1941, by fire, flood, tornado, earthquake, act of God or by public enemy.

Take Care of Your Milking Machine as Parts Are Hard to Get

The milking machine is essential to wartime agricultural production, and must be cared for properly because shortages of rubber and metal will not permit normal replacement.

The following rules for the care of rubber milking machine parts are suggested:

Use two separate sets of liners, alternating them each week. Rubber needs "rest."

Keep liners tight in teat-cup shells.

Keep milker rubber parts clean and free from all butterfat, which causes deterioriation.

Rubber cuts easily when wet. Use care in assembly and disassembly of units.

Do not use chlorine solutions of a strength exceeding 250 parts per million, for excessively strong chlorine solutions will injure rubber.

If lye is used in the care of rubber parts, be sure that it does not remain in contact with the metal parts.

Battling Soil Erosion

Legume crops such as alfalfa, clover, soybeans and lespedeza are being used with increasing success as "heavy artillery" in fighting the battle of soil erosion. Legumes keep the topsoil in place, deposit nitrogen in soil and provide it with needed supplies of organic matter. To do their best work, legumes should be reinforced by intelligent soil management such as the use of fertilizers high in phosphorus and potash.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—It would appear that the blizzard of report forms with which war agencies snow under business isn't entirely premeditated and somebody ought to do something about it, if anybody can. At any rate, the War Production board co-operates with a committee of business men who will try to cut down the paper overhead, by evolving simplified systems of reporting and accounting. They are waist deep in government blanks and battling their way out. The government seems sympathetic.

Seeking to Check Report Blizzard By War Agencies

Hearing the newly organized defense forces against the paper blitz is W. J. Donald, president of the American Trade Association Executives. He is chairman of a special advisory committee which will work with the WPB, a King Canute wielding a valiant broom against the paper inundation.

Possibly this is the "managerial revolution," which young Prof. James Burnham described in his provocative book of a year or so ago. At any rate, Mr. Donald is a fair laboratory sample of the oncoming men of management of the professor's discourse, a John the Baptist in the managerial wilderness for many years, urging the managers to shake a leg and do something on their own account before being swamped by the bureaucrafts. He was director of the American Management association from 1921 to 1932, scolding the managers, during this period for being "too smug" and not considering what might happen to them unless the metes and bounds between management and finance and finance and management and government were more clearly defined and regarded.

Mr. Donald, Canadian born, naturalized in 1923, naturally will have to use up a lot more paper in his education and explorative campaign among the individual members of 1,200 trade associations, whom he will consult. He wants comments and suggestions. In Sarnia, Ont., where he was born in 1890, he attended the Sarnia Collegiate institute, and later was graduated from McMaster university at Hamilton, Ont. He came here in 1911 as manager of the installation staff of the American City bureau, making his U. S. A. career in business economics.

NEWS values shrink like depreciated currency in time of overissue. Col. Robert L. Scott Jr. caught eight or ten lines in the paper when he flew over Mt. Everest, clearing the highest mountain in the world by a full mile. For the young colonel, this was a detail of a work-a-day hop from India to China.

Routine These Days Outruns All Previous Stunting

War reputations build like a coral reef. Off and on for the last few weeks there has been a dribble of news about the long, lanky, Colonel Scott of Macon, Ga., working himself as a "one-man air force" in Burma and China. On June 26 he succeeded Col. Caleb V. Haynes as chief of the India-China air command. That means that he and the 21st pursuit squadron, which he commands, are the heirs of the "Flying Tigers," or the American Volunteer group which bombed its way to glory along the Burma road.

Early in this encounter, Colonel Scott demonstrated what we have fondly supposed to be our national aptitude for quick and resourceful action. A troop of Japanese was moving steadily up the Chindwin river in West Burma. The colonel had only a small pursuit plane. He swung a 550-pound bomb in it, and with it scored a bulls-eye on the advancing troop. These and similar exploits won him a silver star.

He is a former West Pointer, 34 years old, indentured in rough and tumble flying, when, with Colonel Haynes, he flew the mails, in 1934. He later commanded the 78th pursuit squadron in Panama.

Colonel Scott celebrated his 34th birthday by piloting a Flying Fortress across the South Atlantic to India and making a quick jump to North Assam in a Tomahawk Fighter.

It seems to this onlooker that the new OWI would do well to piece together the stories of self-starters like the colonel and deal them as hot news. The necessity of planning and organization being what it is, the fact remains that these lads are the real spark plugs of our fighting forces and the public would like to receive more news of them.

By H. L. DOW

(McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.)

IT WAS November and the north wind that was sweeping across the marshes and up the ravines brought with it the smell of snow. On a promontory that jutted out into a huge heath stood a lone buckdeer. No young untried spike-horn but a lithe, strong muscled, sturdy necked buck that carried his head, crowned with its eight pronged horns, high in the air.

For a moment he stood, etched against the fading sun, and then stepped lightly down the steep slope and followed a well-defined trail across the frozen bog. He plunged into the woods on the other side just as the sun sank below the horizon.

There in a thicket of green firs stood the doe. Young, alluring, vital and yet trusting, her sleek head held high, her large brown eyes following his every movement, she waited for him. Swiftly but silently he moved to her side. For a moment they stood there together nosing each other. Then, as though by mutual agreement, they moved away up the slowly rising ground, the buck leading and the doe traveling trustingly behind. Although there was no real sense of reasoning within the buck's mind, yet he instinctively welcomed the pale radiance that shone about him, allowing him to travel and feed at night when there was less to be feared from that dreadful creature that walked on his hind legs and carried a stick.

As they slowly threaded their way silently through the woods they stopped occasionally to nibble at tender twigs of seedling beech and maple that covered the slopes of the hardwood ridges. As he was slowly leading the way around the end of a high hill he suddenly stopped. A slight rustling of leaves and the faint snap of a small twig came from the top of the hill.

Swiftly and silently he wheeled in his tracks and bounded back down the way he had come. Circling he came up to the hill again further on. A gust of wind whistled through the trees and brought with it the rank odor of man. The buck snorted to warn the doe, who had melted into the undergrowth at the foot of the ridge, and bounded rapidly into the friendly shadow of the neighboring swamp.

All thought of his mated had been driven from his mind and throughout the night he traveled steadily until dawn found him bedded down in a little hollow underneath a low growth of spruce far back in the wilderness. The fear of man had gone and the multitude of monotonous little sounds that permeate the wilderness lulled him to sleep.

It was the cessation of the sound that roused him from slumber with every nerve on edge. The man scent was again strong in his nostrils but wise buck that he was he did not jump or run. Instead he seemed to shrink into the ground and only the slight movement of his sides as he breathed distinguished him from the forest floor. The sound of voices drifted down to him and shortly afterward two men came into sight walking down the slope and directly toward him.

So close did they pass to him that they brushed against the very thicket in which he lay hidden. Scarcely had they passed than, scrambling to his feet, he leaped up the hillside. A shout from one of the men and a sharp stab of pain in his hip, as a bullet burned its way harmlessly through the fleshy part of his rump, served only to urge him to speed further and in a moment he dropped over the brow of the hill and out of sight.

He traveled little that day for his wound burned and the cool waters of the sluggishly moving stream that flowed through a small but well hidden swamp were too enticing to leave. Toward evening, however, the thought of the doe waiting down near the big marsh he had left the day before caused him to turn his steps once more in that direction.

As he stepped lightly down the last slope a faint blast sounded through the night. The night was overcast but as he halted and looked inquiringly along the edge of the swamp he saw the faint outline of his slim mate standing in a little opening that led into the swamp. The moon, breaking for a moment through the clouds that covered its face, poured its silver rays over the big buck.

Suddenly and unexpectedly another light bathed the deer. The buck turned his head and horror froze his blood. He was gazing into a terrible glaring eye that would not let him move. He could not even look away. Then all was black.

For a moment only the doe stood still. Then with a sudden leap she ran brokenly for the shelter of the thick swamp, her mind struggling to comprehend what awful creature this was that spoke with a loud voice and robbed her of her lover so suddenly. Only too well experience had taught her that her mate would never again stand by her side or graze with her in the sheltering dusk of the forest.

A coarse voice rang through the stillness. "The third one tonight, 'Ed', and a big buck at that. He'll bring us twenty dollars if the wardens don't catch us bringing him out."

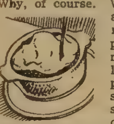
Cheese Trays Help You Through Sugar Rationing Period!
(See Recipes Below.)

Take It Easy on Sugar



No sweets with sugar rationed? Why, of course. With honey, corn and maple syrup, molasses, and prepared pudding mixtures, you can learn how to prepare delightful sugar-saving desserts, cakes and cookies that will not only take you gracefully through the sugar-rationing period but will also remain favorites with you long after these times are past.

Honey blends with raisins and spices in this delicious melt-in-your-mouth pie.

Honey Raisin Crumb Pie.

1 egg yolk
⅛ teaspoon ginger
¾ cup bread crumbs
¼ cup flour
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ cup hot water
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup raisins
¾ cup honey
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
⅓ cup nut meats

Blend hot water with honey and add egg yolk. Mix flour, crumbs and spices. Rub in butter. Place a layer of raisins on unbaked pie shell, cover raisins with layer of nut meats, and pour over honey-water-egg mixture. Top with layer of crumb mixture. Bake at 450 degrees until crust browns at edges, reduce to 325 degrees for 20 minutes or until firm.

Magic Chocolate Pie.

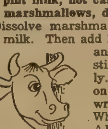
2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1⅓ cups sweetened condensed milk
½ cup water
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vanilla
Baked pie shell (8-inch) or cookie pie crust

Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Add sweetened condensed milk and stir over rapidly boiling water 5 minutes until mixture thickens. Remove from heat. Add water and salt. Stir until thoroughly blended. When cool, add vanilla. Pour into baked pie shell, or cookie crumb crust. Chill.

Get your full quota of milk into the diet by serving it in this dessert combination with rennet powder. No sugar required!

Marshmallow Maple Rennet-Custard.

1 package maple rennet powder
1 pint milk, not canned
5 marshmallows, diced



Dissolve marshmallows in 1 cup hot milk. Then add 1 cup cold milk and warm slowly, stirring constantly. Test a drop on the inside of wrist frequently. When COMFORTABLY WARM (110 degrees), not hot, proceed according to directions on package. Chill, then serve.

Butterscotch Ice-Box Cake.
(Serves 6 to 8)

1 recipe butterscotch cornstarch pudding
½ cup cream, whipped
Lady fingers or cake strips

Prepare butterscotch pudding as directed on package. Cool. Fold in whipped cream. Line bottom and sides of mold or loaf pan with waxed paper. Arrange layer of lady fingers on bottom and sides of mold. Turn ½ of pudding into mold; cover with layer of lady fingers. Turn remaining pudding into mold and place another layer of lady fingers on top. Chill 12 to 24 hours in refrigerator. Unmold.

Bermuda Appetizers.

Chop Bermuda onion finely, marinate and drain. Spread on crisp crackers and cover with slice of Liederkranz cheese. Thin slices of rye, pumpernickel or whole wheat bread which have been buttered may be used instead.

You can do all sorts of things with cheese as a last course and serve it in place of fruit. Camembert has an affinity for fruit. Try it with crackers served with a bowl full of summer's luscious fruits or, try American-made equivalents of Roquefort and Blue cheese spread on hot buttered Boston brown bread tossed with after dinner coffee in place of dessert. Serve a cheese tray for refreshments and spare the sugar ration.

This spicy apple sauce cake requires only ½ cup of sugar.

*Apple Sauce Cake.

½ cup shortening
½ cup sugar
2 eggs
½ cup molasses
2 cups cake flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon cloves
⅛ teaspoon soda
1 cup apple sauce
⅓ cup raisins

Cream shortening; add sugar slowly, beating in well. Add well-beaten eggs and beat until well blended; add molasses. Sift together dry ingredients and add alternately with apple sauce to first mixture. Add raisins. Bake in greased square baking pan in moderate oven at 350 degrees about 1 hour. Frost with:

Raisin Nut Frosting.

1 egg white
¼ cup light corn syrup
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
½ cup chopped seeded raisins
⅓ cup chopped pecan meats

Beat egg white until stiff. Add syrup slowly, beating constantly. Add vanilla and half of raisins and nuts. Spread between layers and on top of cake. Sprinkle with remaining raisins and nuts.

*Lemon Smothered Chops.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 pounds pork or lamb chops, cut thick

Put in a large covered skillet or chicken fryer. Cover top of meat closely with:

2 unpeeled lemons, sliced
1 large sweet onion, cut in rings
1 green pepper, cut in rings
1 teaspoon salt
Pour over all:
2 cups tomato juice

Dot with flakes of fat cut from meat or butter. Cover and cook on top of stove 1½ hours or until done. Lift onto a hot platter, being careful to keep lemon, onion and pepper slices in place. The meat cooked this way acquires a chicken texture and color, while the lemon, onion, pepper and tomato make a delicious sauce accompaniment.

Lynn Says:

Household Tips: Are you wondering how those pots and pans are going to last for the duration? Since the production for these has been sharply curtailed, you will want hints on keeping them in "cooking" condition:

Aluminum: Leaving food in aluminum longer than necessary, soaking the utensil before washing and alkalies such as soda spell short wear for this metal. If you want to clean aluminum without endangering its wearing period, use very fine scouring powder or steel wool for discolorations. Or, cooking acid foods like tomatoes, rhubarb and apples will do the trick.

Iron: Wash in hot, sudsy water. If this doesn't clean it, use hot soda and water. If rusted, use scouring powder or steel wool. Always dry completely and wrap in paper for storage.

Tin: This metal does not keep shiny indefinitely. Remove burnt foods by boiling in soda and water for five minutes, never longer. Rinse and dry thoroughly.

TURNING back the pages of many, many calendars, your correspondent still recalls the thrill that came when the first breath of early fall came along, and the dog days were over. That meant football. We began practicing around September 15, and the season came to an abrupt finish on Thanksgiving day.

It's all different now. Football is already at full swing in many colleges and many camps.

Yale, for example, one of the most conservative of all the universities, has gone all out—not so much to develop a single outstanding team, but to have hundreds trained in the matter of condition and discipline that football demands. Certainly no university is doing a finer job. I also could mention Maryland and many others.

The Change

These teams want and will work for winners. But beyond that more attention will be paid to mass than to class.

Students who never thought of football before now will be shown the feeling of hard body contact, of increased speed, of improved stamina, of quicker reactions in competition. In the universities, the colleges and the prep schools there will be at least five, or possibly ten, football players in training against one for other seasons.

"Why," someone has asked, "shouldn't these men be in active war service?"

The main answer is that the war department wants it this way. First, because most of these men also are taking war training. Second, because the war department wants its coming replacements and reserves to be the best soldiers in the world, trained and conditioned for what is to come later on.

Every university and college of any standing in the country is doing its best to comply with the demands or requests that come from the top.

Football is already under full swing at the Naval Cadet camps located at the universities of Georgia, North Carolina, Iowa and St. Mary's.

"War," as the late General Sherman said, "is hell." But football in Georgia and North Carolina through August is no part of a picnic.

Jim Crowley

No one yet knows just how such coaches as Bernie Bierman and Jimmy Crowley will be able to get winning teams with squads that come and go, with almost no stars from the pros or from the colleges. The odds are all against them. But football is a big part of their training, and this happens to be the main idea.

These four Naval Cadet camps have over 40 games scheduled with the stronger university teams, facing one of the toughest schedules of the year.

Other Games

In the meanwhile the pros and the army squad are both on their way to camp, to many camps, for the eight games scheduled this month and through early September.

This army division, under Bob Neyland and Wallace Wade, will set at least one football record. They will finish up their schedule by September 20, just about the spot when most of the others are swinging into action.

Coaches Neyland and Wade have the "rush act" to handle. They have the material—many of the great football players of recent years—but the job of whipping these men into a football machine in a short while is no simple job.

You can gamble that the Washington Redskins, the New York Giants, the Green Bay Packers, the Brooklyn Dodgers and others will be something to shove around, despite the fact they have lost close to a hundred star men to the services. Messrs. Steve Owen, Curly Lambeau, George Halas and others still have enough good material left to keep any team busy, no matter how many stars my be working against them. They, also, are out to win.

And these games will play a big part for Army Relief. They are a big part of the bigger game. And they will be something to see.

Stout Combination

The Big Nine, plus Notre Dame, may easily be football's stronghold for the new campaign. And this isn't overlooking Iowa, which would be a serious mistake.

There are linemen on hand to match the backs, especially at Minnesota, where Norse forwards usually have the call. Minnesota's big line will be led by Dick Wildung, one of the greatest forwards in 1941—a sure bulwark in the season that is not too far away, and which the fans are looking forward to.

JUST KIDDING

One Good Reason

"I never see your husband looking at another woman."

"No, George is devoted to me. Besides, he's so nearsighted."

It is generally conceded that women are the fair sex. But does that imply that the men are unfair?

The Egotist

The performing flea and an elephant crossed a jungle bridge together.

"Oh, boy," whispered the flea in the elephant's ear, "we certainly made that bridge shake!"

That Kind

"In my time I've had a dozen men at my feet," she boasted.

"Chiropodists?" inquired her friend.

And Then Some

"I always believe in weighing my words before speaking," said Mrs. Hopkins.

"And you don't give short weight, either," replied her husband.

Purebred Jersey Bulls Placed On Farms

During the week of August 17 eleven registered purebred Jersey bulls will be given Alabama farmers through the Victory Bull campaign sponsored by the American Jersey Cattle Club.

The purpose of this campaign was to place purebred bulls in small herds for community service. One thousand bulls were donated by Jersey breeders throughout the Nation.

Over 300 applications were received in Alabama for the 11 bulls donated by Alabama breeders. Owners of 10 or more cows or owners of purebred bulls were not considered in the campaign.

Meetings will be held at these 11 farms at which time a program will be carried out consisting of a principal speaker, dairy demonstrations by 4-H Club members and a picnic lunch.

"Ball Play" is a community in Tuscaloosa County.

NOTICE!

If You Are Planning to Move, Check On Electric Service Available at New Location

WARNING

TO WIN the war, our country's armed forces must have "what it takes" in equipment. Their magnificent courage alone will not be enough.

The equipment they need—guns, ships, tanks, planes, ammunition—requires for its production huge quantities of the same raw materials that are used in the extension of electric service lines. There isn't enough of these raw materials to meet both military and civilian needs. Therefore, they are being allotted so that military needs can be met first. That means that their civilian use is greatly restricted so there won't be "too little too late" for the men who will fight the battles.

Electric Service Additions Limited

These necessary war-time restrictions limit electric service extensions and enlargements. We are cooperating to avoid the use of of critical materials required to help win the war. Therefore, if you are planning

1. to move, or

2. to occupy newly constructed premises, or

3. to request additional service at your present location (for a range, water heater, etc.)

you should check with our local office to learn if ample electric service to meet your needs can be supplied.

MORAL ECHOES

By Rev. D. W. Haskew, D. D.

I was fishing in a beautiful lake and became very much interested in watching the flies that came to bathe in the water. I noticed that while they plunged their little bodies into the water that they held their wings high out of the water. After swimming around for a while they would fly away in dry wings. In that observation I learned a great lesson. Of necessity we must be immersed in the things of this world, but we should keep the wings of our soul, our faith and our love, high above the world so that when the time shall come for us to fly away to our heavenly home, there will be nothing to hinder us. We are in the world, but we should keep ourselves above the world.

It is recorded that one time the Grecian king Alexander had a doctor friend in who he had the greatest faith and trust. One day the Emperor was ill and this doctor was summoned. Just before hs arrival a letter was handed to the king, telling him that his doctor was going to poison him with the medicine that he gave. When the trusted doctor arrived, he looked the king over and then poured out the portion of medicine that he was to take. The emperor took the glass into his hand looked the doctor straight in the eye, and drank it down. Then he handed him the letter that was hid under his pillow. That was a beautiful expression of faith and trust. Job's faith in God was so great that he said, " Though he slay me yet will I trust Him."

"I will get my revenge on that man if it takes me ten years," so said a man to me after he had been dealt an injustice in a business deal. A little boy was asked what forgiveness is. He was holding in his hand a cluster of sweet shrub blooms and he crashed them and replied, "Forgiveness sir, is the odor that comes from these crushed flowers." Phillip the Good was asked to take his revenge upon an enemy who hath done him a great wrong. The good king replied. "It is a fine thing to have revenge in one's power, but it is a much finer thing to refuse to use it! If you want to be really big in your life, refuse to take revenge when you have the power.

After the Japs and the English had fought their way down the Malayan country, a writer became rather eloquent as he pictured an old Malayan monkey. " An old Malayan monkey sat upon a limb and contemplated the bullets speeding under him. He studied group behavior, twenty thousand strong. Then said he, 'That fellow Darwin must have figured wrong; it couldn't be our family, man's descended from. An evolutionary ape would not act that dumb." Of all the dumb things that man has ever done nothing shows him to be dumber than to declare war and go out to kill. Oh My Lord when will the human race ever become civilized

During the war between the states a mother went before President Lincoln to beg for the life of her son who had been sentenced to die. The good president heard her plea and then wrote out the pardon. The mother was so overcome with emotion and gratitude that she could not speak a word and she was ushered from the room. On reaching the outside of the building she broke out in exciting shouting, saying, "I know it was a lie." "What do you refer to? asked Mr. Stevens who accompanied her. "Why they told me he was an ugly-looking man." she replied, "But he is the most handsome man I ever saw." Lincoln's pardon for her boy swept aside all homeliness to her. It was his forgiving spirit that made him to shine like the sun.

If you plan to paint and find the old brush you put away in a can of water has dried out stiff as a board—don't throw it away not unless the bristles are broken. You might have difficulty these days in buying a new one.

The brush may be reclaimed by soaking it over night in paint thinner or if too hard, in gasoline or turpentine. After the old paint has sofened scrape it off with a putty knife or comb it out with a steel comb or brush.

Vaccination Time For Your Dog

I am indeed very sorry to have disappointed you all this year about the vaccination of your dogs. But due to some cause beyond my power I have not been able to get any vaccine until now. But at last I have some of the high standard vaccine I have always used. The kind that when your dog is treated he will be free of Rabies for the season. We have a good rating in Chilton, not a single positive reaction from any animals head that has been sent to the Laboratory. Not a person to take the dreaded treatment in four years, no not even a horse cow or dog.

Now don't you think this outstanding? I am proud of such a record.

I am sorry we still have a few that will shirk the duty of treating the dog. I know the Deputy Inspector who checks on the ones who do not treat their dogs does not get them all. But the shame is on the fellow who will not cooperate, should his dog go mad he will not only have a mad dog. But would be responsible for all his damage for being a law violator. I am trusting we will not have to make a single arrest this year.

The war is on and it is all of our duty to do the most we can in every way so let us join in and get this done in a few days. I doubt now there will be any two stops at any place.

Please bring your dogs on out and we will give you just as fast service as we can.

All our time will be War Time and the fee will be $.50 cash.

We had a wonderful service here Sunday that marked the beginning of the revival at this place. The house was almost filled to it's capacity Sunday night. A number of visitors from almost every direction are attending the services here.

The Rev. Bently is bringing some heart rending messages. If you haven't heard him, avail yourself of the opportunity now. The services will extend through Friday night. Our people are cooperating in a splendid manner, and a cordial welcome awaits you.

The Children's offering will be given Thursday night. This is always an interesting aspect to look upon. It gives the children a chance to worship with an offering, of which they shouldn't be deprived of.

Remember that you always have a welcome at Maple Springs.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Soviet Armies Endangered as Germans Press Pincer Movement on Timoshenko; AFL-CIO Parleys Try for Labor Unity; Probe Charges of Steel 'Black Market'

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

LABOR:

Another Crossroads

As "peace" committees of both AFL and CIO begin preparations for their meeting to bring about labor peace both Philip Murray, CIO president, and William Green, head of AFL, issued public statements indicating that they favored the objective.

There were definite signs, however, that the method of reaching the objective might encounter some difficulty along the way. For in one of his statements on the subject President Green urged that CIO: "come back to the AFL, the House of Labor."

Later in a speech to the important CIO United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers of America, meeting in their convention in Chicago, Philip Murray avoided all reference to this statement. But he did say: ". . . I hope, I pray, that their (the AFL's) attitude will have changed, that experience has taught the need for giving recognition to the aspirations and objectives of those organizations which make up the Congress of Industrial Organizations."

PHILIP MURRAY
". . . hoped and prayed."

Biggest stumbling blocks in labor peace talks for the seven years that the two groups had gone their own way had been personalities and the refusal or inability of AFL to recognize CIO's organization of unions by grouping all workers in an industry into one union. AFL continued with some modifications to organize their unions through the craft system. Just how these two systems could be dovetailed where there is over-lapping jurisdiction is what a peace committee had facing it.

DARK CLOUDS:

For Silver Shirts

The nation's first important sedition trial since the outbreak of the war came to a close when a federal court jury in Indianapolis found William Dudley Pelley, founder of the Fascist Silver Shirts, guilty of criminal sedition.

Pelley's co-defendants, Agnes Marion Henderson, his secretary, and Lawrence Brown, were found guilty only of conspiracy. The three were indicted originally on 12 counts, but the government counsel dropped one charge because the army and navy, acting under wartime secrecy, declined to provide official figures in answer to false statements made by Pelley regarding losses at Pearl Harbor.

Pelley was found guilty on every count in the indictment, 10 of them charging him with making false statements with the intent to cause, or attempt to cause, insubordination, mutiny and disloyalty among the armed forces. The 11th charge accused Pelley and his co-defendants of conspiring to do these things.

The three were associated in the Fellowship Press in Noblesville, Ind., where they published the Galilean magazine.

Stern Justice

Even as the erstwhile dictator of the Silver Shirts braced himself for the penalties ahead," the American public demonstrated again its stern temper when Federal Judge Arthur J. Tuttle pronounced a death sentence for treason upon Max Stephan, Detroit restaurant owner, for betraying his adopted country by befriending an escaped Nazi prisoner.

Stephan had previously been convicted by a federal court jury. His was the first death sentence for treason under a 152-year-old federal law.

RUSSIA:

Crisis Mounts

Not only the oil resources of the Caucasus, but the fate of Marshal Timoshenko's southern armies as well were at stake in battles in which the Russ forces attempted to stem the Nazis' relentless pincer movements. The loss of the oil would be a crippling but not necessarily fatal stab at the Soviets. But the loss of Timoshenko's armies might well be a mortal blow to the Russians' future war effort.

The critical nature of the situation was underscored by the arrival in Moscow of Gen. Follett Bradley of the United States army air forces, with a personal message from President Roosevelt to Premier Stalin. The American air chief who flew to the Russian capital on his emergency mission made no effort to hide this nation's anxiety when he said: "America is gravely concerned with the situation in this country, which is regarded as the focal point of the war."

Meanwhile one section of the Nazi juggernaut had swept on toward the Caspian sea while another pushed steadily into the northwestern Caucasus below Rostov.

HOUSEWIVES:

Face Job 'Draft'

Spokesmen for the manpower commission intimated that one out of every four American housewives between the ages of 18 and 44 may be needed in munitions jobs for this country to attain full war production.

It was indicated that a nationwide occupational registration of women might be undertaken as a means of cataloguing the country's total feminine adult resources.

Paul V. McNutt, manpower chief, has estimated that about 5,000,000 more women must be placed in war jobs by the end of 1943.

STEEL:

Probe 'Black Market'

In answer to charges that a "black market" in steel existed, where "immediate delivery was made from bulging warehouses scattered over the nation," two government investigations were immediately begun.

First probe was undertaken by Price Administrator Leon Henderson after charges made by Frank Higgins, associated with his father in a New Orleans shipbuilding yard, that his company had bought steel from such markets at higher premiums.

SENATOR HARRY S. TRUMAN
". . . negligence or willful misconduct."

The second investigation was undertaken by Congressman Carl Peterson, chairman of the house subcommittee investigating the maritime commission's cancellation last month of the Higgins' company's contract to build 200 liberty ships because of an alleged steel shortage.

Meanwhile, Chairman Harry S. Truman of the senate committee investigating national defense charged the navy department's bureau of ships with "negligence or willful misconduct" in connection with the construction of tank-landing boats. Senator Truman's charges contained in a letter to Navy Secretary Frank Knox referred to the navy's insistence on substituting its own models of tank-landing boats for ships of proved value built for this purpose by the Higgins company in New Orleans.

GENEVA: Guglielmo Ferrero, noted Italian historian and foe of the Fascists, died here at the age of 71. Seven years ago his books were seized by the Mussolini government and he was forced to flee Italy. He had taught history at the University of Geneva ever since. Among his most noted books was "The Grandeur and Decadence of Rome."

WASHINGTON: Manufacture of typewriters, except for a small quantity to be produced for the government by one factory, will end October 31, it was announced by the War Production board in an order released here. The order likewise limited the production of most typewriter companies between July 1 and October 1 to 12½ per cent of the machines sold by them last year.

CARGO PLANES:

Get Green Light

A "go-ahead green light" for the construction of vast cargo planes in months to come was given by both the army and navy.

Speaking for the army, Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, commander of the army air forces, told a senate military affairs committee that 21 per cent of all multiple-engine bomber planes to be produced for the remainder of 1942 will be cargo or transport carriers. Including all planes of comparable flying range, he added, 30 per cent of the total output will be essentially for cargo purposes.

LT. GEN. HENRY H. ARNOLD
"Move paratroops; tow gliders."

General Arnold revealed that cargo and transport carriers now being produced are used to move paratroops and airborne infantry, to tow gliders and to carry supplies to combat zones. Planes are moving about 2,500,000 tons of material a week, he said.

Speaking for the navy, Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, disclosed that the navy is speeding a huge program for building cargo planes.

Saint or Sinner?

Mohandas K. Gandhi, saint or sabotaging politician?

That was the enigma most Americans confronted in attempting to assay the character of the benign-looking Indian leader. For when Gandhi's All-India Congress stood pat on its determination to carry out a civil disobedience movement if independence were denied, the British government made public a collection of confiscated documents which it said indicated that Gandhi advocated a deal with Japan for Indian independence.

Answering charges of "appeasement" Gandhi said:

"I purposely incorporated the sentence about negotiations with Japan and if ultimately it was dropped and I associated myself with its deletion, I did so out of regard for my co-workers—not because I was uncertain as to what I meant to do."

What Gandhi meant to say was that he was using such a threat as means of bargaining with the British.

Heeds Pope's Plea

The voice of Pope Pius was raised in a protest to the Vichy government of their treatment of Jewish refugees in France. Speaking through the papal nuncio at the temporary French capital, the pontiff said he "neither understands nor approves" treatment given Jews and asked the Vichy government to stop "those inhuman arrests of defenseless people."

In consequence of the pope's protest, Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, chief of state, asked the German occupation authorities to limit the arrests of Paris Jews to those of non-French origin, to cease deporting French Jews to Silesia and to stop breaking up French-Jewish families.

It had been reported earlier that German and central European Jewish refugees, including those in concentration camps, had been marked for arrest.

The Pope's message to Marshal Petain was delivered by Mgr. Valerio Valeri when the Nuncio was seated beside the aged soldier-statesman at an official luncheon at the Vichy government headquarters.

SUBMARINES:

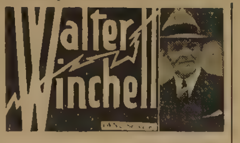
Lull Near U. S.

That American coastal waters are no longer a soft spot for German submarines was the view expressed by British officials in a communique from London. Consequently it was believed that Axis U-boats had been forced to seek other waters in which to prey on United Nations' commerce.

Adoption of the convoy system in the Panama and Caribbean areas plus increased air defenses were cited as coinciding with a decreased scale of submarine attacks.

American military authorities commenting on the recent drop in submarine sinkings, warned, however, that the Nazis might now be preparing to bring the full brunt of their underseas attack against the heavily convoyed supply lines across the North Atlantic.

Increasing Allied effectiveness against submarines was said to be due to the fact that the "bottleneck regarding engines for submarine chasers, defensive craft and dirigibles has been broken and defensive craft are coming forward in greater numbers."



This Is the Army!

(A contribution by the all-soldier cast of Irving Berlin's great hit show at the Broadway theater—for the army emergency fund.)

When one of the boys gave his regimental pin to a girl she demanded to know what the motto "Volens et Potens" meant . . . He explained: "Willing and able" . . . She returned it pronto . . . The 33rd Armored Regiment at Camp Polk call their tanks "Hitler Hearses" . . . The Yank of 1942 isn't called a doughboy . . . He's "Red Legs" . . . There's a 50-Year-Old Club at Camp Roberts. The men in it are over 50—all volunteers since Pearl Harbor—going in as buck privates, although many were former officers and non-coms.

Soldiers purchase lots of fingernail polish—but not for their nails . . . It keeps their buttons shiny and is the perfect remedy for chigger bites . . . At the Indio Desert training center the lads are often rationed only one gallon of water daily for all purposes, including drinking, washing, bathing. To condition them for the real thing.

Contrary to popular legend, it is against Army regulations to give a soldier K. P. duty as punishment . . . At Camp Barkeley the chap who instructs in the art of jiu-jitsu is Harry Morimoto, an American-Japanese . . . In the Army nurses are known as Snow-whites . . . Soldiers insist that uniforms come in only two sizes—too large and too small.

Personal checks cannot be cashed in the Army without the company commander's okay . . . When Paul, the son of the late financier, Andrew Mellon, went to the c. o. at Fort Riley to get approval for a $100 check, the c. o. said: "This is a pretty big check for a private to write. How do I know it is good?" . . . "It oughta be," said Paul, "I own the controlling interest in the bank."

The Indians have supplied more volunteers to the Army than any other racial group . . . When they first learned of selective service they came to register with their own weapons . . . The average soldier drinks four cups of coffee a day . . . G. W., who fathers the "Our Fighting Men" dep't in Collier's, calls the U. S. Armored Division the Anzers . . . Because they are the answers to Hitler's Panzers . . . A jeep is also a nickname for a rookie.

Field Marshal Herman Goering's kin is Werner George Goering of the U. S. Army . . . Can't wait, he says, to drop a bomb on his relative . . . In our Army a private can prefer charges against a colonel, and if a corporal sees a captain conducting himself in a manner "unbecoming an officer and gentleman" he can have him put in the guardhouse . . . The name for woolen underwear is "superman drawers."

When a private at Randolph Field comes to a non-com with a complaint he is handed a mourning-bordered card which says: "Your trials and tribulations have broken my heart. They are unique. I have never heard of anything like them before. As proof of my deepest sympathy, I give you this card which entitles you to one hour of condolence."

Fort Riley's newspaper, The Guidon, has an advice-to-the-lovelorn column. "Betty Lou" signs it. Betty Lou is the nom de plume for a pair of privates . . . For every fighting man in the Army there must be five other soldiers to feed, clothe and supply him . . . Unless a rookie is smart, he can be trapped into volunteering for unpopular chores. The big gag in the Army concerns the sgt. who approached a bunch of men at play and asked them if any were good at shorthand . . . A dozen newcomers, angling for soft snaps, eagerly stepped forward . . . "Fine," said the sarge, "report to the kitchen, we're short of K.P.s!" . . . The phone number of the Negro Enlisted Men's Service Club at Camp Bowie is, oddly enough—711.

Army men always titter derisively when in the movies a sentry says: "Halt! Who Goes There?" . . . The correct challenge is: "Halt! Who's There?" . . . A letter from a girl is called "a sugar report" . . . There's no favoritism in the Army . . . Even chaplains must undergo five weeks of training at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana.

Soldiers do not rate preferred treatment over civilians. They cannot buy shaving cream or toothpaste at their post exchanges without turning in a used tube . . . At Camp Davis the mimeographed directive given to men in the 96th Coast Artillery (for handling of the wire cable winch on army trucks) warns that the apparatus is "as temperamental as Greta Garbo, and treating it carelessly is like asking Lana Turner to scrub the kitchen floor" . . . The men treat it with great affection and care.

YOU'RE going to see something in the new Fibber McGee picture, "Here We Go Again," that you never saw before—and that's Charlie McCarthy moving around without benefit of any manipulation by Edgar Bergen. It's perfectly simple—RKO just engaged a midget, Jerry Maren, for the part. He's practiced those stiff, mechanical movements of the dummy's until he's got them down pat. In fact, he does them so well that people who stroll onto the set without knowing what's happened have thought they were imagining things when Charlie, in the person of Jerry, went into action.

How'd you like to have a blind date with Ginger Rogers? Nine boys in uniform did recently. Planning to see two new feature pictures at home, she sent her station wagon to the USO to ask if some of the men would like to spend a quiet evening and see some pictures free. They dined with her, (to their surprise; they hadn't known who their hostess was to be,) and then, when they said they'd like to see one of her pictures, she showed them something few people have seen. It's film of every dance she's done since "Flying Down to Rio"—shows her with old-fashioned makeup, clothes, etc., and that's something most stars avoid like poison.

Tony Merrill had a perfect alibi when he showed up two hours late for scenes with Rosalind Russell in "My Sister Eileen" the other day. He had been down town being sworn into the army. If Janet Blair's late for work in the same picture she'll have a good reason, too. She sang at the San Diego marine base just before the picture started, and the leathernecks sent her a souvenir—a baby wildcat.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

WAGE STABILIZATION

You can write it down that the President will use his executive powers to keep wages in check rather than ask congress for any new legislation dealing with wage stabilization.

There are two reasons for this:

(1) Wage control legislation would be sure to stir up another bitter congressional controversy, as bad or worse than the brawl over farm parity prices. It might even require months to get both houses to agree on a bill satisfactory to the administration.

(2) The President believes that the policy proposed by the War Labor board's recent steel wage decision—limiting wage increases to 15 per cent over scales prevailing on January 1, 1941—plus additional rationing of consumer goods, will be sufficient for the time being to brake inflation threats to the working man's pocketbook.

Inside fact is that the War Labor board is contemplating only one further step in its wage stabilization program, and this is not so much an anti-inflation move as a concession to certain labor groups and a contribution to the prosecution of the war.

Wages in certain industries, including shipyards and tool-and-die plants, are above the 15 per cent increase ceiling set by the board. This raises the question—shall wages in these industries be brought down to conform with scales in other war plants which pay below the ceiling?

The answer is—there will be no reduction in wages. The President has decided definitely against this.

Instead, to prevent piracy and migration of workers away from vital war plants paying below the 15 per cent ceiling, the War Labor board is planning to amend its wage policy to permit the payment of "premium wages" (above the ceiling) in such plants.

Note: One industry sure to be allowed "premium wages" is aircraft, which has lost many workmen, by piracy and migration, to higher-paying shipyards.

NEW ARMY FOOD

To save shipping space, the army is sending food overseas in dehydrated form. Experiments in taste-preserving dehydration have been carried out and tested on a group of army cooks.

At the Chicago depot of the quartermaster corps, the cooks sat down to a meal of dehydrated foods, principal item on the menu being scrambled eggs made by adding water to a yellow powder.

It has been discovered that one pound of dehydrated turnips will serve 28 persons, after water is added

BEHIND THE AIR CORPS

This war will be won or lost in the air. But despite that fact the air forces will win or lose the war on the ground. In other words, the success of operations in the air depends on ground crews, who outnumber air crews ten to one.

Featured in the headlines and the newsreels every day are the pilots and machine gunners. But the unsung heroes of this war are the ground crews.

Real fact is that it takes only one man to pilot a fighter plane, but it takes eight or ten maintenance men to keep it in shape to fight. A four-engine bomber requires a flying crew of nine, and a maintenance crew of 25. Often a ground crew will be assigned exclusively to one plane, and will become attached to it with the affection a stable boy has for a race horse.

Chief of Staff General Marshall has revealed that the over-all strength of the air force is expected to reach 1,000,000 men by the end of 1942, and 2,000,000 by the end of next year. If the war is won in 1943, it will be won by these 2,000,000 men. But 1,800,000 of them will be "fighting" on the ground.

They are the overall-boys, the grease monkeys, the men who spend all day overhauling an engine which has been flying all night, the men who know what heat is like in the deserts of Africa, because they don't get up in the air for relief, as do the pilots.

* * *

OVERSEAS CANDY

The quartermaster corps is in the market to buy 2,500,000 pounds of hard candy: peppermint, orange, lemon, lime, anise, and cherry.

The hard candy is being bought for overseas troops, as part of the regular field ration. Official explanation is that candy is an excellent source of energy.

* * *

AFRICAN CAMEL CREWS

They are the mechanics, the armorers, the metal workers, the welders—yes, and they are the pick and shovel men who build the landing fields in foreign posts, and repair them after enemy bombers have passed over. They are also the cooks and the mess boys, the pay masters, the doctors, and the truck drivers. In short, they are the men who perform every duty that keeps a plane in the air.

They do everything except replace the African camels.

A carton of Camels, by the way, is the gift he prefers first of all from the folks back home. He's said so. Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

Check Breeding Places To Control Pests

Flies lay about 95 percent of their eggs in stable manure.. Checking these breeding and feeding places is a big part of the job of keeping them under control.

Mosquitoes breed in stagnant and sluggish water. Draining off the water or pouring kerosene or motor oil over the surface at regular intervals solves this problem. Mosquitoes do not fly far from their breeding places so when they are plentiful, it is a good idea to examine old tin cans, choken gutters, broken bottles and such containers where water might

DEATHS

MR. A. L. ROBERTSON

Mr. A. L. Robertson, age 51 of 1640 N. 19th Street, Birmingham. Bailiff in Judge Henry Martins, City Police Court, fell out of his motor boat and drowned Saturday afternoon at Cargile Creek, while on a fishing trip. Mr. Robertson was given artificial respiration and Dr. Ruby Tylor of Tuscaloosa was also on the scene. He was pronounced dead shortly after he was taken from the water.

The remains were prepared for burial by Spigener Funeral Home and carried to Norwood Funeral Home in Birmingham for services. Funeral Services were held at 4 p. m. Monday at Brown Service Chapel. The Rev. C. A. Wessner officiating, and members of the North Birmingham Masonic Lodge conducted the rites at the grave. Burial in Elmwood Cemetery.

Mr. Robertson had been an employee of the City Police Department 19 years.

Survivors are his widow, his mother Mrs. A. J. Robertson of Montgomery, 3 sisters, Mrs. J. T. Maddox of Fayett, Mrs. J. S. Kennedy of Montgomery, Miss Mattie Lou Robertson, Fort Frank, Henry Paul and Andrew Robertson of Birmingham.

Mrs. Robertson stated that they had been spending their holidays at Cargile Creek for four years.

Small Excess Cotton Is Eligible For Loan

Alabama farmers who have overplanted their 1942 cotton allotments by not more than three percent or three acres, whichever is the larger, will not be consideed "knowlingly overplanted" and will be eligible for a CCC loan on the crop at full loan rate.

The provision, according to A. W. Jones, State AAA administrator, in no way changes the penalty under the 1942 ACP program incurred for overplanting. The penalty is ten times the payment rate which is now 1.2 cents. Neither does the provision remove the penalty of eight cents per pound on cotton marketed in excess of the farm marketing quota.

Judge Holland Bell, former official U. C. V., is getting along well at 103 of Fayette County, prominent in the years of age.

Special Program Woodland Management

Special attention will be given in Chilton County to a program of woodland management on small farms, with the aim of building new values of income, farm labor and land use.

This was announced by Marvin Durbin, County supervisor of the Farm Security Administration, who told of the FSA forestry program in the four Southeastern States, which is planned to include small farm woodlands where combined acres are more than 4,000,000, equalling in size the entire state of New Jersey.

In this county, woodland on the places of low-income farmers who participate in the FSA program, said Mr. Durbin, totals approximately 4,000 aces.

Mr. Durbin said the aim of the program is to increase income of the small farmers who have a patch of woods, to utilize better the labor of the farm, allocating work on woodlands to slack or bad weather seasons to bring about better land use, placing submarginal land in profitable production; to improve fire protection and to educate the small famer to this duty, and to help soil conservation practices.

"A report of the FSA regional forester," said Mr. Durbin, "shows that the gross cash income per cultivated acre of woodland amounts to only 26 cents under present practices. With these practices improved, the returns could be greatly increased."

Throughout the four States of Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and Florida, which make up FSA Region Five, the place of forestry on farms was discussed at 3,390 meetings of FSA borrowers in the last year. These low-income farmers attended 2,461 demonstrations of proper woodland practices conducted by the soil conservation service, extension service and other agencies.

Millions of pine seedlings were planted last year on FSA projects and on farms of tenant purchase and rehabilitation borrowers.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

According to our postmaster it is a [illegible] thing that Clark Gable decided to quit the acting business and join Uncle Sam's Army. After that fine performance last Thursday and Friday nights at the City Hall for the Parent-Teachers play. Mr. R. W. was just worrying how hard it would be for Mr. Gable to be kicked out after being leading "lady's man" for so long, and putting an unknown like himself in his place. But no fooling the cast did fine and were well received. Especially did they enjoy the part played by Mr. Lowe.

And this is a "Believe It or Not". As scarce as Coca Cola's are a lady brought six back to a local grocer this week and asked him if he would take [illegible] ick, which as you already know, he did ...and we collected an account last Thursday, the 13th, the amount was 13 dollars and sure enough the check that we received was number 13.

Reese Mullins went down to Troy the past week-end to spend his 5th Anniversary with his wife and young heir. Reese says both are getting along fine and he hopes to bring them to Clanton in the near future.

B. N. Studdard took the wife and the little Studdard's on their vacation last week and comes back with the best 'fish story' that we ever heard, and we have heard some mighty good [illegible] ries. In fact, being married, we [illegible] manufactured quite a few our[illegible] en the occasion demanded it. [illegible] way, that is beside the story. [illegible] aid Ben was fishing. Well he [illegible] his fly in the creek and [illegible] t get it loose. He threw his rod [illegible] el up on the bank behind a tree [illegible] rifted down the creek to where [illegible] e was hung. All of a sudden he heard a swish and looked around, there in the back of his boat was a four pound trout flopping around. In the bat of an eye B. N. was back there flopping around with the trout. He declares that the fish felt sorry for him because he couldn't catch one and jumped in the boat through pity. However B. N. and the rest had trout for supper and everybody was happy but the trout.

A good friend of ours brought word the other day that Ira Champion, of Montgomery, a life long friend of our Dad's, stated, when he heard that he was critically ill in the hospital, "You tell Mark Tucker, when he starts to Heaven to come by and get me, I want to go with him." a pretty thought from an old friend.

ALA. FOOTBALL SCHEDULE 1942

Ticket sales for the University of Alabama's 1942 football season will open Sept. 1, Jeff Coleman, business manager of athletics, announced this week.

Coleman stated that the sale will be open to University alumni from Sept. 1 to Sept. 10th and to the general public thereafter. All orders will be filled in the order received.

With seven games scheduled within the state, including three encounters in Birmingham, two in Tuscaloosa, and one each in Montgomery and in Mobile, fans from throughout Alabama will get a chance to see the Crimson Tide in action without putting too much wear on those tires.

For the first time in many years Alabama's first four games of the season are scheduled for four different Alabama cities. The Crimson Tide will open its 1942 campaign in Montgomery Friday night, Sept. 25, against Southwestern Louisiana Institute. On the next three successive Saturdays Alabama plays Mississippi State in Tuscaloosa, Pensacola Naval Air Station in Mobile, and Tennessee in Birmingham.

On Oct. 24th the Tide journeys to Lexington, Ky., for its longest trip of the year to meet the University of Ky. The following Saturday Georgia will be played in Atlanta.

Alabama's Homecoming opponent will be the University of South Carolina on Nov 7. A return trip to Atlanta on Nov. 14 will wind up the Tide's [illegible] state play against Georgia Tech. Alabama's two final games of the season are scheduled for Birmingham at Legion Field, Vanderbilt being played on Nov. 21 and the US Navy Preflight School on Nov. 28.

The cotton was brought in by Claud C. Headley of Clanton, Route 2 and weighed 464 pounds. It was bought by Buck Bice through Chilton County Exchange, for Ala. Cotton Cooperative Association. The price paid was 20c per pound.

Later on in the morning R. Z. Byler, Clanton, Route 3 brought in the second bale of the new season and it was sold to the same people. The weight of the second bale was 565 pounds and brought 18.55 cents per pound.

STATE AWARDS CONTRACT FOR AUTO STICKERS

Will Pay 2 Cents Each For 400,000 To Take Place Of Steel Plates

Contracts were announced by the State Friday for furnishing 400,000 motor vehicle license stickers, and also for beer tax stamps sufficient to last approximately a year. Both are innovations made necessary by metal shortages.

Automobile owners will retain their old 1942 tags on their cars when purchasing the new license stamp issued in lieu of a new tag because of the steel shortage. A sufficient supply of metal tags will be available for issuance to purchasers of new cars, who will be issued stickers. Receipts will be issued to sticker buyers, as in the past when buying tags.

CUT PEANUT POLES NOW

The slack season between now and cotton picking time is ideal for cutting peanut stack poles. It will require from 15 to 30 stack poles per acre depending on the growth of the peanut vines. In addition to this two cross pieces three feet long will be needed for each pole.

It is suggsted that stack poles be cut from the scrub oak or in a pine thicket that needs thinning. The cross pieces may be made from strips or slabs from sawmills.

The method used in curing peanuts will determine to a large extent the grade of nuts produced. The best grades are produced by stacking and curing as illustrated in the above picture.

MT. PLEASANT P. T. A. TO MEET FRIDAY

LAST CHANCE TO GET CANNING SUGAR

Please let me say through your paper, to those who live in Chilton County and have not received canning sugar, that no certificate will be issued for sugar after August 29th during 1942.

The first rule of rationing was five pounds for each member of the family for canning. This rule was later changed to the present rule of one pound for each member of the family for preserves and jellies which was included in the total amount each family received.

Those who got sugar under the first rule, may receive an additional amount if they have not already done so. But no additional will be given to those who were served under the present rule.

Respectfully,
C. Fenn Jones, Chairman

USE TAX STAMP OFFICIALS HERE

The latter part of last week and the first part of this week the officials of the United States Treasury Department were here checking up on Use Tax Stamps.

The officials found very few in comparison buying their stamps as they should and left a letter from the Department with each operator or pasted to the windshield of the car giving them a last warning to send a money order for five dollars to the U. S. Treasury for a stamp or else be prosecuted.

Any automobile owner who fails to send this money order at once will be fined $25 for failure to buy a stamp. Then $25 will be added for not having one properly displayed on his windshield at the time of notification, plus the $5 required to purchase the stamp.

If the party guilty is prosecuted the official warns that an additional $20 can be added for court costs.

It will be operated in the future by the State Highway Department. Agreement made was that Chilton County and Coosa County would buy the properties with the understanding that the state would operate it. You will be able to get day and night service at the ferry.

PRICE CEILING ON COTTON GINNING

As the first trickles began in the flood of cotton that will pour through the state's gins this fall, Alabama farmers and ginners this week were advised by Houston Cole, state OPA director, that there is a ceiling price on the charge for ginning cotton.

It comes, he said within the regulation covering services rendered in connection with a commodity which became effective on July 1.

Since it is a service annually rendered at a time other than OPA's maximum price date of March, 1942, the ceiling is set by a special provision in Maximum Price Regulation No. 165.

"The provision allows the ginner, "Cole explained," to charge the highest price charge during the last period previous to March, 1942, in which the service was supplied.

"To that price he can add an amount equal to that price multiplied by the percentage increase in the cost of living between the last period and March 1942.

"These percentages are specified definitely in the regulation. The farmer or the ginner can obtain them from an attorney, or by writing direct to the OPA state office in Montgomery.

"By no means should he attempt to guess at them. They are the standards for a fair increase, matching the generl increase in the cost of living."

MORE EGGS NEEDED TO REACH 1942 GOAL

Nearly 1½ billion dozen eggs must be produced in the United States during the next 5 months if the 1942 national goal of 4½ billion dozen to meet all wartime requirements is to be reached, according to John Ivey, extension poultryman of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

Eggs and egg products are needed by our armed forces, by our allies, and for expanded domestic use, Mr. Ivey pointed out. The Agricultural Marketing Administration, U. S. Department of Agriculture, expects to buy at least 200 million pounds of dried whole-egg powder in 1942 for shipment under the Lend-Lease program.

"For the first 7 months of 1942," Mr. Ivey said, "the total of farm and nonfarm production of eggs in the United States was about 3 billion dozen.

JACK HAYES GETS NICE WRITE-UP IN MONTGOMERY ADVERTISER

Remember Jackie Hayes?

For 13 years Jackie was a second baseman in the American League. Eight of them he played with the Chicago White Sox and five with the Senators of Washington.

Jackie had more footwork than Carmen Miranda has body movements and he could shift his dogs faster than Carmen could snake hip a rumba movement. This faster than Carmen stuff made Jackie the best pivot man on a double-play in the baseball business. In fact Luke Appling, Hayes and Joe Kuhel cut down base runners like a machine gun with their one-two-and-out routine.

Well Jackie visited in town over the weekend and he saw the Rebels play Sunday. He is out of baseball now. Eye trouble cut short his career. He is now Democratic nominee for the office of Tax Collector in Chilton County.

Jackie strolled out to Cramton Bowl Sunday afternoon and saw the Rebels win and lose. "The Rebels have a good-looking minor league club and of course the first thing I noticed was that boy Ray Viers at second. I had heard about him, but that was the first time I saw him. The kid is a good pivot man and he has what it takes," added Jackie.

We asked him what made him so good on this double-play business.

"You have to keep your feet where they can't knock you off balance," Hayes said, "the secret is standing with your legs spread wide apart and learning to throw from all positions. In infield practice I used to practice shifting a different way on every throw to me and relaying the ball to first base in one almost motionless movement."

We asked if he wasn't sometimes cut pretty badly with spikes when baserunners charged into the bag.

"Some of the fellows play pretty hard he said and spikes will nip you now and then (he rolled up his trousers to display tattoo marks made by spikes)".

"Did you ever throw at any of them when they got rough?" we inquired.

"Well, not intentionally," he laughed "but then I used to throw pretty quick like and some of the boys now and then forgot to duck."

Jackie thought "Babe" and Lou Gehrig were two of the greatest fellows in the game.

"We used to play the "Babe" deep. Sometimes I would go way back into the outfield grass. Partly in self defense and then to have a chance at stopping some of his sizzling grounders.

"I remember first meeting Ruth. I had just broke in with the Senators and he was up at the batting cage. I grabbed a couple of bats and stood by When he finished batting and started off I said: 'Hey Babe.' He countered, 'Hi Kid.' Some of the name guys up there then wouldn't have bothered to speak to a freshman. The 'Babe' was a regular."

"Gehrig was another tops. The last time I saw Lou was in the Sox ball park and I stopped to shake hands and his grip was so weak that he couldn't squeeze my hand. He said that he ddin't know what was happening, but that his muscles just wouldn't respond."

Jackie played alongside some pretty good infielders in his days. He thinks that Luke Appling was the greatest of the shortfielders that he ever teamed with.

"Luke was a great player," Hayes said, "but he was almost a chronic 'complainer'. He would complain about his arm being sore, his back hurting, his knee ailing or somebody using his bat.

"I remember one time a pitcher broke his best bat in batting practice. Luke complained about that tragedy continuously until game time, saying he wouldn't get a hit all day.

"All he did was go to bat five times and get five hits."

The trade of "Bumps" Hadley by Chicago to St. Louis still amuses Hayes.

"We had just arrived in the hotel, Hadley and myself had told the bell boy to bring our bags up to the room. The bags had hardly arrived before the telephone rang and the club secretary told Bumps' that he had been traded to the Browns.

"Hadley walked over, picked up his bags, shook my hand and went down and caught another train for St. Louis."

* * *

Jackie told many other stories of his major league career but the most important thing now is his election. Jackie is taking politics as seriously as he did baseball. He is standing with his feet wide apart, ready to maneuver in any direction and throwing fast—but this time he is looking at his target. He would make Chilton County one swell tax collector.

WAR BOND DRIVE TO HOLD RALLY IN CLANTON

[illegible] War Savings [illegible] Drive [illegible] District [illegible] and will bring us [illegible] regarding the [illegible] and the War Savings [illegible] in Alabama and the United States.

In May, Alabama, led the South in the sale of bonds, and was ninth in the nation. In June, Alaba[illegible] ond, the State of Iowa [illegible]. In July, Alabama [illegible] and certainly this is an [illegible] nt of which we should all feel proud. Chilton County [illegible] our quota for [illegible]

[illegible] seems [illegible] to [illegible] that we are at war, and it is [illegible] that the situation is bad and [illegible] certainly not assured [illegible] will win this war. There are [illegible] of Chilton County boys [illegible] and we know that they [illegible] best for their country unless they are supplied with equipment, food, and ammunition, and this takes money to furnish these things. If every man woman and child in Chilton County gave all their property and money to the government, this would be little in comparison to the boy who is facing danger and death every day, fighting in order that we back home might live, but the government is not asking this. The Government is only asking ten per cent of our income and only this as a loan upon which we will be paid a fair rate of interest. As we have many times said, it is a good investment for every citizen to make, if there were no war.

America is very fortunate that the Japanese, as well as the Germans, are kept way from the shores of America, and we hate to visualize our nation and our state and county being over run or in the control of our enemy; we have seen this happen to many other nations, and we are all convinced that it can happen here in America. This is every man's fight. Let's all get war minded, make a little personal sacrifice and be at this meeting and let's make this the biggest and most enthusiastic rally that Chilton County has ever seen and when the war is over and peace comes to us again, each of you will be proud of the part that you played in helping win this war.

The Chilton County High School band will be with us to furnish the music.

Let's show our boys on the fighting front that we are behind them.

There will be no Bonds sold or pledged at this meeting. It will be [illegible] ly patriotic. We have about 500 boys now in the service for their country. We want as many fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, and relatives to [illegible] this meeting as possible and [illegible] explained from [illegible]

VICE ADMIRAL GHORMLEY
He unleashed Devil Dogs.

The effectiveness of the entire offensive was indicated by a communique from General MacArthur's headquarters in Australia which reported that the marines had captured a Japanese airfield on Guadacanal island.

Intent on India and massing strength along the Siberian frontier, the Japanese command did not like the idea of an American offensive in the Solomons. An offensive it was, however, with the intent of regaining lost territory, cutting a wedge into Japanese supply lines and carrying the fight to the enemy.

The marines were only a part of the attacking task force under command of Vice Admiral Robert L. Ghormley. They performed the necessary landing and cross-country fighting operations. But back of them was stout naval power and strong air forces which gave the Yankees a superiority the Japs had hitherto held.

U. S. AIR FORCE:
Active in Europe

The long-awaited entry of American fighting planes on a large scale into the European air war took place when U. S. fighting craft engaged in 31 operational sorties.

This baptism was regarded as a forerunner of the time when the sky above Germany would be filled with destruction-laden American planes.

In the initial operations, United States fighter squadrons flying in conjunction with Royal Air Force units made three flights over the French coast. Twenty other aerial missions were over the sea and eight were interception sorties off the coast of England, according to a communique of the United States European headquarters.

Meanwhile the RAF's assaults on German industrial centers continued with another blistering attack on Mainz in which high explosives and incendiaries were again rained down. The effectiveness of the British air blitz was attested by Dr. Joseph Goebbels, German minister of propaganda, who admitted that Germany is suffering "painful wounds" from the RAF's summer offensive, in an article for "Das Reich."

NAVY:
Policy Board Reshaped

Two sea dogs grown gray in their country's service were added to the navy general board, when Secretary Frank Knox announced a reorganization of the committee. They were Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn, retired, who was named chairman of the board, and Admiral Thomas C. Hart, retired, former commander-in-chief of the Asiatic fleet.

The board's functions are to advise the secretary on matters of policy. The navy said the board's duties and responsibilities had greatly increased since America's entry into the war and that the reorganization brought to the board officers well qualified to deal with vital problems arising out of the war.

FARM INCOME:
Ahead of HCL

Increases in farm income have thus far been able to outrun rises in the cost of living, it was disclosed in a department of agriculture survey which showed that while net income of farm families averaged 46 per cent higher in 1941 and in the first three months of 1942 than in the comparable period in 1935-36, living costs had increased approximately one-third. Thus income outstripped the rise in living costs.

RUSSIA:
Cossacks No Barrier

The emphasis which Russian communiques placed on "saber-bearing Cossacks" suggested that the Red forces in the Caucasus lacked the heavy tank and armored equipment with which Nazi advances had previously been repelled.

The appearance of new geographic names in the communiques—Cherkess, Kotelnikovski, Krasnodor and Maikop—indicated the rapidity with which the German steamroller had been able to flatten out Russian resistance and move on to new objectives.

There was no doubt that Russia needed a second front and knew it.

A Soviet communique acknowledged that one swift thrust had brought the Nazis to Mineralyne Vody, only 140 miles as the crow flies from the oil wells of Grozny.

But things were not completely hopeless. While the Germans had seized some oil in the Maikop area of the Caucasus, the big prize was still out of their reach. Between them and Baku rose the barrier of the Caucasus mountains. Moreover, Marshal Timoshenko's forces were contesting every mile of advance stubbornly.

In an area north of the Caucasus the Russian position was grave, for Stalingrad, industrial city of the Volga, was menaced by a Nazi pincers movement from the Kletskaya area on the north and the Kotelnikovski sector in the south.

INDIA:
Gandhi Spins

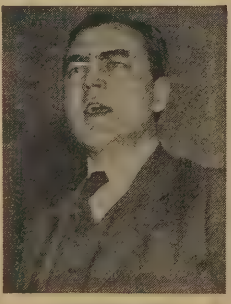
As Mohandas K. Gandhi worked at his spinning wheel in his sumptuous prison in the Aga Khan's palace, the harvest of his passive resistance campaign against the British was a series of bloody riots that spread to the far corners of India.

Madras, heart of India's war industries, populous Bombay, Wardha in the central provinces and Madura in the far south had been the scenes of outbreaks, despite official threats of death and flogging for all who took part in the revolution. That the British had the situation well in hand was indicated by the fact that the disorders were sporadic and confined to big cities, whereas the countryside was virtually unaffected.

Meanwhile in Washington, the state department made it clear that American military forces in India had been ordered to "exercise scrupulous care to avoid the slightest participation in India's internal political problems." A statement explained that "The sole purpose of the American forces in India is to prosecute war of the United Nations against the Axis powers."

PRIMARIES:
Triumphant Fish

As political wiseacres examined the results of primary elections in five states, one conclusion emerged. Isolationism was apparently fading out of the picture as a prime political issue.



HAMILTON FISH
". . . prewar issues were sunk."

Outstanding example of this trend was the result in President Roosevelt's home bailiwick, Dutchess county, New York, where Congressman Hamilton Fish, prewar critic of the President's foreign policy, won renomination by a three-to-one ratio. Informed of his success, Fish said: "Prewar issues were sunk at Pearl Harbor."

While results appeared contradictory in other states, the trend seemed to be running in this direction. Although Democratic voters defeated two prewar opponents of the administration's foreign policy in other states, these defeats were attributed by most observers to local dissatisfaction rather than emphasis on national issues. The defeated candidates in this case were Representatives Martin Sweeney of Ohio and Harry B. Coffee of Nebraska. Both were veterans in point of service in the House.

ALEUTIANS:
Japs Pay Dearly

Japan was paying a high price for the occupation of three western Aleutian islands. That was evident when a navy communique disclosed that 21 Jap ships had been sunk or damaged, an undetermined number of airplanes lost and important shore installations had been blasted since the invasion was first undertaken.

Latest exploit was a surprise attack by an American task force on Kiska harbor. Caught unawares, the Japs replied to the first American shells with anti-aircraft fire. In the raid, the navy said, shore batteries were silenced by cruisers and destroyers, fires started in the enemy camp area, a cargo ship apparently sunk and "the only resistance encountered was from aircraft."

Kiska is the Japs' main base in the Aleutians, although the Nipponese have also occupied Attu and Aggattu, at the tip of the island chain.

WAR SITUATION:
Realism Required

Examining the war situation with cold realism, Senator Millard E. Tydings, ranking majority member of the senate naval affairs committee, warned that a United Nations victory cannot be expected before 1944 at the earliest. And, added the Maryland senator, the sooner the American people realize what lies ahead, the better off the United States will be.

"It ought to be perfectly obvious to any one that, barring some wholly unforeseen and unpredictable event," he said, in a radio broadcast, "there is not a chance for this war ending in 1942, and little chance for it to end before 1944 at the earliest, unless, of course, the United Nations are willing to submit to a Hitler-dictated peace.

Senator Tydings said it is useless to hope for a revolt of the German people against the Nazi.

"It is well to remember that the German people, whether Nazi or non-Nazi, have been winning almost constantly ever since the war started. The sooner we realize the grimness and gigantic size of the task ahead, the sooner we will have a complete comprehension of the great demands needed in blood and treasure."

SENATOR TYDINGS
". . . 1944 at the earliest."

DOCTORS:
Getting Scarcer

Mounting needs for doctors in the armed services will make necessary a speeding up of medical training and an expansion of their practice by physicians remaining in civilian life.

This was made evident when statistics released in Washington showed that the country has 60,000 doctors, whereas needs for military and civilian functions will require 140,000 physicians. As a result of this situation, selective service headquarters said local boards had already begun to reclassify physicians who can be spared from civilian service.

For every 1,000,000 men in the army, approximately 6,000 doctors are required. The navy's needs are 6,500 physicians to every 1,000,000 men. President Roosevelt's recent statement that 4,000,000 men are already under arms indicates that 24,000 doctors are ticketed for military service. The army recently declared it will need 20,000 more by the end of the year.

MISCELLANY

LONDON: Soil that had not been cultivated for almost 2,000 years has been reclaimed for wartime food production in Britain, Lord Woolton, food minister, announced. This land, which is producing oats, wheat and potatoes, has not been in crop since the days the Romans moved through the district.

WASHINGTON: Senator Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. suggested that gasoline rations for politicians be cut so that traveling salesmen in eastern states could have more motor fuel. Lodge asserted that the recent gasoline rationing order deprived salesmen of adequate gasoline and was "destroying their livelihood."

MEXICO CITY: The Mexican government gave the screen actor, Ramon Novarro, permission to enlist in the United States army without losing his Mexican citizenship, it was announced here.

Young Screen Star

You don't have to sing or dance to entertain the soldiers. All you have to do is talk. Just pull up a chair, sit down and be prepared to answer a lot of questions. That's one thing I found out during my tour of the Army camps. All the fellows want to know about Hollywood and the motion picture stars and I wanted to know all about them.

If the soldiers asked me questions, it didn't compare with the quiz I put them through. All my life I've wanted to travel throughout the United States, staying a week or two in each town. I wanted to meet people from different parts of the country. When you live in one town, your scope is narrowed.

Of course, a trip like that would be impossible for a working girl, but I didn't have to make it. In each camp I met and talked with boys from every city and state in the Union. It was everything I expected and more than an education. I had to know about each one, where he came from and what he did. The thing that touched me most was that they were equally interested in me. If it hadn't been for the boys at Camp Robinson, I would never have had a wedding cake.

WEDDING CAKE DONATED TO ME BY SOLDIERS

The day we played there was my wedding anniversary. My husband, David Rose, who accompanied me on the trip, and I were talking about it. The boys overheard and that night we were given a surprise party. The highlight of the evening was a huge wedding cake topped by a tiny bride and groom. A wedding cake was the one thing I felt cheated of when we were married. Now I had that, thanks to a bunch of swell people.

The first time I sang for the soldiers I was scared to death. My knees shook and my voice trembled with a severe case of stagefright. It seems silly now, as I look back on it. Every performer dreams of stopping a show, but believe me, no show was ever stopped with the thunderous applause and appreciative response that greets an entertainer playing to a group of soldiers.

TOURING CAMPS LIKE 'OLD HOME WEEK'

In a way, touring the camps was like my old vaudeville days. Making overnight jumps on milk trains and playing four-a-day instead of the usual two. It was like "old home week." Many of the performers were people with whom my mother and father, as well as my sisters and I, had played in vaudeville.

It was wonderful to see these people, headliners twenty-five years ago, return to bring the house down in Army camps all over the country. One of the troupers told me he never hoped to experience a greater moment than the day he opened at the Palace Theater eighteen years ago. But he did when, with the same act, he received an even greater ovation at Fort Knox in Louisville, Kentucky.

A NEW CRADLE FOR TALENT

Willie Shore, the "Abba-Dabba Man," who was my favorite comedian when I was a little girl, played with us at one camp. He does an act with a seltzer-water bottle and I used to sit out front with the soldiers and watch him. It never failed that when he squirted the water it would land on me. This often resulted in my appearing on the stage in a slightly wet and bedraggled condition, but it was wonderful.

These performers were all my old friends and it was grand to see them back in front of an audience where they belong. Camp shows have not only brought entertainment to the soldiers, they have revived vaudeville and opened a new field for young hopefuls who up to now have had no opportunity to appear before an audience. A new cradle for talent has been found.

We did four shows a day. One at the reception center where the newly inducted boys gather, one in the hospital and two in the auditorium. At each show I sang two set songs and then did request numbers. It seems the boys favor the old songs and in my case the two outstanding requests were "Over the Rainbow" and "Dear Mr. Gable."

The first time they asked for the "Gable" song I was stumped. It had been a long time since I had sung it, but after ad-libbing the lyrics a few times, the original ones came back to me. The shows were all at night and my days were spent touring the camp.

There's one thing about the army. It has a swell sense of humor. When I started out I couldn't tell the difference between a private and a general. I was introduced to a colonel one night and to the great amusement of all the boys I acknowledged the introduction with a "I'm very happy to meet you, Corporal!"

They howled and when I arrived home they sent me a huge chart listing all the insignia and what each stood for. Just to keep me straight, they wrote.

EVERYONE knows that quick meals in the kitchen save time, but it was both time and space that had to be saved in this kitchen where breakfasts were eaten on the run and the children had but a few minutes for lunch. The problem was solved by building a 16-inch-wide counter under a window and then making simple stools to be slipped under it when not in use. The dimensions and construction of the stools are shown here. A saw, a screw driver and a wood chisel are the only tools that were used.

The stools were painted cream color to match the woodwork and the counter was covered with blue linoleum like the floor covering. Cream colored place mats, napkins and window curtains embroidered in colorful Mexican figures were then added to give a smart note of gaiety.

NOTE: These curtains, mats and napkins were made of flour bags and the gay figures tell a story of life down Mexico way. A flower seller; a peon on his burro; a caballero with his guitar; a man leading a pig to market, and girls carrying jugs and baskets on their heads are all worked in simple outline stitch. Transfer pattern including enough figures for six mats, six napkins, borders for one pair of curtains and extra figures for several pot holders, is available to our readers. Stickler for Good Diction Meets Stickler for Facts

Several men were seated around a table, reminiscing. One fellow, who had been trying to tell his story for some time, finally broke in:

"On the day on which my wedding occurred—"

"You'll pardon the correction," broke in the correct dictionist, "but affairs such as marriages, receptions, dinners, and things of that sort 'take place.' It is only such things as calamities which 'occur.' You see the distinction, I am sure."

The "corrected" one thought for a moment, then replied: "Yes, I see. As I was saying before I was interrupted, on the day on which my wedding occurred—"

U. S. Coast Guards Get in Trim

Dig 'em in deep, boys, heave-ho, so you'll be able to give the Axis what they've got coming. The "boys" are coast guards at their new camp near Battle Creek, Mich., the first of its kind in the Midwest, and the pictures were taken as thousands went into training there. In photo at the right the coastguardsmen go through a night drill in their breeches buoy. They are training for any kind of warfare.

Welcoming Committee for Japs

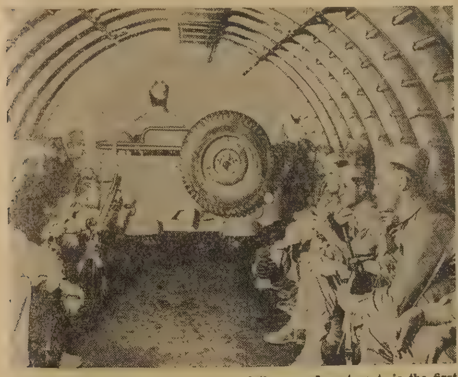
Inside World's Largest Air Transport



This picture, retouched by order of the war department, is the first of its kind ever published, and shows how fully equipped U. Unrevealed numbers of jeeps and troops can be carried in this plane, which is now being produced in large numbers for the war department.

Midshipmen of the reserve officers training corps, USN, are shown at gunnery practice aboard a navy battlewagon on a training cruise. EIGHTY army nurses whose names ought to go down in history because of the courage with which they did their work during the siege of Bataan will receive their due partially, at least, in a picture which paramount has scheduled for production in the autumn. Called "Hands of Mercy," it will be produced and directed by Mark Sandrich, who'll take a hand also in writing the scenario. Another timely picture will be Metro's "Next of Kin," in which Joan Crawford will appear as a girl without social background, who marries a naval officer, and finds herself confronted with navy snobbery. Joan will come out on top of course!

Bette Davis refuses to call her vegetable garden at her Sugar Hill, N. H., home a "victory garden." Charles Boyer couldn't have Greta Garbo for that murder mystery, "Flesh and Fantasy," of which he is both co-star and co-director. But Universal did very well by him by getting Barbara Stanwyck to play opposite him in the second sequence.

Rosalind Russell thinks she knows what the boys in camp expect of picture stars, so she decided to take all the glamour clothes that she could pack into seven trunks when starting on the tour of army camps scheduled to follow completion of "My Sister Eileen." Though on a 16-hour-a-day schedule, she'll have clothes enough to change ten times a day. "I'll wear everything but a bathing suit," she announced. And she looks so fetching in a bathing suit!

Betty Brewer, the Paramount starlet, isn't wasting any time between pictures. The 15-year-old actress, who plays a featured role in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," is studying singing and taking piano lessons—takes piano from Diana Lynn and singing from Susanna Foster, also budding stars.

Paulette Goddard's new priority gown was made from just 1½ yards of fabric. Designed by the famous Valentina, it's a dinner dress of black jersey, made with a backless top and a short, peg-top skirt. You'll see her wearing it in "The Forest Rangers."

Warner Baxter, who hasn't appeared on the screen since early last year, when he appeared in "Adam Had Four Sons," for Columbia, has been signed by the same studio to make two pictures a year. They'll be based on the radio program, "Crime Doctor," one of our most popular air shows.

Can't keep "Mrs. Miniver" out of the news. With the announcement that it was being held at the Radio City Music Hall for the ninth week—no other film has been held there for more than six—comes the news that it had been seen in that theater by 1,142,107 persons.

A 400-foot long, 200-foot wide duplicate of the original runway of the Wake Island airfield was constructed in ten days at Salton Sea, Calif., for Paramount's "Wake Island"—a picture that promises to be one of the most stirring of all this year's crop of war films.

WOODEN SAILING SHIPS

When Undersecretary of Commerce Wayne C. Taylor was flying to Rio for the Inter-America conference, he remarked:

"Our toughest problem is shipping. We have to find something that will give us the most cargo space, using the least critical material. That's the formula."

Then he looked out of the plane window and saw a tiny sailing vessel below. "You may laugh,' he said. "but we may even come to that."

That was last January. What Taylor had said on an impulse stuck in his mind. At Rio he talked it over with Brazilians who were worried about moving their coffee crop. He was sure he had the answer to the submarine campaign—ships requiring no critical materials, ships that would coast along in shallow waters and keep alive the trade among the Americas.

But he struck a snag in Washington. The Maritime commission was not interested. Skeptics said it was a reversion to the "horse-and-buggy days" of the sea. Three times Taylor worked up his project in revised forms, but each time it failed to click.

Then he tried another tack. He published an account of the project in a trade weekly of the department of commerce. Immediately it struck fire. Boat builders all over the country wanted to take part in the enterprise. Official interest was kindled.

Result was that RFC allocated $10,000,000, with which the Rockefeller Office is setting up a corporation to build and acquire wooden sailing vessels for inter-American trade.

Two designs have been completed, one for a shallow draft vessel and one for a heavy sea vessel. Yards have been selected in Latin America, and contracts are being let.

There will be an endless belt of 300-ton sailing ships, making long and short voyages, using auxiliary engines when necessary, but saving fuel by using, most of the time, the trade winds that made the Caribbean famous in the days of Clipper ships.

VICE PRESIDENT'S RECREATION

On a hot August morning, when residents of the Wardman Park hotel had fans turned on full blast, they looked with surprise to see four figures come out on the tennis court. They looked a second time. It was the vice president and a party of friends out for a set of doubles.

Henry Wallace took off a pair of slacks, threw them into a corner, and trotted out onto the court in white shorts and a white sports shirt. It was eight o'clock as the game began.

Wearing no hat or eyeshade, and wielding the racket in his left hand, Wallace entered into the game with the gusto of a high school boy. It was not tennis of professional quality, but it was high class amateur play. Frequently the ball was returned eight or ten times in a single exchange. Once when Wallace was at the net, he made five returns in succession, finally won the point.

At 9:05 the set ended. Wallace retreated to the corner of the court, pulled on his slacks, headed back to his apartment for a shower.

Other apartment dwellers, still sitting in front of the fans, sighed and shook their heads in wonderment.

CHILTON COUNTIANS SHOULD BE PROUD

Alabama Leads The Nation In Bond Sales. That is a fact of which all of us should be extremely proud.

The figures are for the month of July and show that we bought 156.9 per cent of our quota. The quota was $7,881,000. That means that more than $12,000,000 worth of Bonds were sold in Alabama for that month.

Quoting the Montgomery Advertiser of Monday: "This is a record in which both those who sell and those who buy can take justifiable pride. An effective sales organization has been built up in the state, composed of, for the most part. Patriotic men and women who are volunteering their services. The staff includes only two full-time men.

"But a sales organization alone could make no such record unless the customers were eager and ready to buy. All a sales organization can do is present the people this opportunity to buy a share of America—the people do the rest."

This is well said and applies exactly to the workers and citizenry of Chilton County. Our Chairman L. H. Reynolds, has a letter on the front page of this issue that we request that you read, then go out and redouble your efforts to cooperate in every way and buy a share in America

WAR AND HEALTH

The State Department of Health is determined to combat the tendency toward increasing death rates which was so evident in the first World War and will undoubtedly manifest itself during the present conflict, Dr. B. F. Austin, State Health Officer, declares in a discussion of present and future public health problems which he has sent to Governor-Designate Chauncey Sparks, members of the State Legislature, and leaders in medical affairs in all parts of the State.

"Practically all modern wars have brought sharp increases in the death rates of important diseases, adding greatly to the tragic loss of life, poverty and physical disability due to the diabolical instruments of destruction employed by the enemy," he said. "For example, this country's tuberculosis death rate, which had been declining from 1912 to 1916, returned in 1918 to the high rate prevailing in 1912, thus effectively wiping out six years of progress. What was true of tuberculosis was also true of other diseases, especially those affected by malnutrition, poor housing conditions, congestion, and a general upsetting of settled ways of living."

"The history of public health having furnished convincing proof that health conditions can be controlled, it would be most unwise to adopt a policy of supinely waiting for the anticipated ill effects of the present war upon our people's health to manifest themselves. If sufficient effort is expended to prevent a reversal of the downward swing can be maintained without interruption. The upward tendency will be strong, but it will not be irresistible. Economic farsightedness, patriotism and any number of other considerations point to the great wisdom of exerting the extra effort required."

IT MEANS YOU, TOO

Naturally there are some men and some women who become indignant when they get a bill with one of those stickers attached explaining OPA regulations on charge accounts.

They're not offended that the government should regulate the time limits for paying bills; nor are they offended to comply with regulations imposed under a law passed by Congress.

That is, they're not offended by the fact that the regulation is applied to the nation as a whole. But they are indignant that the regulation should apply to them as individuals.

The reaction is something like this:

"Why this wasn't meant for ME. I have a reasonable and logical excuse for being a bit delayed.' I have every intention of paying the bill. They don't know WHO I AM."

The regulations on charge accounts are one attack on inflation. Credit buying is being restricted in order to keep consumers from anticipating future income. Such regulations must apply to everybody, or nobody. The merchant has no choice in the matter. It doesn't matter how important you are what your family name is, or even whether you are a friend of his. In fact, if he permits you any special favor he is endangering your welfare and the welfare of the nation.

If you are one of those who is overly-impressed with your own importance and your own noble intentions, relax and pull yourself together. This thing applies to you also, and if it seems to be an invasion of your personal affairs remember that it is one necessary inconvenience to guard against a more serious invasion.—Montgomery Advertiser.

left comfortable homes. Postponed careers. Declared a moratorium on life!

"Turned abruptly from the ways of peace—they are now digging ditches, building roads, peeling potatoes, swabbing decks, emptying garbage, drilling, training—learning to shoot! We may thank our lucky stars that they don't have to learn to die! They are Americans. They just don't like being kicked around.

"They went cheerfully—went where they were sent, and no questions asked. Rich and poor. Republicans and Democrats. Catholics, Protestants Jews, Gentiles, white and colored. Wealth, position, religion, color, politics—these don't matter when the question is one of freedom or slavery.

"THERE ARE NO LIMITATIONS ON THE HOURS THESE BOYS WORK NOW! No rules decide their pay. They've got a grim, tough job to do, and they're doing it—like men!

They're learning that courage alone is a thin weapon against Axis planes and tanks. They're learning the tragedy of losing for want of a few extra bombers in the right place at the right time. Trey're learning the brutal, bloody cost of haggling and debating and stalling—while our sons die.'

"We stood on the curb as they left. We cheered. We went with them to the station—and shed a few tears. We drove home in our cars—to warm firesides. Then in a week or two—we stormed the stores when the demand for cloth to clothe them removed the cuffs from our pants!

"We are the unarmed forces of the United States. We have a responsibility equally as important to the cause of victory as the man in uniform.

"While we haggle over an hour or so of time spent in this program, our soldiers are being slaughtered!

"We live our comfortable lives back of the ramparts they watch. If they fail—there will be no life—but slow, living death!

"Our supreme duty—our only duty is to deliver to these young men the planes, tanks, guns and ships they need. We should work as many hours willingly to make this possible as they work willingly in using them.

"They are out there now. Waiting with the coming of each dawn. For their courage—their bravery— their sacrifice—they ask just one thing of us—Don't let us down!'

"We must not fail them! We must go over the top in the War Savings Program.

"To win this war, we must do three things—fight, produce and finance. Those of us at home can do two things—produce and finance.

"So I appeal to you and to every member of your committee to answer the call of our country with the determination to go over the top. I know you will.

"In God's name, let's be men—at least as big as our sons, our neighbors, and our friends who are on the front lines."

Cordially and sincerely yours,

State Salvage Office Will Remain In Montgomery

Announcement made by L. E. Walters, conservation manager of the Conservation Division of the War Production Board, is that Montgomery will retain the Alabama Salvage Committee offices. Governor Dixon protested a move to centralize the offices in Birmingham. The Governor said the offices should remain in Montgomery, in immediate touch with the Executive offices State Departments, county and municipal headquarters. Mr. Walters praised the committee's work, and co-operation by the Governor.

Vaccination Time For Your Dog

I am indeed very sorry to have disappointed you all this year about the vaccination of your dogs. But due to some cause beyond my power I have not been able to get any vaccine until now. But at last I have some of the high standard vaccine I have always used. The kind that when your dog is treated he will be free of Rabies for the season. We have a good rating in Chilton, not a single positive reaction from any animals head that has been sent to the Laboratory. Not a person to take the dreaded treatment in four years, no not even a horse cow or dog.

Now don't you think this outstanding? I am proud of such a record.

I am sorry we still have a few that will shirk the duty of treating the dog. I know the Deputy Inspector who checks on the ones who do not treat their dogs does not get them all. But the shame is on the fellow who will not cooperate, should his dog go mad he will not only have a mad dog. But would be responsible for all his damage for being a law violator. I am trusting we will not have to make a single arrest this year.

The war is on and it is all of our duty to do the most we can in every way so let us join in and get this done in a few days. I doubt now there will be any two stops at any place.

Please bring your dogs on out and we will give you just as fast service as we can.

All our time will be War Time and the fee will be $.50 cash.

MAPLE SPRINGS

Our revival closed here last Friday night, with 13 additions to the Church. Eight came for baptism and five by letter. The Rev. Bentley did some very plain and simple, but powerful and enthusiastic preaching. We hope to have him with us again some time.

We will have our baptising next meeting day, (2nd Sunday in August at 9:00 o'clock, near Falakto. We hope that others will decide for Christ and be baptised also.

We appreciate the fine cooperation given us by our neighboring Churches during the revival. Large crowds attended the services throughout the week.

A very interesting, yet not surprising note was sounded in our midst just recently when Brother Cecil Little said that the Lord had called him to preach. Brother Cecil is a deacon of our Church and possibly the youngest deacon in the County. He is a fine christian young man, and one of the most enthusiastic church workers to be found anywhere. The church, in all probability will license Cecil to preach on next regular meeting day. We predict for Cecil a glowing future, and a greater zeal for our Church. He is at the present, doing State Mission work under the supervision of the Alabama State Mission Board. Brother Little is slated as a worker in the foriegn field, and has his face set strongly in that direction.

He will enter Howard College when it opens in September. We must, as a Church get behind our young brother and see that he doesn't like for any necessities in achieving the things for which he has set out. Bon Voyage Cecil.

The pastor and family had a good day at Refuge last Sunday while attending the regular services there. Baptismal services were highly interesting. It was the first time the bapstry was used in night services.

Let's go to Church every Sunday and keep the revival spirit alive. If you don't go to church elsewhere come to Maple Springs. You always have a welcome.

MARS HILL

Our Sunday School was small Sunday although a good lesson was enjoyed. There is still room for lots of improvement.

Miss Mollie Gothard is on the sick list. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Ester Cofer is spending a few days with friends and relatives in our community.

Mrs. Mollie Holsombeck has returned home after a nice visit with friends and relatives in Birmingham.

Mrs. Ester Mae Gothard has been ill a few days, but glad to report she is better.

Our Home Demonstration Club met at the church last Monday night for our family night. A bountiful supper was spread and enjoyed by all. Our next regular meeting will be held with Mrs. Vickery. Let's all go and make it a successful meeting.

Next Sunday is our regular preaching day. Let's all go and carry a jar of canned fruit or vegetables for our pastor and Bro. Junkins, who helped so faithful in our revival.

CHILTON DEATH RATE OF INFANTS

The State Department of Health disclosed today that there were 34.5 deaths in Chilton County in 1940 among babies less than one month of age for every 1,000 live births, it added.

The announcement was based upon final 1940 reports by the Department's Bureau of Vital Statistics.

In the State as a whole, there were 36.8 deaths among babies less than one month of age for every 1,000 live births. There were 61.5 deaths of infants less than one year of age for every 1,000 live births.

FARMERS MAY BUY, SELL SMALL GRAIN UNDER AAA

Farmers who have surplus oat, rye, and barley seed will have an opportunity to sell them under the purchase order plan set up by the State AAA office.

Under the plan farmers may sell seed to their neighbors and receive pay for seed through the AAA. The buyers will have the cost of the seed deducted from AAA payments.

W. L. Reid, in charge of the service materials program for the State AAA, said that the plan was devised to bring buyers and sellers of these seed together and to encourage the production of home grown seed. The seed must be tested for germination and purity and the State Agricultural Conservation Committee will determine germination and purity requirements at a later date.

DON'T PUT DRYCLEANER ON SPOT AFTER AMATEUR HOME EFFORTS FAIL

The National Association of Dyers and Cleaners claims that nothing makes life harder for your drycleaner than home-treated spots . . . . the kind that you try this, that and the other on at home and then send off for professional help anyway.

As long as there are iodine and ink, Martinis and Manhattans, blueberry juice and baby foods, there will be stains. The experts' advice is: let 'em alone and you stand a better chance that they'll come home from a drycleaner's invisible. A cleaner [illegible] worth his salt can handle anything from paint to perfume providing it is merely paint or perfume uncomplicated by trial and error home remedies or some unusual condition.

Home-treated ink is one of the professional cleaner's pet problems. Many people rush for the milk pitcher the instant ink begins to wend its menacing way through a new dress or the best rug in the house. This, say those who know, is wrong - and it all started when someone remembered that lactic acid effects ink. But the amount of lactic acid in milk is so slight that the effect on even a small ink stain is negligible. And there you are with your spot complicated by a protein stain, which your long-suffering cleaner has first to "digest" with enzymes before he can begin to tackle the ink itself.

Spilled nail polish is another clothing casualty which too often lures the amateur on to ruin. Your first thought when you spill your favorite nail polish is naturally nail polish remover. This may or may not work, depending on the type of fabric. Your chances of definitely knowing the fabric content are slim. Many nail polish removers contain acetone. Acetone is harmless to some fabrics, but ruinous to cellulose acetate rayon. If your dress should be acetate rayon, and thousands of dresses are your treatment will promptly dissolve the fibers and create a discolored, stiff and permanent stain.

Attempting to banish grease or wax spots by pressing with a hot iron over a blotter is another practice the professional drycleaners look upon with horror. Heat should never - no, never! - be applied to any spot or stain because it usually has effect exactly opposite to the one you strive for Instead of removing the spot, it may "set" it for life.

All in all, say the drycleaners, spots come in an almost infinite variety of sizes, shapes and colors and chemical content. Knowing what each is and how to treat it is practically a life work ni itself. In general, food stains fall into the broad groups of starch, sugar, fats, oils, water and albumin. What's right for one is wrong for another. Combinations require special methods. If you spill mayonnaise, for example, the oil must be treated as such, but the egg is albumin - something quite different. Just to make it more complicated, the same food will act differently in cooked and raw state. Raw starch is treated one way, but cooked starch has the characteristics of sugar. Unless you hold a degree in chemistry it's next to impossible to know all the fine points of the care and feeding of food stains - to say nothing of medicine, ink, glue, chewing gum, grass and leg lotion.

Even if you did know your stains and spots backward and forward, there is still the entire field of textiles to master before you could do successful spotting. There is the dye to be considered, the fibers, the weave, and the finish. What will remove coffee from rayon may not remove it from wool. A method safe on seersucker may be fatal to satin. Even granting, say the drycleaners, that you knew all about stain and all about textiles, which is unlikely, there is still that thing called skill. After you have finally settled on the right treatment for the right fabric, there is considerable technique required to handle them properly - a technique which explains why "spotters" are among the highest paid craftsmen in the drycleaning plant. Almost everyone's instinct is to rub a spot. The professional "tamps" it so as not to disturb the threads of the fabric. Then, too, removing a spot is not much help if it is promptly replaced by a conspicuous and glaring ring. The professional skillfully "feathers" it out so that not a trace remains. That takes experience and practice.

Boiled down, the drycleaners' advice is:- let an expert do it. Some cleaning can be successfully done at home (although the fire hazard people are against it) but the percentage is so small that the simplest and, in the long run, least expensive thing to do is shoot the problem off to a professional. Inept experimenting only makes the drycleaner's job harder, and lessens your chance of satisfactory results.

And while you are at it, remember that promptness helps. Fresh stains react better than stale ones. To top it off, tell your cleaner what has caused the spot. Those two rules - bundling off the garment to a quality drycleaner immediately after it has been stained and identifying the stain - can do more to prolong the life and looks of your cloths and household things than all the hme treatment in the world.

Before Yanks Blasted Japs in Solomons

Before the U. S. "devil dog" marines, assisted by Allied bombers and naval units, began operations against the Japs in the strategic Solomon islands, they went through long and arduous preparations. U. S. marines are shown here carrying supplies from barges as they start setting up a base on an island in the South Seas, getting ready for the "real thing."

Unwelcome Visitors for Herr Rommel

Navy 'Takes Over'

A thousand employees of the General Cable corporation plant at Bayonne, N. J., walked out shouting, "Let the government take over." It's a Good Morning With Flapjacks in Syrup!
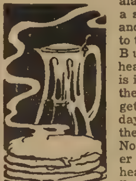
(See Recipes Below.)

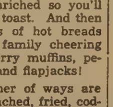
Breakfast Time



Whether you wake to the crowing of the rooster or the jingle of an alarm clock, it's a signal to be up and about seeing to the day's work. But first! A hearty breakfast is in order so that the system can get started on its day's routine in the proper form. No matter whether it's for the head of the family going off to the defense plant, daughter on her way to the nurses' aid class, mother or the youngsters, no one should skip blithely over this meal of the day.

For years doctors and dieticians have looked askance at those who passed up a real up-and-at-them breakfast because it doesn't give the body a chance to start functioning early in the day. If you're fat, you need fruit-egg-toast-and-beverage breakfasts to start your metabolism working at top speed to start tearing down of excess tissues.

If you're thin, then you need just as much of a breakfast with a few more trimmings, to start building yourself. If you're normal, you still need the hearty breakfast so you can maintain your health and give your body its daily nutritional requirements. And one of the best recommendations for a real breakfast is the good way it starts you on your day's work. None of that drowsy, it's-hard-to-wake-up-in-the-morning feeling. No, Ma'am!



Hardest thing about breakfasts is that it's easy to get into a rut by serving the same foods morning after morning. This is rather strange, considering how much time and effort is spent on getting variety into the other two-squares a day. Well, why not variety for breakfast?

You can have this variety in fruit. Yes, I know you like juice pretty well, but you'll get out of the morning doldrums quickly enough if you punctuate the breakfast with favorite fruits-in-season, other fruit juices and some of those canned fruits you put up during the summer months.

Toast? If you insist on toast, try using whole wheat, rye, raisin, cracked wheat, etc. Naturally, the bread should be enriched so you'll get the most out of toast. And then there are all sorts of hot breads that will send the family cheering off to work—blueberry muffins, pecan rolls, muffins, and flapjacks!

This Sunday's Breakfast

Sliced Peaches in Orange Juice
*Feather-Fluff Griddle Cakes
Poached Eggs
Maple Syrup
Beverage
*Recipe Given

Eggs in all manner of ways are a good standby. Poached, fried, coddled, baked, scrambled, a la goldenrod, or combined with ham, sizzlin' sausage or crisp brown bacon—there you have a week's ideas.

The Cereals.

At least one serving of cereals is the nutrition requirement for the day. This is most easily served at breakfast, with cream and sugar and perhaps a few slices of fresh fruit or berries. Ready-prepared cereals are delightful, especially in the warmer weather — they're crisp, light, and nutritious. Recently some of the prepared cereals have been scientifically restored so they have all the whole-grain richness and nutritive value in them.

Light as down flapjacks are a welcome sight at breakfast! Try these:

Feather Fluff Griddle Cakes.
(Makes about 18 cakes)

2 eggs, well beaten
2 cups rich sour milk or buttermilk
1½ cups white flour
½ cup prepared pancake flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder

Have all ingredients at room temperature. Sift dry ingredients thoroughly. Add milk to eggs. Gradually stir in dry ingredients. Stir just enough to make a smooth batter. Cook on ungreased griddle. Try out one cake and if batter is too thick, add a little more milk.

Fried eggs are good to serve with these griddle cakes. Fry them thus: Slip eggs into a scant ⅛ inch layer of moderately hot fat. Cook at moderate heat, dipping fat over eggs to cook to desired doneness. Turn, if desired. Serve at once on warmed platter.

Sunday Breakfast.

Place sausage links in a frying pan, add a small amount of water. Do not prick the skins. Cover and let steam 5 minutes, then drain. Cook over slow heat, add 3 tablespoons of peach juice to 8 sausages and let brown. Serve with poached eggs on top of toasted English muffins. Red currant jelly or golden peach jam makes a delectable dish.

If you've never tried old-fashioned scrapple, you have a real treat a-comin' to you:

Pork Sausage Scrapple.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 cups cornmeal
4 cups boiling, salted water
1 pound sausage, in bulk

Cook cornmeal in rapidly boiling salted water, and add sausage to mixture. Blend thoroughly. Rinse a loaf pan with cold water and pack in hot scrapple. Let stand in icebox overnight, covered with waxed paper. Dip in beaten egg and fry until golden brown. Serve with spiced applesauce, cranberry sauce or maple syrup.

A variation of the ham 'n' eggs theme is this:

Frivolettes With Ham.
(Serves 6)

6 hard-cooked eggs, remove yolks
4 tablespoons grated cheese
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Salt and pepper
Melted butter

Mash yolks and mix with cheese, butter, seasonings. Refill whites. Press together. Pour a rich cream sauce over them and sprinkle buttered crumbs over them. Brown a few minutes in a hot oven. Serve on browned circles of ham.

Please enclose a stamped, addressed envelope for your reply.

Lynn Says:

Tips for Breakfast Fruits: You're going to be a little short on sugar so do the most with what you have. A little salt in cooked fruit or sprinkled on such things as melons brings out true fruit flavor, requires less sugar.

Lemon or lime juice with melon enhances the natural sweetness. Try it.

Orange juice, chilled before the fruit is squeezed, is an excellent pep-you-up. Let the sugar stand on grapefruit a while (while the coffee percolates) and the sugar will melt and go further. Try eating fruit or juice first, but saving half to finish off your breakfast—it will leave a fresh taste in your mouth.

Fruit stewed should have sugar added after it is stewed, with a pinch of salt. You won't need as much sweetening, this way.

Cook dried fruits with a slice of lemon or orange. These citrus fruits have an affinity with dried apricots, peaches, prunes and apples.

AAF Learns Art of Camouflage

AT FORT BELVOIR, VA., where the engineer board is training officers from all over the country in the gentle art of making things look like what they ain't, much knowledge is crammed into a two-week's course.

Three busloads of officers, ranging from second lieutenants to lieutenant colonels under the direction of two first lieutenants, set out each morning to a special sector three miles from the post. In a field of about five acres are Curtiss P-40 pursuits staked down amid a group of pines. No airplane, one concludes, could land in such rough terrain. However, these planes are carefully constructed dummies, made of plywood.

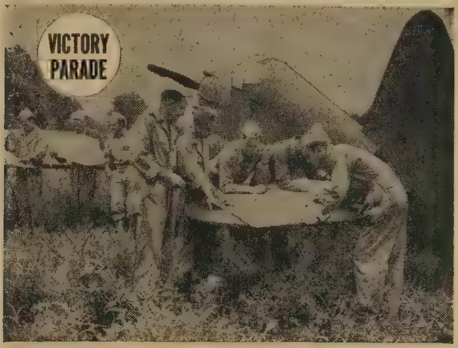
These "mock-ups" serve to misdirect the enemy while the real planes, hidden a short distance away, are camouflaged and safe.

One of the lieutenants says: "Captain Blank will take ten men with strong shoulders, pick a likely spot and get going. You'll find ample supplies over there—tools, brushhooks, pickaxes. Pull your plane to your spot, find drapes, and try to conceal it."

Officers, lieutenants and lieutenant colonels alike grab the 300-pound dummy plane and carefully haul it to the appointed spot. Chips fly, stumps are razed and the ground smoothed out. In no time at all the space is cleared. The plane is pulled into position, and the officers' swarm over the ship like the Lilliputians over Gulliver.

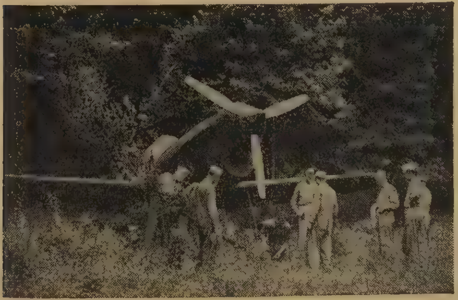
When the job is done the students return to their instructor to report. He criticizes the job from every angle. They do the job over and over again until it is done right.

The following series of pictures show you the camoufleurs at work.



Student officers from all parts of the country plot positions for camouflage and emergency fields on a relief map.

Students study land turtles, one of nature's best examples of camouflage.



Officers cover the plane with trees after hauling it to a wooded area.

A green netting is placed over the plane which blends with landscape.

These dummy planes look like the real thing from ground or air.

Japs in Aleutians Must Be Bayoneted Out, Not Bombed

NEW YORK.—Harold McCracken, explorer for the American Museum of Natural History, says Japanese in the Aleutians are just like Germans in Florida, and he says furthermore that we can't bomb them out. They can hole up like gophers in the native huts, and in Mr. McCracken's view must be "chased with bayonets into the Bering sea," if we are to dislodge them at all.

This should qualify as expert testimony. Mr. McCracken knows the Aleutians. In July, 1928, heading the Stoll-McCracken expedition, he unearthed a sarcophagus, on top of an almost inaccessible Aleutian rock islet, containing the mummies of three adults and a child. This culminated his 11-year search for stone age remains along the Aleutian land-bridge.

As an archeologist and explorer, the author of a number of books, he has studiously pieced out the historic jig-saw puzzle of his various findings and taken due account of their bearing on war and peace and the present and future of mankind. In 1934, he elaborated a plan for an "international grand jury" to end war which, in some aspects, was the first of several suggestions for fusing individual interests, across national boundaries, rather than grouping sovereign nations. More pertinent to his current observation is his previous conclusion that the Japanese invasion of the Aleutians was long planned and carefully prepared.

Mr. McCracken, a lean, gentle man with horn-rimmed spectacles, doesn't look like a man who has killed about 20 Kodiak grizzly bears, but he has, and such encounters are a minor detail of his desperate adventures in shipwrecks, blizzards and lonely treks in the frozen wilderness.

It was in 1915 that he first went to Alaska, heading an expedition for Ohio State university, his alma mater. In 1919 and 1920, he placered pay dirt on the Alaska peninsula, and into 1922-23 headed up a moving picture expedition, again for Ohio State university, to film big game. This led him into the production of travel and documentary films.

Mikhailovitch Still in There Socking the Axis

ONE of our first stories, as a beginning reporter in Chicago, was a rock and sock fight between some Jugoslavs and another Balkan group, down around the Hegewisch steel mills. The Jugoslavs were outnumbered but they won.

They were more versatile than the opposition, better in knee and elbow work, and could land a chunk of slag or a slug of pig-iron on an exposed skull with skill and authority. Their own skulls seemed strangely resistant to such missiles.

As to the fight, they seemed to enjoy it, and when it was over set up a patriotic song which ranged far over the slag heaps and far into the night.

It would be nice to recall that the defeated challengers were Italians, but they weren't and that good news has been held for another day.

The Jugoslav guerrillas, 16 battalions of them, are chasing the Italians out of the former province of Bosnia. At the time of the Axis attack on Jugoslavia, we recalled that Hegewisch battle and would have made a bet with any taker that something like that would happen. In the above and other encounters we have noted that in fighting the Jugoslavs seem to have their mind on their work more than any other combatants. And, again, they seem to enjoy it.

His flaring black mountaineer's mustache has become a gonfalon of hope to those who want to believe that victory may be won by a stou heart and not necessarily by the biggest tanks. It is reported that 3,000 Italians have been captured or killed in the last two weeks and that the general's forces have now wrested 11,000 square miles from the Axis. They didn't try to make their second front a jug-handled deal.

The rocky-faced General Mikhailovitch, a colonel of artillery several years before the war, came out of the First World war with a strong distaste for the German military clique.

When the blitzkrieg hit, he was invited to join officials and army leaders in a plane flight to Cairo. He said he had another engagement, went back to the mountains and emerged with a few hundred of his hard-rock boys, started savage forays and later worked them into carefully planned and operated military actions.

Sportlight

by GRANTLAND RICE

NANA WNU

THE brilliant pitching record set by Spud Chandler, Georgia's former half-back, has brought an old discussion out of the dust. How many former football luminaries have also starred under baseball's Big Tent?

Grantland Rice

More than a few managers, Joe McCarthy especially, believe football is a bad dish for any baseball player to take on.

They figure football takes too heavy a toll in injured ligaments, battered shoulders and wounded ankles or knees.

They also point to the long list of football stars who made their bids for the big league, only to blow the job.

But there were more than a few who didn't blow.

Among the First

Christy Mathewson was better known as a football star at Bucknell than he was as a pitcher.

He had just won a major Bucknell game with a long drop kick when he came to the Giants, where Andy Freeman wanted him to play first base. A college football star was a sensation in those days.

About the same time a big California football star by the name of Orvie Overall came to the Cubs. He was among the best.

Mickey Cochrane was a better football player at Boston U. than he was at baseball. Mickey had everything an All-America entry needs.

Lou Gehrig was among Columbia's better backs.

Eddie Collins was a Columbia quarter-back of first class merit before starring at second for the Athletics, where he first played under an assumed name.

Jim Thorpe was a fine outfielder, but Jim couldn't quite locate a fast breaking curve.

Reese and Collins came up from football at Vanderbilt to join the Giants and Dodgers. Ernie Nevers, one of football's best, couldn't quite stick in the majors. Schoolboy Rowe was another football star.

Joe Gordon was a football wonder as an Oregon freshman before they made him stick to baseball. Gordon would have been as big a star in pro football as he is in baseball. Ask Tuffy Leemans.

Joe Gordon

The tops of the football - baseball combinations were Mathewson, Overall, Cochrane, Collins, Gehrig and Chandler.

There have been more than we have mentioned here, but this sextette has the lead.

Trained Muscles

The majority of all the leading stars were one-game people. Bobby Jones, for example, played no other game but golf until he was grown. Every muscle in his body was trained and developed for a golf swing.

Bob had no conflicting muscles that wouldn't work together.

Schoolboy Rowe was a star at football, golf, tennis, shot-putting and other pastimes while playing baseball. Over-developed muscles had no helpful effect on his pitching career.

Ty Cobb played no game but baseball. Cobb refused to swing a golf club until near the end of his major league career.

Ty still insists the two swings are different. They are in Cobb's case, as Ty in baseball was more of a puncher than a swinger. Ruth, Speaker and others were swingers who could play golf in the 70s.

The Case of Chandler

The case of Spurgeon Chandler, the Carnesville Clipper, takes an unusual angle.

Here is a pitcher who has won 22 of his last 24 games, turning back to the summer of 1941. And this happened after he had passed his 32nd birthday.

As a starter it took Chandler five years and a touring jaunt through seven different cities before he finally parked himself on a Yankee bench. After that a yanked arm ligament and later a broken ankle were no great help.

When Spud dropped his first four games last spring his outlook was about as sunny and as cheerful as a windowless cellar.

And then it happened—10 straight for 1941—12 out of 14 for 1942—and almost every game brilliantly pitched.

I recall years ago Harry Mehre, then Georgia's coach, telling me that Chandler was one of the hardest workers on his squad.

Chandler has proved that by taking the knocks and raps that came his way without a kick or an alibi. It took him 10 years to locate the smoother road, and 10 years is quite a chunk from a pitcher's career But I doubt today that anyone car name a better pitcher.

Extra Food Stockpiles Planned by Farmers

American homemakers—21 million strong—are rallying to ceate an extra stockpile of home canned food in 1942, reports Claude R. Wickard, secretary of Agriculture.

"Judging from the results of a questionaire, pantry shelves this year will be half again as full of home canned fruit, vegetables and meat as they were in the peace-time years of 1935 and 1936," he said. "This extra food will allow more of the commercially canned products to go to the men at the front and to our allies—will help 'win the war and write the peace' with food."

"KEEP 'EM RINGING"

THE Liberty Bell is ringing again — throughout this militant land.

But it's not just one bell that rings today.

Tens of thousands of them are clanging "right of way for the U.S.A." as the troop trains roll, as freight trains bring together at the war plants every sort of raw material, and as they speed tanks, guns, planes and munitions from assembly lines to our fighting forces.

For the bells of America's locomotives—locomotives moving a million tons of freight a mile for every minute of the day and night—are Liberty Bells of 1942.

To do their part in keeping this "War of Movement" rolling, the railroads have enlarged their plant and increased the efficiency of their operations.

Today railroad equipment and railroad men are delivering the finest transportation job in history.

The size of that job is constantly increasing as ships are withdrawn from domestic service and as rubber-tired traffic turns more and more to the rails. To handle a growing job, railroads have bought and built more cars and locomotives, and would like to get still more. Other national needs for critical materials, however, have made it impossible for them to get as much new equipment as they would like. But you can count on it — the railroads will make the best use of what they have and what they can get. You can count on it—they'll keep up their all-out effort toward the great objective—to keep America working, to keep America fighting, to keep America free.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

Parker Taylor has sold City Grill to M. T. Posey and the new owner has "taken over." Mr. Posey has had about ten years in the Restaurant [illegible] and wants the folks to know if [illegible] ren't pleased with the food and the service it won't be his fault. He says things didn't go so good the first week because he didn't know just the [illegible] amount of stock to order and he was short on some food called for. But from now on his motto is going to be "If we please you, tell others; if [illegible] don't tell us."

Have you been up to the courthouse [illegible] Bea Bryan's avacada pear grove [illegible] sir, she has a grove up there with one trees in it and the largest one about 8 inches tall. Bea says that she had grown just about everything from carrot tops to sweet potatoes so Betty Jones told her how to grow this pear tree and furnished the pear. Now she's just waiting until this year's crop comes [illegible] so she can sell her harvest and [illegible]

We owe apologies this week to Mr. C. Fenn Jones for a very, very sweet mistake. It was about that sugar article [illegible] left out a complete line of the [illegible] ruined the thought in the [illegible] W[illegible]er running it again this week [illegible] ould have appeared.

We keep receiving anonymous letters from some readers giving misinformation about the news of their community and failing to sign the correspondence. Please sign your letters and we will not print name if you request it to be left off. Also it would be a good idea to check on your information before sending it in to be sure you are right.

We sent out a call for pastors last week and a few come to see us but not nearly enough. It's a good opportunity for you and your community and your church so come in and talk it over with us.

Dr. J. L. Bennett probably killed the most ferocious o'possum that was ever killed in these parts the other night. Slipping out to his hen house in his pajamas and slippers he appeared very much like Sherlock Holmes of old, but for the lack of a pipe and a cap with two brims, one pointing south and the other north. Anyway he found this wild animal in amongst his poultry and according to reliable reports had to shoot it nine times before he was satisfied. Doc could have been thinking about a cat having the nine lives but after he got past five he just went on and took no chances. Some say that if the Allied powers are as rough on Hitler as Dr. Bennett is on o'possums this war won't last long

One of our friends, we won't mention any names tells us that the other night the rain was coming down in torrents, the lightning was flashing and the thunder was rolling. Time after time the lightning would strike close to his bed room. Finally one of the bolts hit him and knocked him right out of the bed. He got up off the floor, rubbed his head and muttered, "Alright dear, I'll get up."

Friends from Los Angeles dined with us Tuesday evening at the Exchange Hotel and we believe will never get done talking about it. There were two couples and the ladies had never eaten real Southern cooking and it had been many years since the gentlemen had enjoyed it, having left the South some fifteen years ago. Let me say that Mrs. Ida Hendrick who is running the Exchange will, be well advertised both in Southeast L.A. and points between for her wonderful dinners.

Now if the fellow who pulled the bumper bar off the old Ford would bring it back things would be fine. Anyone can make the mistake, of hanging a bumper once in a while but metal is too scarce to lose. About pulling it off is alright but please return it . . . . A. B. Windham out at Windham's Smoke House, phoned us all over town Tuesday night to tell us to look at the moon that it was in eclipse, and sure enough it was. We had been watching it since exactly 2:01.

Herman L. Harris Now a Major

One Clantonite who has certainly climbe fast in the U. S. Army Air Forces is Herman L. Harris, son of Mr. and Mrs. Grady Harris of Clanton. Capt. Harris was promoted by order of the War Department in Washington to the rank of Major, the Public Relations Office at Napier Field announced.

Major Harris holds one of the most important positions at Napier Field, Army Air Forces advanced flying school near Dothan, Ala.; the position of Post Adjutant. The Post Adjutant is responsible directly to the commanding officer; and handles most of the administrative functions of this large flying school, now at the peak of wartime speed. Before becoming Adjutant, Major Harris was Personnel Officer at Napier Field.

Major Harris holds a Batchelor of Science degree from Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, Ala., where he was a member of Phi Kappa Phi social fraternity and Scabbard and Blade, national honorary military fraternity. He was commissioned First Lieutenant July 13, 1941, and received his Captaincy on April 4, 1942.

LAST CHANCE GET CANNING SUGAR

Please let me say through your paper, to those who live in Chilton County and have not received canning sugar, that no certificate will be issued after August 29th during 1942.

The first rule of rationing was five pounds for each member of the family for canning. This rule was later changed to the present rule of one pound to four quarts of fruit to be canned, and one pound for each member of the family for preserves and jellies which was included in the total amount each family received.

Those who got sugar under the first rule, may receive an additional amount if they have not already done so. But no additional will be given to those who was served under the present rule.

Respectfully,
C. Fenn Jones, Crairman

Corp. Hughie Taylor Is Promoted

"Soldiers have to fight and swear
To win the stripes they proudly wear:
While zebras, most unfit for war,
Have stripes enough to fill a corps.
Such unequal distribution
Is part of heavens constitution."
—Hoffenstien.

Hughie C. Taylor of Cooper, Ala., the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Taylor, of Cooper, Ala., has just been promoted to Corporal, according to Major Samuel K. Eck, Commanding Officer of the newly designated unit of the Air Service Command. This unit is temporarily located at Lubbock Army Flying School and is training its men to be ready to supply the needs of other fields at a moments notice.

Corporal Taylor attended Verbena High School.

He is with the Headquarters Headquarters Squadron in this new mobile unit which is known as the "Fightin' 83rd."

His present duties are Postal Clerk.

LETS TALK ABOUT WAR BONDS

When you hear that bombing planes cost $135,000 and tanks $75,000 and anti-aircraft guns $50,000—And when you hear too, that America needs 60,000 planes, 45,000 tanks and 20,000 anti-aircraft guns at once—Well itdoesn't take much figuring to see that winning this war calls for families and our farms at stake we should be glad to give this money if it were necessary to the winning of this war. But, we are only asked to loan it, and at a good profit to ourselves to boot.

DO YOU KNOW? When you buy WAR BONDS you are saving, not giving?
You can start getting WAR BONDS by getting WAR STAMPS for as little as 10c?
WAR BONDS are sold on a money-back guarantee by the United States Government?
When you hold WAR BONDS 10 years you get back $4 for every $3 that you invest?

We could fill a column with reasons why you should buy WAR BONDS. But the biggest reason says President Roosevelt is, "Every dime and dollar not vitally needed for absolute necessity should go into WAR BONDS and STAMPS to add to the striking power of our armed forces."

Chilton County is running $15,000 behind in her August quota. We have yet to fail and the Chairman of the County Committee in a letter on this page urges every man woman and child in the county to get behind them and help in reaching again the quota set by the Government for Chilton County for August. It isn't much to ask when you think of what the boys at the front are going through. Step up and BUY BONDS

STATE WAR BOND LEADERS

Praise Alabama Loyalty—Ed. Leigh McMillan, Brewton, left, state chairman, and Joseph H. Lyons, Mobile, state administrator of the War Savings Staff for Alabama, this week issued a statement commending those thousands of volunteer workers and buyers of War Bonds who in July lifted their state to the top of the 48 in percentage of sales to quota. At the same time they warned that "Winning this war will require outstanding performance on the home front not only in July, but in August and September and on through the course of the war. Alabama must not fail the boys at the front!"

Houston Cole Named Pres. At Jacksonville

HOUSTON COLE

Houston Cole, (above) newly elected president of the Jacksonville State Teachers College made his first official visit to his alma mater Tues.

Cole announced a definite decision Saturday to quit his job as director of the Office of Price Administration in Alabama and to accept the place left vacant by C. W. Daugette, who had served in this capacity for forty-three years.

He stated, after considerable pressure had been brought to bear on him to remain at his OPA post, "The college at Jacksonville needs a president now, and it would not be fair to the State Board of Education nor the college for me to ask for a leave of absence.

"I want to thank all of those volunteers among the business men of Ala. who compose the War Price and Retioning Boards for the cooperation they have given the OPA under my directorship, for the fine spirit of patriotism they have displayed and for the many expressions from them in urging me to reconsider and remain with the OPA.

"Also, I want the people to know that I am leaving the OPA because I feel it is my duty to my state in these times when the training of teachers is so important and because it would be most difficult for me to decline an honor and a trust given me by the State Board of Education."

President Cole is a native of DeKalb County and his wife is the former Miss Leone Pruett, of Albertville. They have one daughter, Beth. He is expected to assume his duties at the college on September 1st in time for the opening of the Fall Quarter on September 7th.

Editor: Chilton County News
Clanton, Alabama
Dear Sirs:

It will be impossible for me to contact all the people in the county during this month and I am again asking space in your paper to say a few words to the people.

We are behind with our quota over $15,000 and I hope everybody, every person in this county that possibly can or will to buy Bonds between now and September the 1st. We all have the pride in our county. We all appreciate the 500 boys that are in the service for their country [illegible] county and if it was [illegible] personally we would give [illegible] for we have to save these [illegible] are not asked to do this, we are only asked to loan the government all the surplus and pay at least 10% of our income. We must not fail. When we read the morning and evening news, we are reminded of the great need of our money to furnish these noble and patriotic boys bombs, shells, and other implements of war to save [illegible] awful doom that other countries [illegible] Hitler has conquered and that people are being lined up and shot without trial if they even criticize the government.

If we all will do our duty between now and the first of September it would be no burden to any one [illegible] make an effort and fill or reach our quota for August.

Respectfully,
L. H. Reynolds
Executive Chairman.

POLICE RECOVER 26 STOLEN TIRES AND JAIL 5 MEN

The alleged confessions of five men yesterday of participating in the theft and disposal of 30 automobile tires led Montgomery police officers to believe that they have ended the epidemic of tire thefts in the city.

Three of the men, Curtis Ledbetter and James Ledbetter, of 906 Martha Street, and Clyde Vann, alias "Hot Shot," 27 May Street, police said, confessed to stealing 30 tires from the following places: 10 from Standard Service Station, 601 Bell Street, and 20 tires from Standard Service Station corner Fairview Avenue and Cloverdale Road.

Rivers Patterson and Staunched Miller, both of Chilton County, were said to have confessed to Highway Patrol Officers in Clanton, of buying and concealing 26 of the tires.

The Ledbetters and Vann were charged with grand larceny while Patterson and Miller were charged with buying and concealing stolen property.

Detectives Lewis Miller and Mike Chisholm along with Detective Chief Paul Rapport worked several weeks on the tire thefts before linking the Ledbetters and Vann with the robberies. The Ledbetter brothers were arrested first and after questioning the two the officers arrested Vann for participation in the case.

On information received through the grilling the detective sought the cooperation of the Highway Patrol and asked them to try and locate the stolen tires in Chilton County in the vicinity of Clanton.

An all night search by patrol officers Thursday resulted in the arrests of Patterson and Miller and recovery of 26 tires. Officers said that Patterson bought 16 of the tires for $100 and Miller 10 for $200.

Detective Miller and Chisholm with their chief investigated the case in the city while Capt N. W. Kimbrough, Lieut. T. J. Carlisle, Sergt. Floyd Dyer, of the Highway Patrol, with Special Investigator T. I. Hutton and S. E. Tranum of the Automobile Detective Bureau, directed the search for the stolen tires and made the Chilton County arrests.

Natives of India Turn Out to Fight Foe

In the Punjab region of India recruiting officers have no trouble in getting volunteers to fight against Hitler and Hirohito. As the war comes closer to India young men from far-flung districts are turning out to fight the common foe. In the recruiting center shown at the left the doctor, an Indian, vaccinates each recruit on the point of his left shoulder. What's Cooking? Victory Vegetables!

Dress Rehearsal for Solomon Assault

Before the hard-hitting U. S. marines stormed the Solomon islands they went through maneuvers that shaped them for this particularly tough assignment. In picture at top a land mine hurls mud and sea water high into the air as the marines land troops and stores after establishing a bridgehead in the South Sea Islands, where U. S. forces and the Japs have been exchanging heavy counter-blows. Below: Unloading a heavy gun, part of the equipment of a landing party in the South Sea islands.

Bundist Arraigned

Hans Diebel is shown entering a U. S. marshal's car in New York. Diebel, leader of the German-American bund in Los Angeles, pleaded not guilty to an indictment accusing him and 28 others of conspiring to have bund members evade the alien registration act of 1940. He is also charged with attempting to evade the selective service act.

'General' Coxey Leads New Army

Ensconced in a horse-drawn buggy, "General" Jacob S. Coxey, who once led an army of the hungry to Washington, is shown leading a small army of war workers in Massillon, Ohio, during the tribute paid to Massillon war industry by the army and navy. High officials of the war and navy departments and heroes of the army and navy participated in the "salute to Massillon."

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—It might be a good idea to turn Glenn L. Martin loose on this cargo plane job and let him see what he can do. We once saw him pull through a doubtful enterprise which wasn't nearly so good a short-end bet as making cargo planes in a hurry.

'Clumsy Looking Kite' Opened Eyes Of Public in 1912

It was at Avalon Bay, Los Angeles, in 1912, when aviation was fascinating outdoor vaudeville, with its hall mark of world destiny still hidden. Bleriot, the French flier, had out-stunted our lads by a flight over the English channel.

On this golden day in 1912 there appeared at the water's edge a clumsy looking kite, precariously poised on a single wooden pontoon. Word got around that this Martin, whoever he might be, was actually going to fly this thing over to Catalina island, 20 miles away.

Young Martin had been ramming around with barnstorming troops, with home-made planes, known to fliers as a daring innovator, but with the public in general not quite sure of even his first name. Lincoln Beachey, Art Smith, Si Christofferson, Bob Fowler and others had found in the California skies a clear field of operations and Martin was one among many there, having a good time in what seemed then a sport, rather than a business. At any rate, bankers of the day so regarded it.

He had built his Catalina Clipper in an abandoned church, with such material as he might come by, without benefit of bankers. We recall that it had a quaint, homespun look. It seemed that it might do almost anything except fly. Getting ready for the take-off, young Martin wasn't paying any attention to the skeptical crowd. He tightened up some bolts, put an inflated rubber tube around his neck, and strapped a compass around his leg. Then, to state it precisely, he flew to Catalina.

Just in passing, when he reached the financial, as apart from the technical, stage of his operations, he wore most elegantly tailored black flying suits, and no more messing around in dungarees. His flying mates called him "Dude Martin," but this get-up achieved an effect of safe and sane conservatism and it was not surprising that he got backing from the bankers.

THE last time we saw Waldo Frank was in the summer of 1939, on our terrace in the country. It was a month or two before the war started and Mr. Frank was deeply troubled. It was a dead-end conversation, every way we turned. War was coming—of that Mr. Frank felt sure. We would be pulled in, and we wouldn't be ready, either with arms or understanding.

S. America Chief Interest of This Prolific Writer

The mood of the conversation is more clearly recalled than just what Mr. Frank said. However, we do remember that he was sad because continental America had not shaken loose from a dying Mediterranean civilization and built a proud and safe and cohesive civilization of its own.

A short, stocky man, with a loose tweed suit and a neat black moustache, he moved down a trail in the dusk to a dark cave of interlocking forest trees. The dark trail led to Buenos Aires where he lies today, a casualty of a war of ideas which he has been waging for more than 20 years.

Six Fascist thugs beat him with the butt of a revolver, after the Axis - inclined Argentinian government had found him persona non grata.

His book, "Our America," published in 1919, was both an exalted declaration of faith and a disquieting appraisal of our complacent and slovenly failure to realize what the gods had bestowed on us, and to measure up to this endowment. In this and many later books and magazine articles, he preached a somewhat mystic philosophy of "The Whole," with such earnest faith and plodding persistence that it is not surprising that he carried his challenge to the dangerous political front of Argentina.

During the decades in which he wrote nearly 40 books—he is one of the most prolific of American writers—Mr. Frank was profoundly interested in South America, in his conviction that North and South were interdependent, in their cultural and economic destiny. When he first was in Argentina in 1929, the president provided him an airplane for his tour of the country. It was in that year that he visited the principal cities of South America, on a lecture tour, appealing for continental solidarity.

Human Guinea Pig Club

The guinea pig, which is domesticated in most parts of world, has been widely used in bacteriological experiments. T experimental use of the guinea pig has become so general that mere mention of this creature's name suggests the idea of " it out on Rover."

The "Human Guinea Pig club" is the unofficial caption of U. S. army subsistence research laboratory at the Chicago qu termaster depot. Here samples of the foods manufactured various firms are submitted for analyzation, tested for vitam content and other nutritional values. It is here that the contai ers are subjected to tests simulating tropical and arctic con tions. Here also are evolved the emergency rations designed aviators, paratroopers and commandos.

The Guinea Pig club is comprehensive in its membersh Generals, lieutenants, famed scientists, stenographers, civilia and enlisted men all partake of food prepared under vario formulas. It is they who decide whether the rations are palatab digestible and nutritious. Every noon the club meets for this pu pose, and its members risk their digestions in the name of patri ism, so that the soldier may eat the proper food. And we all kn how very important it is that the soldier gets the proper food sustain him in his grueling routine from day to day. It has oft been said that food will win the war. Certainly there is no den ing the importance of the part it plays.

The following series of pictures gives you an opportunity take a peek at America's most unique club.

Fresh-From-the-Vine Grapes Make Clear, Bright Jelly!
(See Recipes Below.)

Meals—With Zest

Does meal after meal slip by unnoticed, eaten only because it does away with hunger? Do your meals pull their punches so to speak—look good, have proper balance, contrast in texture, etc., but still seem to lack something vital?

A dinner, lunch or breakfast that lacks a sense of completeness is like a ham sandwich without mustard, meat without seasoning, fish without a tart sauce, a pie without a flaky crust. The small things that do big things for menus are the relishes, pickles, jams and jellies, which brings me to today's topic.

Relishes such as pickles, jellies, conserves and preserves can supply that sense of completeness to a meal if you use them with a thought to flavor affinity.

For chicken try strawberry or plum jam. Goose calls for spiced peach jam or apple jelly. Orange and cherry jam or relish are tops with bland duck. Spiced grape jam or gooseberry jams are "musts" with beef just as mint or crabapple jelly are musts with lamb. Pair off that golden brown ham with plum jelly or horseradish mixed with grape jelly. Veal needs currant or blackberry jam.

If you can't get quince jelly, try cranberry jelly with pork. Liver will be extra good with tomato relish.

Think of all the plate lunches and sandwiches you are going to serve the year 'round for lunches, snacks and pack-up boxes. You'll need these:

Bread and Butter Pickles.
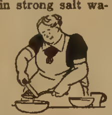
(Makes 8 pints)
12 large cucumbers
4 onions, sliced
4 cups sugar
1 quart vinegar
3 cups water
4 teaspoons celery seed
4 teaspoons mustard seed
2 teaspoons tumeric



Cut cucumbers in ¼ inch slices. Soak with onions in strong salt water for 4 hours. Combine remaining ingredients and bring to a boil. Add strained cucumber and onion slices. Bring to a boil again and boil 5 minutes. Pack into hot, sterilized jars.

Concord grapes are plentiful in the fall and make delicious jelly. You can substitute corn syrup in this one:

Concord Grape Jelly.
(Makes 11 medium glasses)
4 cups juice
7½ cups sugar
½ bottle fruit pectin

You will need about 3 pounds of grapes for four cups of juice. Wash and stem grapes and crush grapes. Add just enough water to keep from scorching, bring to a boil and simmer 5 minutes. Strain juice through cheesecloth. Measure out 4 cups. Measure sugar and mix with juice. Bring to a boil over hottest fire, stirring constantly. Bring to a full, rolling boil and boil hard ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, and pour into hot, sterilized jelly glasses. Paraffin at once.

Your Canning Shelf

*Concord Grape Jelly
*Quince Honey
*Peach-Plum Butter
*Bread and Butter Pickles
*Pickled Peaches
*Chili Sauce
*Recipes Given

Note: 2 cups of light corn syrup may be substituted in this recipe for two cups of sugar. Use 5½ cups of sugar and 2 cups light corn syrup in the recipe for Concord Grape jelly.

Peach and Plum Jam.
(Makes 8 small glasses)
1 pound blue plums
1½ pounds peaches
1 box powdered fruit pectin
4½ cups sugar
Or
2 cups light corn syrup
2½ cups sugar

Peel and pit peaches. Chop finely. Pit plums and chop until fine. Add powdered pectin (or pectin, sugar and corn syrup.) Mix well and bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Bring to a full rolling boil, and boil hard 1 minute. Remove from heat and skim. Pour into hot, sterilized glasses and seal.

Quinces come into their own in the fall and if you're fond of them, plan to put up some:

Quince Honey.
(Makes 6 small glasses)
1½ pounds quinces
2½ cups water
2 tablespoons lemon juice
3 cups sugar

Wash, pare and core quinces. Add water to peelings and cook 30 minutes. Grate quinces very thin, or slice thinly. Weigh pulp and use 1 pound. Add lemon juice and strained liquid from peelings. Cook until tender, add sugar, and cook until two drops fall from spoon at same time, or when a drop jells easily on a saucer. Pour into sterile glasses and seal.

Nothing compares to the sweet, spicy, home-like smell of the making of chili sauce:

Chili Sauce.
(Makes 5 quarts)
1 gallon chopped, peeled tomatoes
1 cup chopped onions
1½ cups chopped green peppers
1 cup vinegar
1 cup sugar
3 tablespoons salt
1½ teaspoons ground allspice
2 tablespoons cinnamon
1½ teaspoons cloves

Tie spices loosely in cheesecloth. Boil with vegetables until mixture is reduced to half its original quantity, stirring all the while to prevent scorching. Add vinegar, salt, sugar and boil rapidly for 5 minutes. Pour into hot sterilized jars and seal immediately.

Pickled Peaches.
(Makes 8 pints)
3 cups honey
3 cups vinegar
2 cups water
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon whole cloves
2 sticks cinnamon
5 quarts peaches

Heat honey, vinegar, water and salt. Scald peaches, remove skins and insert cloves. Place a few in the boiling syrup, add cinnamon and cook until peaches are tender, and acquire a slightly transparent look. Pack in sterilized jars, cover with boiling syrup and seal.

What are your food problems? Cake making? Bread making? Pickles, jams, jellies? Children's lunches? Miss Lynn Chambers will be glad to give you expert advice on your particular problem, if you write her explaining what you want to know, at Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Ill. Please enclose a stamped, addressed envelope for your reply.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: Cantaloupe supplies for this year will be lighter because of curtailed production, but watch your markets for the "peaks" of the season as supplies come in from California, Arizona, Georgia and South Carolina.

Recently a group of prepared cereals have had their whole grain nutritive values restored or are now made from whole grains so watch labels when doing your buying.

The peach crop this year will be like last year—one of the best, according to present indications. Heavy shipments have already started coming in and production will climb up to about 50 million bushels—a new high.

Broilers and fryers will be abundant during these next few months, so don't miss out on good fried chicken or crisply browned and broiled chicken. Young chickens are abundant now because of increased war poultry production.

Canned foods will come in fewer sizes this fall and winter in the effort to cut down on use of tin.

NANA WNU SERVICE

THE somewhat steamy late summer air is still rife with the buzz of many voices trying to name the world's best golfer.

Byron Nelson? Ben Hogan? Sammy Snead? Craig Wood? At least these are the four well in the lead, although in the last year Craig Wood has gone in more upon the instructive side than tournament play.

The phrase "best golfer" covers more than a few details or angles.

Winning golf means something more than shot-making. It must also mean determination and the ability to keep concentrating under fire.

Sam Snead

I haven't seen a finer stylist than Sammy Snead, now in the navy and far from the fairways.

By stylist I mean the ability to get results with less effort, with greater smoothness and ease.

But the lean Virginian or West Virginian, a product of both states, has too many concentrative lapses at critical moments.

Navy Sam at times finds it difficult to keep his mind on the next shot or to keep his grip on the situation through 72 holes. But before going into the navy he was still the one that always carried more than his share of the gallery who liked to watch an easy looking swing that sent the ball so far and so straight.

Nelson and Hogan

Nelson and Hogan, two Texans who came along together from Ft. Worth, take up most of the arguments. This is natural enough. In the first place they are the two big money winners of the year, the two leading stars of the last two years over a stretch of tournament play.

Hogan won the $3,500 open at Los Angeles. Nelson won the Masters' at Augusta in a play off against Hogan. Hogan won the Hale America. Then Nelson followed by winning the $15,000 Tam O' Shanter scramble. The two have had one important meeting so far.

In the Augusta National test Nelson led Hogan by a single stroke in 90 holes of play. This margin of course is thinner than the rubber of a toy balloon.

Hogan's tournament record in the way of average strokes per round and his money record for two years has been slightly better than Nelson's. They are a tough pair to separate, if you take in all the elements that go into winning golf.

Nelson has been the big stake winner. Hogan has yet to win a national title—U. S. Open or PGA.

Styles of Play

Byron Nelson, without any question, is the best all around shotmaker in the game.

He has a greater variety than Hogan can call upon. For example, Hogan must depend upon a controlled hook off the tee. Nelson, if the occasion demands, can use a fade or a hook.

Hogan believes in banking upon control of a more limited assortment, which makes concentration an easier matter.

Ben Hogan

They are both long. Both are fine, long iron players. But neither over any extended period of play could be classed as a fine putter.

At least neither belongs with such green experts as Jerry Travers, Walter Travis, Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen, Freddie McLeod, Tommy McNamara, Horton Smith or Paul Runyan — to mention only a limited list.

But golf has its peculiar ways. It gave Harry Vardon control of every shot in the game—up to the putt. If Vardon had been a first-class putter he would have finished with more U. S. and British Opens than any two men in golf.

Both Nelson and Hogan can putt in spells. But there is nothing consistent on either side. Neither looks like a good putter, to start with.

Nelson can gear himself up higher in a big stake than Hogan can. This may be due to the fact that Hogan is willing to work harder through a longer stretch.

Hogan gives himself no rest. He takes no vacations. Nelson does, giving much less thought to tournaments that he considers not quite so important.

The wonder is that 135-pound Hogan can take such physical and nerve and mental beating—not only week after week and month after month—but also year after year. Hogan practices endlessly, steeling himself for every tournament. His ability to stand up under the strain is little short of miraculous.

If you are looking for the best shot maker—the nod goes to Nelson.

If you are looking to the hardest worker—the same goes to Hogan.

And it might be mentioned that both can play their full share of winning golf

Varies Sports Records

Although gravity and the rotation of the earth differ sufficiently with latitude and altitude to make or break many sports records, no athlete or judge of athletic games has ever been known to take them into consideration, says Collier's. For example, a man can put the shot farther in Bombay than in Helsinki owing to the decrease in gravity, and he can also throw it farther east than west in any city, owing to the earth's rotation.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

Entered in the Postoffice at Clanton, Alabama, as second-class matter under the Act of Congress of March, 1899
MRS MARK L. TUCKER, Owner
R. M. TUCKER, Managing Editor
The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

In a recent issue of one of the Birmingham Dailies we saw a short news item informing the public that due to tire shortage that the County of Jefferson was storing about 16 cars. On an inside page of the same issue was a shorter notice stating that the County Commission had authorized the County Purchasing Agent to buy a popular make sedan for $775. Now we ask you, is or aint somebody screwy?

It is admitted by everyone that the supremely important thing for the country right now is the vigorous prosecution of the war until victory has been attained. There may be division of opinion as to how this end can best be accomplished but there is unanimity about accomplishing it.

In estimating our ability to do this job, however, a great many people are forgetting some very important considerations. Some of them deliberately overlook them while others take note of them simply because they fail to give the matter any meditation. The thing that neither the hurry of events nor the distractions and stresses of active war should drive from memory is what the New Deal did to make the nation able to carry on a stupendous world-wide conflict.

Let every man and woman ponder what condition the country would have been in when the treacherous Japanese attack on our possessions took place if the chaoas bequeathed to the Roosevelt administration by the preceding administration had been allowed to continue even two or three years longer. And it surely would have continued had it not been for the prompt decisive action taken by President Roosevelt in putting into effect the various measures of alleviation and progressive reform which collectively came to be known as the New Deal.

If the banks and insurance companies had been allowed to crash, if millions of unemployed had been permitted to develop into desperate hungry mobs, if the idle youth had received no attention and had inevitably drifted first into vagrancy and then into crime, if bankrupt farmers had not been assisted to reclaim their possessions, does anyone suppose that we would now be in position to defend our land and liberties, let alone carry the war into distant fields?

Without the swift economic and social rehabilitation of the country effected by the New Deal our institutions would have been in such a state of complete disorganization and collapse that even at this date, nearly ten years hence, they would be only just emerging from the wreckage, if indeed they had survived at all.

Instead of such a gloomy situation existing, the nation, plunged against its will into the crisis of war, finds itself strong and vital and at the top of its capabilities. The prompt remedial action taken under the New Deal revived its industries and restored the morale of the people so that our enemies found a country, not enfeebled and discouraged, but healthy and vigorous and filled with a will to conquer.

Reactionary elements professing to actuated by win-the-war zeal have been attempting to sabotage New Deal accomplishments under cover of this patriotic pretension. They ignore the fact that these accomplishments alone made the prosecution of such a war as this possible. But the masses of people who have benefited from them, who were rescued from want and given security for the future need only to cast their thoughts back a few years to realize why the nation is now strong, and to give credit where credit is due.

MORAL ECHOES

By Rev. D. W. Haskew, D. D.

On a cold December day some villain pulled the fire-alarm box in Boston just for fun. There was no fire but the department did not know that and out dashed the fire truck and it went tearing down the street toward the alarm. The abominable fellow went to the next fire box and pulled it. Four alarms were sent in by this rascal, and the effort of the department in connection with his fun, cost the city $300,000, and could have easily cost the life of some fireman or citizen. That youth had an insane craving for excitement and he sought it at the expense of others. His type is seen today in the alarmist, or that will make a stir in the world, and he goes about doing nothing but sounding alarms. He cries out that society is all wrong and he pulls the alarm about youth going stray, but he does nothing about it. He sends other people tearing down the street to find the trouble and while they rush here and there he is pulling some other kind of alarm.

A wicked man of about thirty years of age attended my meeting. The great crowd sang, "I am bound for the promised land" and this man was moved to tears. Some of the would be personal workers gathered about him and wept with him, thinking that the man was under conviction and that he surely was going to become a Christian. At the noon hour I sought a conversation with this man and he informed me frankly that his emotions got the best of him when he heard that old song, but that he had no idea of being a Christian. He confessed that he was a sinner and expected to remain one. From the experience I learned that religion is more than emotion. To be a Christian we have got to do something more than shed tears. A man can say, "As for me and my house, we are going to serve the Lord" and not even shed a tear. Beware of mistaking emotion for conversion.

A nursery man shipped 100 small saplings to a woodsman to be transplanted into his property. About fifty per cent of the saplings were straight, but the other fifty per cent were crooked. On seeing the saplings the old woodsman reasoned thus with himself, "These straight saplings will no doubt grow up to be nice trees without help from me, and I will plant them together so that I can give them my special care and I hope to make them straight." By giving to the crooked trees his special care, they too grew up to be straight trees. My friends, are you giving of your time and attention to help the crooked youth to grow straight With just a little attention you can help to make the crooked inclined to grow straight. Help somebody every day.

While I was preaching one Sunday morning a little bird flew in the church window and on seeing the congregation it became afraid and flew up to the ceiling of the room. There it flew backward and forward until its strength was exhausted.. Panting for life it perched itself on the lamp support. While sitting there its eye located the open door and with a note of joy it flew straight through to life and liberty. The eye of the congregation followed the little bird out at the door and I saw that all were glad. The act of the little bird so fit into my message that I spoke thus to the congregation, "Some of you thought that little bird was very foolish fluttering near the ceiling when there was an open door for its escape, but that little bird was no more foolish than you are when you flutter around the things of this old world and fret your life away without God in your life. God has provided a door for you, just as He had provided a door for that little bird and if you will use your vision and your sense, you too, can fly through that door into God's great life. Christ Jesus is that door and why flutter around in sinful living when you can go out at God's door and find liberty and life! I have wondered if God did not send that little bird into the church that day that I might give them this lesson. God gives to us many wonderful examples of truth.

SAVING MANURE HELPS SUPPLY EXTRA NITROGEN

With a serious nitrogen shortage for 1943 it is most important for farmers to save all manure possible during the winter months. An application of five tons of manure annually per acre has produced an average of 1700 pounds of seed cotton and 40 bushels of corn per acre for about 15 years at the Alabama Experiment Station.

Vaccination Time For Your Dog

I am indeed very sorry to have disappointed you all this year about the vaccination of your dogs. But due to some cause beyond my power I have not been able to get any vaccine until now. But at last I have some of the high standard vaccine I have always used. The kind that when your dog is treated he will be free of Rabies for the season. We have a good rating in Chilton, not a single positive reaction from any animals head that has been sent to the Laboratory. Not a person to take the dreaded treatment in four years, no not even a horse cow or dog.

Now don't you think this outstanding? I am proud of such a record.

I am sorry we still have a few that will shirk the duty of treating the dog. I know the Deputy Inspector who checks on the ones who do not treat their dogs does not get them all. But the shame is on the fellow who will not cooperate, should his dog go mad he will not only have a mad dog. But would be responsible for all his damage for being a law violator. I am trusting we will not have to make a single arrest this year.

The war is on and it is all of our duty to do the most we can in every way so let us join in and get this done in a few days. I doubt now there will be any two stops at any place.

Please bring your dogs on out and we will give you just as fast service as we can.

All our time will be War Time and the fee will be $.50 cash.

Please announce these dates at your public gatherings:

LOCAL NAVY LAD TELLS OF DISASTER

A typical letter from one of the Barstow lads serving with the U S Navy at Pearl Harbor was received by his parents this week. It follows:

Dear Mother and Dad,

I received your letter of Dec. 27th but its contents have made me feel awfully blue. I wrote you before and told you that the gang was all OK when all the time I had a sort of a funny feeling inside of me that they weren't. I didn't want to say anything until I really knew for sure. I don't believe I've ever felt so low down as I do now. It's all I can do to keep from bawling like a baby when I look at those pictures and say to myself that it's true and I'll never see them again. I've been right here in the middle of it all since it started. I saw the ship go down, my buddies and my hopes for them with it, but then I've tried to make myself believe that they were all safe and that I would see them again, then I got your letter, the one I was hoping would never arrive, about the kids being gone and now I just can't fool myself any longer. It hurts me to think what has happened. They were all just kids and such swell fellows too. Ever since this has happened I've been laying awake nights wondering how the gang was and now I know, but I still won't rest easy until we've wiped every last Jap off the earth. I thank God that I am still safe and well and I pray that He will continue to watch over myself and all my buddies from home. I just can't find words to express my sympathy to all of those fellows loved ones.

Where did you get the fellow's home addresses? Would you please send them to me as I don't have them and I think that I should write their folks, don't you.

I haven't seen Berry's friends for some time but will get their address for you. Yes mother, I knew Harold Carmack. I ran around with him quite a bit. He was a swell kid. I guess Xmas wasn't a very merry one last year for a lot of people. Glad to hear you invited a soldier out with you Xmas. It no doubt made him much happier and was deeply appreciated I know. As yet, I have received only the candy you sent, which was very good and I thank you from the bottom of my heart. Outside of that I didn't even know Christmas was here. I received a few cards with a dollar in each from the gang. I don't get around here much, Mother, so I don't get a chance to see any one. Haven't seen Ted Brooks for some time. Give Jr. Heaps my congratulations. I wrote Johnnie's cousin to see if she had heard anything from him. I didn't know Shaw had even come back to the ship. I hope he hadn't I wish you would write me some of the things you want to ask and tell me Mom. I'm still here, but we will all be transferred to ships soon I suppose. I'm glad the Brimmer boys are safe.

Its really hard to believe that they are all gone. It seems so unreal. Well, I guess I had better stop now. Be good and write soon. Don't worry over me. Tell my big little sister and dad to write. Just remember I'm coming home when its all over. Write soon and God bless you all.

SERVICE MEN CAN VOTE WITHOUT POLL TAX

The Senate Tuesday approved, 47 to 5, legislation extending absentee voting privileges to members of the armed forces after writing in a highly controversial amendment exempting such voters from paying poll taxes in eight Southern States.

The measure goes back to the House for concurrence in the poll tax and other amendments voted by the Senate.

Most Southern senators fought bitterly but in vain against the poll tax proposal, which was offered by Senator Wayland C. Brooks (R), Illinois. The Senate's 33-20 approval, they argued, "means death" for the entire bill which leaders have hoped to push through before the November elections.

Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, who favors abolition of the poll tax restrictions, feared the action would "jeopardize" the bill's chances in the house until late September.

ONE CASE OF TB REPORTED IN JULY

SARDIS

No folks Sardis isn't quite dead. We are still having B. Y. P. U. at this place. Our crowds aren't so large, but we are having a good B.Y.P.U. and we would like very much to invite all the people both old and young in reach of Sardis to come out and help us carry the good work on.

There are so many that always find somewhere else to go on Sunday night besides church. Surely they haven't thought of what God means to their Soul. If we ever needed the spirit of God in our hearts now is the time. So people stop and think and come on out and help us carry on this work of the Lord.

We only have a few young people who are regular attenders. I know lots of young people who could come and we need you very much. We give them a special invitation. Our B.Y.P.U. begins at 8:30 o'clock. So all that will, come out and help us. Everyone is always welcome at Sardis.

Miss Annie Maye Deason of Selma visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tommie Deason, Sunday and Sunday night. We were glad to have her with us at church Sunday night and we invite her back.

Mrs. Leois Deason visited her sister Mrs. Henry Klinner of Selma last week.

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Ratliff visited Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Short Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Audra Traywick and daughters Eloise and Almelia returned home Saturday from Birmingham, while there her father Mr. L. H. Ratliff died and was buried at Sandusky. We extend to them our heart felt symvathv.

Mr. Bill Traywick is leaving for the army Tuesday of this week. I am sure he will be missed lots in this community.

Miss Patsy Short is spending the summer with her grandparents Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Short.

1942 PEANUT MARKETING DIFFERS FROM LAST YEAR

Geared to the increasing wartime needs, marketing of this year's peanut crop will, according to A. W. Jones, State AAA Administrator, differ from last year in the following respects:

(1) Last year the farm marketing quota was based on actual production of the alloted acres; this yer it is based on either the actual or normal production of the alloted acres, which ever is larger.

(2) Previously, only peanuts picked mechanically were subject to marketing quotas; this year those picked by hand also are subject to quotas.

(3) In 1941 three types of marketing cards were used by producers in marketing peanuts; this year only one will be used, showing the amount of peanuts marketed as well as the amount of the peanut marketing quota The simplified marketing card will be issued regardless of whether the farm has an acreage allotment since a marketing card must be presented to the buyer when penuts are marketed

The edible, or quota, price will be supported at 85 per cent of parity, or about $124 per ton, while the oil, or excess, price will range from $70 to $82 per ton, depending on type and grade.

HOT WEATHER AIDS FOR ELECTRICAL APPLIANCES

DUST ROBS you of light. Keep dust wiped off lamp bulbs, reflectors and shades. This helps you get more light for your money. Dust robs your electric refrigerator of some of its efficiency. Keep it brushed off the radiator. Use a soft cloth or brush on the radiators of refrigerators with sealed-in units. An old tooth brush is fine for cleaning radiators of refrigerators with open-type units. Be sure to pull the plug before you start dusting so the machine won't start while you have your hand close to it. Removing dust each time you defrost is a good practice.

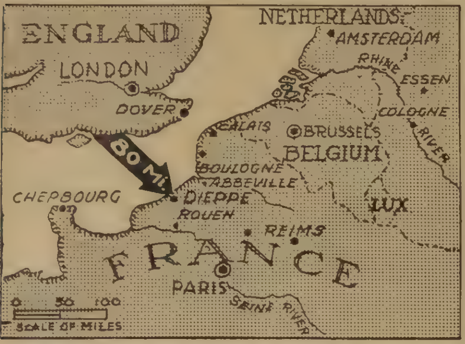
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Allies Demonstrate Growing Strength In 'Dress Rehearsal' Raid on Dieppe; Solomon Victory Forecast of Further Pacific Offensives by United States

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.



The English channel area which was the scene of the most daring and extensive daylight raid by Allied forces on the French coast thus far. British and Canadian Commandos, supported by American Rangers, took part in the nine-hour foray which ravaged the Nazi defenses at Dieppe, destroyed artillery batteries, ammunition dumps and radio stations and left Dieppe in flames.

COMMANDOS:
In Dress Rehearsal

Adolf Hitler learned that no matter how deep into Russia his eastern armies might penetrate, his western flank was open to attack that might be costly.

That was evident when British and Canadian Commandos supported by American Rangers swept across the English channel and back again in a nine-hour daylight raid that was a dress rehearsal for the forthcoming Allied invasion of Europe.

The Nazi-fortified coastal defenses at Dieppe, midway between Calais and Le Havre were the target. Although German sources estimated the force at 15,000 men, its number remained an official Allied secret. The raiders carried tanks and artillery with them.

While losses on both sides were considerable, the raiders were reported to have destroyed a six-gun shore artillery battery, an ammunition dump, a vast anti-aircraft battery and a radio location station. Moreover, it was reported that the city of Dieppe had been left in flames.

A strategic feature of the assault was the vast aerial umbrella in the form of 1,000 Allied fighter planes shielding the raiders. This was reported as the greatest aircraft canopy yet sent aloft. While it protected the operations of Commandos below, it succeeded in downing or damaging 273 enemy planes.

The attack demonstrated that landings in force could be successfully made against the strongest Nazi-fortified points on the French coast. And as a reminder of the growing air strength of the Allies, American and British planes swept over France the day after the raid, striking out in the greatest force ever seen over western Europe. The air raiders, 500 strong, included fighter-escorted American Flying Fortresses and other bombers.

RUSSIA:
Gloom Persists

Only in the northernmost area of the Russian fighting front—at Voronezh and Bryansk—were the Soviet forces able to report any success. At these points several towns had been taken and thousands of Germans had been killed.

But elsewhere the picture remained gloomy. Stalingrad, key industrial city on the Volga, was menaced by a Nazi pincer. Further to the south, Maikop, fertile center of the Kuban valley wheatfields and source of some of Russia's oil, had been taken and Russian communiques admitted the Germans were moving trainloads of foodstuffs out of this area.

The loss of Maikop opened the way for the capitulation of the strategic city of Krasnador, a railroad and river in the northwest Caucasus, and gateway to the Reds' naval base of Novorossick, less than 60 miles distant.

Although Prime Minister Churchill's visit to Moscow had roused hopes that strategic moves from western Europe or from the Middle East by the Allies might take some of the mortal pressure off Russia, the situation remained critical. The successful Commando raid on the French coast was at least a token in that direction.

SOLOMON ISLANDS:
Important Victory

At last it could be told, for the news revealed in a laconic navy communique was that the offensive in the Solomon islands had been completely successful. The enemy-held islands in the southeast Solomon chain were now firmly in the hands of United States marines. Only remnants of once strong Japanese forces remained on the islands and these were being mopped up.

The navy's communique announcing the victory said also that an enemy cruiser or destroyer was bombed and set afire by American planes in the area.

"United States marines are engaged in mopping up remnants of the Japanese forces on the islands which were recently captured in the Solomon archipelago," the communique said.

"Casual bombardments of our shore positions by enemy aircraft, destroyers and submarines have inflicted only minor damage. An enemy destroyer or cruiser was bombed and set afire by our aircraft."

The main offensive had been launched on the strategically important Tulagi harbor area on Florida island, 930 miles from Australia. The enveloping attack included landings on smaller islands nearby.

Viewed in its strategic perspective, the Solomons offensive meant that Japan's thrusts toward New Caledonia would be forestalled, and that the pressure on southern New Guinea and Australia would be lifted.

MARRIED MEN:
Face Early Draft

Married men under the age of 45 with dependents faced the prospect of being called in the draft "in the not far distant future." This prediction was made by a spokesman for Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey's national selective service board.

Speaking before the 52nd annual reunion of the Legion of Valor in Boston, Ted Luther, Hershey's aide, said "the nation's reservoir of 1-A men was practically exhausted" and that it would be necessary to obtain men from 1-B and 3-A classes.

"The selective service board is most anxious to avoid breaking up homes and families," he said, "but because of the few men in 1-B classification and the smaller number that can be obtained from among those reaching 20 years of age each month, it will be necessary to take those with dependents.

BRAZIL:
Irked at Axis

Submarines which for weeks had persistently attacked Brazil's coastwise shipping roused that nation to fighting pitch when they sank five merchantmen within a few days' span, with a loss of more than 600.

Thus a tacit state of war existed between Brazil and the Axis, without benefit of a formal declaration.

"Brazilians know how to fight decisively and with or without arms will know how to die for Brazil," Air Minister Joaquim Salgado declared, as the nation's warships and planes combed the sea for submarines and raiders.

RATIONING:
Meat and Oil First

Two rationing programs loomed on the near horizon for American citizens with others in the background. These two were fuel oil in the East and meats generally throughout the nation.

The food branch of the War Production board had drafted a preliminary order embodying recommendations of Agriculture Secretary Wickard's food requirements committee. These included allocation of meat supplies to different sections of the country, adjustment of price ceilings to stimulate the flow of meats into shortage areas; allocation among packers of government purchases of meat for the armed forces—and finally, rationing.

Rationing of fuel oil for Eastern heating purposes appeared near as industrial establishments and homes using oil for heating were warned they would have to get along on less than normal supplies.

MIDDLE EAST:
Command Is Changed

As Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck had joined a growing list of ousted commanders of the precarious Middle East front, the infusion of new brains in the person of hard-hitting Gen. Sir Harold R. L. G. Alexander, focused attention on the importance of that sector. The visit of Prime Minister Churchill to Alexandria on his way to Moscow, too, had shown how vital the Egyptian sector loomed in Allied strategy.

Observers pointed out that because of its strategic possibilities, North Africa might become the United Nations' second front.

Biggest task confronting the United Nations before snow flies was halting Hitler's gigantic pincer drive against the Middle East by way of the Russian Caucasus from the north and via Marshal Rommel's Egyptian Nazi armies from the southwest.

WAR PRODUCTION:
Nelson Gets Tough

Criticism of the War Production board's management of the war program had been mounting in recent weeks.

Thus when Donald M. Nelson, WPB chief, returned to his desk after a much-needed rest there was considerable speculation about the next move.

The usually quiet production chief made himself forcefully clear. Challenging his critics to a showdown, he indicated a new spirit of pugnacity by asserting: "From now on anyone who crosses my path is going to have his head taken off."

DONALD M. NELSON
". . . job will be done."

He underscored this declaration by immediately dismissing a $5,600 WPB employee. He declared he was "going to get tough enough to get this job done and the job will be done."

DIMOUT:
For West Coast

Spurred by the ever-present danger of enemy air attack, the West coast dimmed out officially for the duration of the war.

Until peace comes night baseball will be only a memory. Automobiles will be driven with parking lights. Theater and store entrances will be dark. Movie companies in Hollywood will no longer use glaring lights for outdoor shots.

Residents up and down the Pacific coast will blackout their windows.

Dimout technique had been practiced for days before regulations became official.

LABOR PEACE:
Green Urges Unity

Another olive branch was waved in the cause of labor peace when William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, called for an end to "the economic tug-of-war whereby each group seeks to get the best bargain it can from the other."

The economic fight "must be abandoned for the duration," he told the 50th annual convention of the Wisconsin State Federation of Labor.

Green termed the CIO-AFL split a "dangerous and wasteful civil war." Earlier he had disclosed that representatives of the two organizations would confer late in September on the proposed re-union of labor.

"I trust those participating in these conferences," he said, "are conscious of the fact that private interests are secondary to the national necessity."

LONDON: One of the largest troopship convoys to cross the Atlantic arrived in Britain recently after a fast, peaceful voyage escorted by American and British warships, it was announced here. Nurses from the convoy were the first to go ashore, followed by troops who proceeded to camps in Britain where thousands of their countrymen are completing training.

NEW DELHI, INDIA: Devadas Gandhi, son of the Hindu leader and managing editor of the Hindustan Times, was arrested here under the defense of India rules. His father, Mohandas K. Gandhi, was taken into custody by the British several weeks earlier, after the All-Indian Congress party had made him generalissimo of a civil disobedience drive for Indian independence.

Walter Winchell

During Mr. Winchell's absence, on vacation, his column will be conducted by guest columnists.

By LIONEL BARRYMORE
(Who needs no introduction.)

Every actor knows what the critics think of him. These industrious gentlemen who distribute plaudits or brickbats, according to their views of plays and performances, have the benefits of their newspaper circulation to broadcast their views.

Now, having been offered the space of my friend Walter Winchell, with whom I often agree and just as often do not, I have the opportunity not often vouchsafed the actor to talk about the fellows who talk about him, in print.

Of the great stage critics there were some who honestly wrote what they believed, in spite of hell, high water and the newspaper's business office. No actor ever resented being criticized by one of these men. In fact, we respected their knowledge and views, and often benefited by constructive criticism. The same applied to playwrights, when these critics analyzed a play.

FIRED ACTOR TURNS CRITIC AND ROASTS SHOW

Sometimes critics are evolved in strange ways. Years ago my brother John and I were in a traveling repertory company. We had a friend, Fred Butler, a newspaper man, whom we persuaded to come along and try being an actor. This wasn't in any spirit of discovery. We were great cronies and liked to be together. Also Butler had a gold tooth which could always be pawned when we were broke.

The company got as far as Minneapolis when the director decided that Butler was no actor, and, much to the dismay of John and myself, "fired" him. Butler went out and landed a job on a newspaper. Then he talked the editor into letting him review our shows. Gleefully, he "roasted" them, and John and I used to laugh over his "roasts" at dinner each night. But they drove the manager wild.

I remember one gem in which he deplored that a good play "could be utterly ruined by an insignificant young actor named Lionel Barrymore."

George Bernard Shaw was a great critic, in the days when he reviewed plays for London publications. True, he sometimes wrote terrible things about them. But any criticism of his was tempered with justice. Mark Twain once tried his hand at dramatic criticism on the old Alta California in San Francisco, but never became really interested in it.

The motion picture brought about a new technique in criticism. The early "tintypes" were ignored. Then, as pictures grew in stature, critics were forced to write about them. At first, many had a feeling of hostility, but this gradually disappeared, and today a fine picture like "Mrs. Miniver" is reviewed by the keenest dramatic minds among the writers of the press.

NEW KIND OF CRITICISM EVOLVED BY MOVIES

Motion pictures have evolved a new form of criticism which the public never sees. Pete Harrison started it, with confidential reports on pictures to exhibitors. He told them what to expect from the picture, from a showman's point of view, to equip them with advance information on the handling and exploitation of a film.

An adverse report meant that too much expenditure for advertising, for instance, was inadvisable. On the other hand, when he praised a picture, this meant that the exhibitor was safe in "going the whole hog" in exploitation.

Today there are numerous trade magazines, which review pictures in the same manner and for the same reason. They tell the exhibitor what to expect. Sometimes audiences fool them, however. Audiences may flock to a picture the trade critics had no faith in. And vice versa.

For, after all, the only reliable critic is the public itself.

A few days ago a group of studio writers and directors were discussing a certain picture. They picked holes in the story. They thought players were miscast. "When the critics get hold of it, you'll see," they chorused.

One veteran director spoke up. "Well, maybe you're right," he remarked. "It looks like nobody's going to like it except audiences."

He was right. The picture grossed a million.

STRETCH CHINTZ OVER CARDBOARD THEN FRAME
OLD WASHSTAND WITH SIDE SHELVES, NEW TOP AND 4" BASE BOARD MAY BE USED IN LIVING ROOM, DINING ROOM OR ENTRANCE HALL

ALMOST any plain washstand or dresser may be given long smart lines by adding open shelves at the ends. Here, a top of plywood with a plain moulding around the edges extends across the top of the stand and shelves. By adding a plain baseboard and a coat of paint the piece is finished with a modern air. The paint should match the woodwork and if old hardware is removed to make way for simple new drawer pulls the screw holes should be filled with plastic wood and sandpapered before painting.

The diagram at the upper right shows how to make the wall decoration from a remnant of flowered chintz. If you use an old frame, the chintz picture may be given the appearance of an oil painting by applying several coats of varnish, allowing plenty of time for each coat to dry thoroughly.

Twins arrived during the night. The next morning father said to little Joe, "You needn't go to school today. You can tell the teacher tomorrow that you have two baby sisters."

"No, I know what I'll do, Dad," Joe said. "I'll tell teacher I've got one baby sister, and then next week I can stay at home again and tell him I've got another."

Commandos Home From 'Greatest Raid'

This soundphoto shows a group of British Commando forces at their home port to which they returned with prisoners and souvenirs after the biggest Commando raid of the war on the French invasion port of Dieppe. Volunteers from an American "Ranger Battalion" participated in the action, the first time since the last war that U. S. soldiers went into action on French soil. The raid, which was regarded by many as the testing of an offensive on a larger scale, was something which Hitler never dared to try. The great raid was backed up by swarms of planes and numerous naval vessels. Raiders even landed tanks for the battle. About 275 German planes probably were destroyed or damaged in the raid, which was described as a "successful demonstration of co-ordination of all three services"—army, navy and air. Two Nazi shore batteries and a radio location station were destroyed, and heavy casualties were inflicted on the enemy.

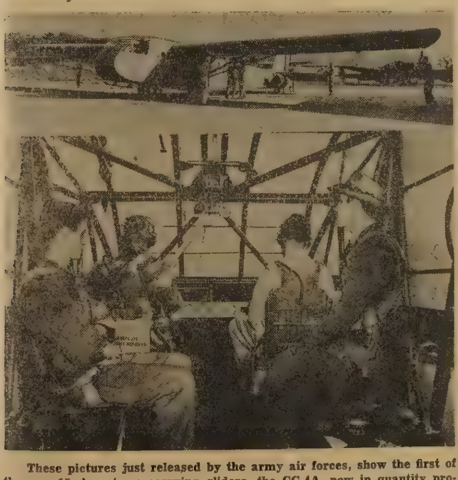
Army's New 15-Place Commando Glider



These pictures just released by the army air forces, show the first of the new 15-place troop-carrying gliders, the CG-4A, now in quantity production. The glider can carry 15 fully equipped men, including pilot and co-pilot. It has a wing span of 83 feet, 8 inches, and a length of 48 feet, 3 inches. At the top we get a good idea of the glider's size by comparing it with the size of the men. Below is an interior view showing pilot and co-pilot at the controls.

NOW that Vera Zorina has been removed from the role of "Maria" in "For Whom the Bell Tolls," and Ingrid Bergman has been assigned to it, a lot of people are much happier. The role seems made for Miss Bergman. The change wasn't made without a struggle; extra tests were made after the first few days' work, but finally out came the dancer.

Paramount announces that this did not in any way impair the star's career, and put Somerset Maugham's "The Hour Before Dawn" into preparation for her.

Metro's talking about opening "Seven Sisters" simultaneously in America's seven most romantic cities; if you think yours is one of them, they ask you to send in statistics! Of course, Savannah, Charleston and New Orleans ought to be on the list. The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

WOMEN INFLUENCE HISTORY

All through history, from Helen of Troy to the Duchess of Windsor, women have influenced the tides of fate. And if it had not been for a woman in the life of Gen. Douglas MacArthur he probably would not have been in a position to perform his heroic defense of the Philippines and command Australia today

Just after the last war, the belle of Washington society was vivacious Louise Brooks, step-daughter of the millionaire Edward T. Stotesbury, a partner of J. P. Morgan. She was the toast of Washington. General Pershing, just returned from France, was one of her most devoted attendants. Admiral Beatty, hero of the battle of Jutland, was another.

Once, after a dinner at Mrs. Marshall Field's both Pershing and Beatty escorted Louise to her car, nearly had an altercation over who was to take her home.

But General MacArthur, then superintendent of West Point, stepped in and married the lady. Shortly thereafter, General Pershing, not at all happy over MacArthur's victory, transferred him to the Philippines.

MacArthur and his wife were stationed in the Philippines for several years. And although the marriage later ended in divorce, it was MacArthur's tour of duty in Manila which acquainted him with Filipino leaders and later brought about his return as field marshal of the Philippine army.

BORED BY WASHINGTON

As a reward for selling $25,000 worth of war savings bonds and stamps, Delbert Hudson, Reno, Nev., newsboy, recently was given a free trip to the nation's capital by the Kiwanis club

For several days young Delbert led the life of Riley.

He was entertained by Vice President Wallace, U. S. senators and high treasury officials. He lived in an expensive hotel, toured all the showplaces and polished off numerous ice cream sodas.

"Well, Delbert," asked Sen. Pat McCarran of Nevada when it was all over, "what do you like best about Washington?"

"My bed," yawned Delbert, "I'm tired."

SOLOMON ATTACK—A TEST

Inside fact about the attack on the Solomon islands is that it was very carefully planned six weeks in advance, and was different from any other naval action in the Pacific.

U. S. naval raids on the Gilbert and Marshall islands were hit and run affairs. There our navy had no idea of enemy strength, but depended on quick surprise hits and speedy withdrawal.

In the battle of the Coral sea also, we were able to take the Japs by surprise. And in the battle of Midway, we knew the enemy was coming, while the Japs did not know we knew.

But in the Solomon islands battle, our reconnaissance planes had made advance surveys and we knew fairly accurately the size of the enemy—knew also that we were up against a tough job that would exact heavy cost.

There is every reason to believe, too, that the Japs knew about our preparations, because troop transports cannot be loaded and brought within striking distance without enemy scouting planes sighting them. Therefore, this was a real test in more ways than one.

For instance, this was the first time land, air and sea forces all have co-operated in a single striking force.

Upon the final outcome of that co-operation will depend whether the United States follows the advice of many high army-navy strategists and concentrates more on the Pacific than on Europe.

BRITAIN'S FUTURE

A U. S. official, back from London, tells of standing in line for breakfast at the Hotel Waldorf. Just ahead of him he heard an English lady say:

"After this war is over, we'll have to fight a war of independence to save ourselves from becoming the 49th state of the United States."

This semi-good-natured, semi-grousing attitude, according to Americans returned from London, is rather typical of the apprehension which exists as to what will happen to Britain after the war.

There is no hostility in this, but realistic awareness that the war is strengthening United States ties, and weakening British ties, with Australia, Canada and Africa.

Public-Spirited Woman Encounters a Little Boy

Something about the appearance of the begrimed little chap on the street halted the lady, who inquired, "Little boy, haven't you any home?"

"Oh, yes'm, I've got a home."

"I'm afraid you don't know what affection really is. Are your parents bringing you up to be a good and helpful citizen?"

"Yes'm."

"Will you tell your mother to come and hear me talk on 'When a Mother's Duty to Her Child Begins' at two o'clock next Monday afternoon at Lyceum hall?"

"What's the matter with you, Ma," shouted the little fellow, "I'm your little boy."

FARM WOMEN ADVISED ON SAVING WASTE FATS

Alabama agricultural leaders are advising farm women of 4 things to do in saving and selling fats. They are: (1) Save all fats, (2) Pour into wide-mouthed can, not glass, (3) Keep in refrigerator, or cool dark place until at least one pound is collected, and (4) Take to a meat dealer, or a frozen food locker plant.

Things not to do include: (1) Don't let fats stand so long they become rancid, and (2) Don't take fat to meat dealer on week ends if this can be avoided.

The barn of O. F. McGuire, was destroyed by fire, following a stroke of lightning. One mule was killed, several cows injured and 200 bushels of corn burned.

FSA Aids In Improving Rural Living Conditions

Pointing to army records showing that hundreds of thousands of men are unfit for military service because of physical and educational handicaps, Marvin Durbin, Farm Security Administration Supervisor in Chilton County, said the war has brought new proof of the need of programs for improvement in standards of rural living and outlook.

"In this county, as elsewhere in the South," said Mr. Durbin, "the war has given FSA opportunity to prove the point of its efforts to overcome the effects of low income, poor diets and neglect of schooling.

"In seven years of service to low-income farm families, the Farm Security Administration has emphasized better diets in every farm and home plan. Farm and Home Management Supervisors have taught low-income families to raise their food on the farm—plenty of meat, vegetables, fruits, milk, dairy products, poultry, and more recently wheat for flour. This emphasis will be increased."

Under impact of the program, said Mr. Durbin, value of home use production among these families in Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, and Alabama has increased from $129 to $314 each, or 142 percent since they first came on the Farm Security program. The average Farm Security family increased canning of fruits, vegetables, and meats for home use from 72 quarts in Alabama before coming on the program to 279; in Florida, 66 quarts to 185; Georgia, 75 to 236; South Carolina 49 to 211.

In Farm Security's medical care program, created to enable low-income farm families to obtain adequate medical care at an economical yearly rate, 165,803 individuals are being served. In 180 of the counties of the four states for as little as $12 for a farmer and his wife, and one dollar for each child, 32,653 families obtain complete medical care, limited hospitalization and ordinary drugs.

Home Management Supervisors, acting to off-set the wartime shortage of doctors and nurses in rural areas, are organizing home nursing courses among farm housewives, and stressing hygiene, health, and prevention of illness. Both farm and home supervisors cooperate with all public realth programs, keeping borrowers and their families informed about clinics conducted by state health departments, immunization services and other public health work.

In the effort to improve educational standards, supervisors first seek out the reasons for lack of education. In promoting school attendance they have found indifference because of family habit, poor health, lack of clothing, lack of food for lunches, lack of school supplies, lack of funds to pay school fees, and similar reasons.

Another large consideration in maintaining school attendance is the improved tenure arrangements effected under the Farm Security tenure improvement program. In many families the school lunch has played an important part in school attendance. Farm Security supervisors urge mothers to can 30 quarts for each child for participation in the school lunch program.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

Harris Hardy is building up a mighty good feed business out at West End. The only trouble says Harris though, is that he can't get all the feed and stuff that he can sell. However, he's made arrangements now whereby he'll always have on hand what the customer needs. Harris is a [illegible] fellow to do business with and [illegible] glad he's doing well.

Virginia and Morris did it. They got married today at the Methodist parsonage with the Rev. T. C. Casaday tying the knot. We wish for them a long and happy married life. We'll bet Morris learns more about war now in a month than he has all the long months with Uncle Sam. Oh, boy.

Well, things didn't seem the same in the old town yesteday afternoon with everything open and doing business as usual again. And by-the-way Postmaster Lowe asks that we announce that the postoffice will be open every Wednesday afternoon in the future but will be closed every Saturday afternoon from 1:00 o'clock on. Everybody had a big vacation it seems and are ready to get down to the everyday [illegible] through the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Cox had all of their children and grandchildren as their guests the past week-end. Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Robinson and 2 sons of Murry, Ky., Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Cox and children of Selma, Mr. and Mrs. Crit Jones and children of Lay Dam, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cox and baby, of Daytona Beach, Fla., Mrs. Frank Sanderson and baby of Cleveland, Ohio, Mrs. B. B. Larrimore and baby of Decatur, Ala., and Mr. and Mrs. Howard McKenzie, of Mobile Alabama.

Things along the Main Stem: Fred Puckelew and Earl Gore walking; the long and short of it . . . . a fellow in front of Jim Dandy Feed Store catching and killing mice with his naked hands eek. . . . Donald Blackketter just returned from a Florida fishing (?) trip . . . W. C. Nuss suggest that we businessmen short of help take days about helping one another. Not bad . . . . do you realize how scarce the male population is getting in Clanton. Those gone will need guns and ammunition. BUY WAR BONDS today . . . watch for Chilton County News Victory Edition. . . . Ralph B[illegible], sans cigar, what'ta you know? . . . . hope we have the energy of Judge L. H. Reynolds at the same age . . . . Dr. W. L. Parrish 'dog shootin' with a needle at Geo. McCains Barn Monday. Of all the ki-yi-ing you ever heard . . . . Mary Robinson Tucker aint at the Alabama Power Company office anymore. . . .

A nice letter comes to our desk this week from Lt. and Mrs. Joe E. Edgar of Weatherford, Texas. They state that they like the Army fine and are getting along alright. Good news [illegible] us was that they are missing the paper and request that it be sent to their new address regularly

Here's your chance to stay in good with the Ladies and help your country too. Each Saturday a number of attractive ladies sell Bonds and Stamps on the most popular corners in town and all you have to do is walk up and buy your share, they'll appreciate it as well as your Uncle Sam. Mrs. Bess Hayes is in charge of these street booth's and they are doing a wonderful job.

H. F. Chandler who used to work at Nuss Tin Shop has been reported missing in action, and O. T. Scott another tinner who was employed there left Tuesday of this week for his duties in the Air Corps. Destination unknown.

Pilots Picnic At Dr. Nix Fish Pond

Dr. Nix's Fish Pond, near Maplesville, was an ideal spot for the picnic enjoyed by the Clanton Pilot Club on Tuesday evening, August 25.

The Club met at the home of Minnie Wade and divided into groups for the ride to Maplesville. Each of the 15 members present carried her share of the delicious picnic lunch, which was planned by Ada Bennett and Maud Nuss. Swimming was enjoyed by some of the Pilots and all joined in games conducted by Flora Harris.

Hughes Services Held At Poplar Springs Sunday

Special services honoring the life and work of Rev. J. D. Hughes during his long career as a minister were held at Poplar Springs Church last Sunday A total of seventeen ministers were present, most of whom were baptized by Rev. Hughes in years past.

According to announcement the opening song, "Amazing Grace," was sung by Uncle Riley Robinson, 91 years old, followed with devotion by Rev. M. Lockhart. The welcome address was made by Mrs. Anna McDowell; response by Rev. G. G. Williams. After a song a talk was made by Rev. J. D. Hughes, other ministers followed—Rev. J. L. Hand, F. O. Robinson of Birmingham, Jadie Thomas, Joe Raines, Riley Robinson, J. W. Jones.

An offering was taken for Brother Hughes in the amount of $32.50. Then came the noon hour, when everyone enjoyed a bountiful dinner on the ground. The crowd was well fed and there was plenty left.

The opening song after noon was led by Rev. M. Lockhart with Mrs. Lawton McDowell at the piano. A talk was made by the charman, Bro. W. O. Rich, and it was voted to make the meeting an annual affair. Devotional was conducted by Rev. Floyd Smith, followed with talks by Revs. J. E. Moore, Leonard Hand, Geo. Bonnett, W. W. Robinson, Phillip Bonnett, K. U. Hull of Wetumpka, Lee Bishop of Pensacola, Fla.

A few minutes intermission was given, and pictures were taken of the preachers as they stood surrounding the honoree of the occasion, Rev. Hughes. The meeting was called back again with a song directed by T. E. Wyatt, after which Rev. W. N. Nobles of Sylacauga was introduced by the chairman. After another song, talks were made by Revs. T. W. Billingsley and S. P. Gray. The services then assumed the general tenor of an experience meeting, and talks were made by several members of the Poplar Springs church as well as by W. J. Billingsley, Riley Robinson, J. D. Hughes, S. J. M. Webb and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Giles. While two or three songs were sung, the parting hand was given the ministers and Rev. Hughes.

G. C. Walker Writes The Voters A Letter

September 1, 1942

To The People of Chilton County:

As you know, I am a candidate to represent you in the next Legislature of Alabama, and I feel that it is due you that I make known my position on two issues that are sure to be up for consideration when the Legislature meets, namely; the Prohibition issue and the Old Age Assistance issue.

I am unalterably and unreservedly in favor of a referendum on the prohibition issue in which the State as a whole will be dry if a majority of the votes of the whole state are for the non-sale of intoxicating beverages.

I shall exert to the utmost my efforts and influence to have the Legislature enact a bill carrying adequate appropriation to match the $15.00 a month now available from the Federal Government so that all persons over the age of 65 years may draw a pension of $30.00 per month. I believe with all my heart that this is one of the most important and progressive steps that can and should be taken by the next session of the Legislature.

I trust this makes perfectly clear my attitude toward these two important issues.

May I also say that in all issues or matters that may be before the Legislature, I will work and vote for what I believe to be the wishes of a majority of the people of Chilton County.

Yours very truly,
G. C. Walker

L. H. REYNOLDS THANKS HELPERS IN BOND DRIVE

Editor, Chilton County News
Clanton, Alabama
Dear Editor:

I am happy to say to the patriotic people of this county that we have reached our quota for this month. I have been in many campaigns before in this county but I have never been in one where I was more interested in the results or worked harder than I have in this one. I appreciate the cooperation of all our committees and especially for everybody who bought a Bond during the month of August. I wish I had the opportunity this morning of seeing all our boys who are now in the army and telling them personally of the great work and how the people of this county have responded by buying Bonds to help them win the war.

I wish every person in Chilton County could realize that the termination of this war will affect every man, woman, and child in the United States.

I wish I could express my idea of what our boys are going through with and what depends upon their actions in the future for every one of us. Some of our people say that we will never be bombed. Do you know that the only thing keeping us from being bombed at this time is our brave, young men who are now in the Pacific, many of them have already lost their lives for the lack of bombs and bullets to fight with. If this country is saved from the ravages of war, it will be saved by the brave, young men whom we are expecting to do our fighting. We must not let them down. Let's begin to make arrangements to buy our Bonds for September; Let's make this issue the first in thought and in action and let's all work as one people for this great cause and resolve that we will do our part as long as we have one single boy on the fring lines for our Liberty and our Freedom.

Respectfully,
L. H. Reynolds
Executive Chairman

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our appreciation to the many friends, relatives, doctors, the musicians, flower girls, the Rev. Titus Alridge and especially Rev. G. G. Williams, for their expressions of sympathy and kindness, shown during our recent bereavement in the loss of our beloved wife, mother, grandmother, and great-grandmother, Mrs. Fannie B. Wooley Williams, August 27, 1942.

Robert J. Williams and family.

HOW AND WHEN TO DIG PEANUTS

By: P. H. Smith
County Agent

Weare offering below suggestions on digging and stacking peanuts:

1. When to dig: Dig when foliage begins to show a general yellowish maturity color, the nuts are well formed and the inside of the hulls begin to color and show dark veins. If harvested too early kernels will shrink, curing will be difficult and yield, quality, and grade of nuts will be greatly reduced. If harvested too late kernels of Spanish may be lost because of sprouting and nuts of both Spanish and Runner will be pulled off and left in the soil.

2. How to dig: Peanuts grown on commercial scale are harvested by loosening them in the soil with a plow. Do not try to harvest Spanish by pulling up plants as is sometimes done where a few rows are grown for home use. A simple method used to plow up peanuts is to run under them with two-horse plow from which the wing has been removed. This may or may not have special peanut point. To avoid excessive dirt on the vines, peanuts should be plowed when plants are dry. Have a crew of hands follow the plow, lift bunches of peanuts out of soil by hand or with forks, shake off the soil and assemble the plants along the row of stack poles. Do not dig any more peanuts in a day than can be stacked that day.

3. Stack Poles: Use stack poles 4 x 6 inches in diameter, 7½ to 8 feet long (some prefer 9 foot poles) set 18 to 24 inches in the ground. Fifteen to 30 stack poles, per acre, depending on growth of vines, will be required.

Caution About Size of Stacks: Do not use big stacks like hay stacks. Big stacks often cause grades to be lowered. Use small stacks because picking can be done sooner after digging, there is less danger from rain damage, the peanuts will dry out faster after rains, and concealed kernel damaae is prevented.

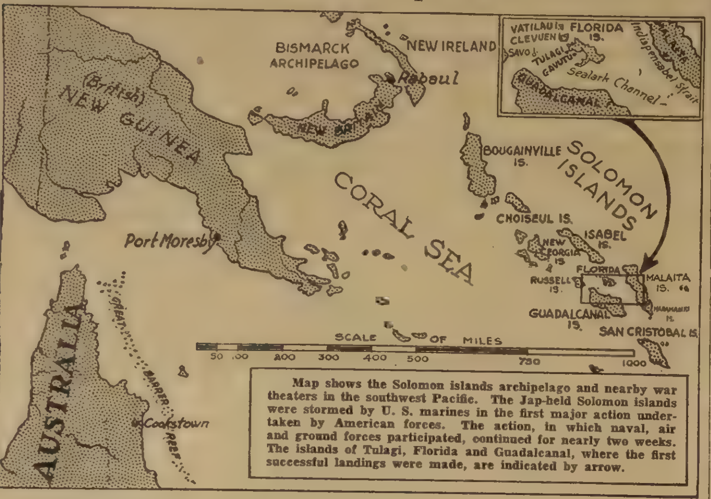
Location of Stack Poles: Set stack poles in field. Do not put them on small area and haul peanuts to them be fore stacking because this practice often gives trouble in case of rainy weather. Some growers put a line of stack poles in center of terrace interval as thick as needed and stack peanuts from entire terrace interval on this row of stack poles. Others put a row of stack poles to every 15 to 30 peanut rows.

4. Windrowing: Curing in the windrow until picked may be satisfactory in the West where rainfall is light but it is a very risky practice in Chilton County because of danger from rain.

5. When to Pick: Let peanuts cure in stack 4 to 6 weeks. Do not pick sound and damaged peanuts together.

6. Hay: Bale or store peanut hay as soon as possible after it leaves the picker. Feed it in racks or wire bottom mangers to allow dirt to sift out. Spanish peanuts usually produce 1 to 1½ tons of hay per ton of nuts and Runners 1½ to 2 tons. But hay yeilds vary widely with seasons.

Solomon Islands—Where Japs Were Driven Out



Map shows the Solomon islands archipelago and nearby war theaters in the southwest Pacific. The Jap-held Solomon islands were stormed by U. S. marines in the first major action undertaken by American forces. The action, in which naval, air and ground forces participated, continued for nearly two weeks. The islands of Tulagi, Florida and Guadalcanal, where the first successful landings were made, are indicated by arrow.

"YOU brought out an important point in connection with Carl Hubbell," writes Old Timer, "that I don't think you stressed enough. This was about Hubbell after 20 years of pitching, 15 years as a big leaguer, still trying to learn something new or something better.

"I always knew that Carl Hubbell was one of the smartest pitchers in baseball. This proves that he is even smarter than I thought he was. For the great majority, especially those who are above the average in skill, think they know most of it. They are no longer interested in learning something new and something better.

Carl Hubbell

"This is a great human weakness. Too many think they know enough when no one knows much. Especially in these days no one knows nearly enough.

"What a fine thing it would be to have many more people adopting Carl Hubbell's method of still trying to learn after so many years at the top."

The Meager Minority

This happens to be 100 per cent true. We'll take the argument back to sport.

Those who happen to lack certain qualifications in the way of skill or knack, get discouraged too easily and give up.

They either lack the determination to keep trying or they fail to understand how much they might learn from others that would carry them out of the rut.

Many of those who happen to be rigged out with speed or skill or the winning knack take it for granted they are approaching the superman class and so need no further instruction or improvement.

There never was a human being who knew it all, or anything even approaching the ultimate.

You'll find that Cobb and Tilden were still experimenting, studying, working on new angles after more than twenty years of championship competition.

We could also name a number of others who stopped learning quickly and showed no particular improvement in later years.

They had nothing to learn from coaches or trainers.

Old timers were jokes. They already had the answers.

Sarazen Speaks

"One of the big thrills I've gotten out of golf," Gene Sarazen says, "is this—I've learned something every year I've played.

"I've found out that things I thought were important 20 years ago are not so important after all. I've found other things I payed little attention to meant a lot.

"Hagen was always a great guy in this respect. He was always trying to learn something that might improve his game. After he had been Open champion, I saw him one day taking a lesson, or at least friendly advice, from Harry Vardon on how to play a certain type of shot. Walter never thought he knew it all, or any big part of it.

Walter Hagen

"I've tried to learn something that would help my play for the last ten or fifteen years. I thought as a kid I knew most of it.

"It was only when I began to find out how little I really knew that I started winning again after a lapse. You get a lot of foolish and useless advice. But here and there you can pick up something that will help a lot."

Walter Camp and Pudge

Years ago Walter Camp told me an interesting experience he had had with Pudge Heffelfinger, a football star who lasted over 30 years.

"Pudge was so good," Camp said, "that I was afraid he would be another know-it-all. In place of that he kept coming to me for more advice on guard play. I showed him three new variations. Later on he came back and told me he had learned four new angles. One of these was the possibility of the running guard. How many people know that Pudge Heffelfinger had worked out and developed the correct method of the running guard around 1889 or 1890?"

All I know is that as late as 1921 or 1922 Heffelfinger, then 53 years old, kept telling Bo McMillin, then 22, to speed up his start and give him a chance to lead that interference. Ask Bo.

"The more you know, the easier any game is," an old-time trainer said recently. "You can save yourself so much and last so much longer. You can often handle superior physical power and even greater natural skill by knowing more than your rival does. But this can only come from trying to learn every thing you can as you go along

Wilting Method for Silage Is Suggested

Experiment, Extreme Care Needed to Make It Work

By C. W. BENDER
(Professor Dairy Husbandry, Rutgers University.)

In view of the high price of molasses and the scarcity of phosphoric acid for preserving silage, the wilting method of ensiling legumes, grasses and cereals — a method requiring practically no preservatives—sounds good.

The wilting method will work, but it also takes experimental control and extreme care to make it work.

Moisture Content Excess.

Farmers experienced at making grass silage know that mold accumulations, caused by air pockets or air leakage in the silo, often occur even when the silo is filled with material having a moisture content of 72 to 78 per cent.

Yet materials with this amount of moisture pack more readily and develop more pressure than grasses with lower moisture content, and the wilting method calls for wilting down the green material to a moisture content of only 65 to 68 per cent. Thus there is a greater danger of mold when the wilting method is used.

Secondly, some type of apparatus is necessary to determine the exact moisture content of the green material.

How long it takes to wilt the material down to the proper moisture content cannot be determined in advance. One thing is certain: There will be many delays in filling the silo, thus increasing the danger of mold and high temperatures, both of which tend to destroy nutrients.

Fill Silo Three-Fourths.

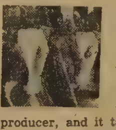
The silo must be filled more than three-fourths full with wilted green material within two days. The material must be evenly distributed and well tramped. Filling should be continued on the third day, using high moisture grasses or legumes to which a preservative has been added so that sufficient pressure is generated to exclude the air from the partially wilted mass. Delays in filling beyond this period may ruin the silage, a fact which has been learned by many farmers.

Furthermore, the wilting of a green crop destroys carotene. The longer the period of wilt the more carotene is lost, an important consideration in producing milk of excellent quality.

Trap That Hornfly

Dairy cows will not produce at maximum when infested with hornflies.

The flies cause loss in milk production because they suck cows' blood, and their annoyance often causes cattle to refuse to graze. Hence, they do not get their fill of grass which is the best milk producer, and it takes a part of the feed which otherwise would go to production of milk to replace the blood.



Some investigators claim that during seasons of abundance hornflies are responsible for losses of one-quarter to one-half of the normal milk production. Moreover, annoyance by the flies during milking might lead to contamination of the milk with consequent lowering of its quality.

Sprays, which many dairymen use, will keep flies off cattle during milking and for an hour or more afterward. But this does not prevent loss in milk production. However, a cattle fly trap used as a gateway to and from water, feed, or other frequented places, has been found effective for the control of hornflies on many dairies, farms and ranches.

Birth of a Bombardier

Would you personally like to bomb Berlin and Tokyo? From towns, cities, farms, factories and colleges thousands of American youths are answering "yes" and swarming into the world's largest bombardier college at Midland, Texas, to learn the technique.

Scientifically selected to operate the secret, deadly U. S. bombsight, bombardier cadets are trained in 12 weeks to be the "most dangerous men in the world."

Where they are going is a military secret, but—a thousand bombardiers destroyed Cologne in a single night! And Uncle Sam's air force is training at least 25,000 bombardiers!

The tyro bombardier becomes familiar with his thrilling job with the bi-motored AT-11 training bomber. He watches mechanics who "keep 'em flying." At the bomb-loading dump, brawny ordnance men carry the kind of bright blue 100-pounders used for practice.

Each cadet drops as many as two hundred bombs during training—the equivalent of forty real raids. A scale model of Tokyo's waterfront industrial section provides a realistic target for bombardment, and really gives the boys something to shoot at.

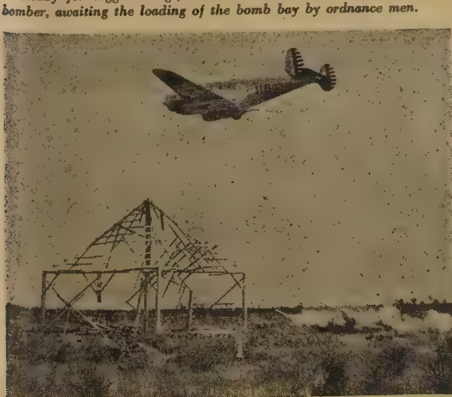
These pictures tell how cadets from all corners of the U. S. become "lords of the bombsight."

Physical fitness is the prime requisite for cadets. Here they use practice bombs for "bombardier build-ups."

Victory Parade

In ground school, a group watches an instructor using a model U. S. bomber and models of Japanese warships to illustrate a point.

Ready for bigger things, a cadet sits in the shark-nose of a B-18 bomber, awaiting the loading of the bomb bay by ordnance men.



Skimming low over a 30-foot target shack, a cadet at Midland army flying school sends missiles skimming into the ground whence they ricochet, rocket-like, into the pyramid-shaped structure.

Turn a Meal Into a Banquet With Blueberry Muffins
(See Recipes Below.)

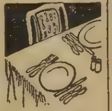
Prepare for Week-Ends

Lazy days with first signs of fall in the air, wilted appetites and the whole family home for the week-end are a heavy drain on the homemaker. If she expects to spend any time with her family, Madame Housewife must scurry around and plan a preparedness campaign which will stock her refrigerator with foods that can be pulled—like the traditional bunny out of the hat—and still keep her reputation as the "best cook around here."

It's a mistaken notion that the main dish has to be an elaborate hot and heavy affair that sends the hostess to the head of her table sweltering after hours of preparation. A much better idea would be to have a cool, tempting Chicken-Ham Mousse such as I've planned for you today.

Wash the vegetables and store them in the cold compartment and they're ready to toss together in a few minutes, crisp, and chewy, coated with a flavorful dressing, in a salad supreme. If the family really has its heart set on "something hot" bring out some bran muffins, all moist and tasty with blueberries. These take but a short time to bake.

Your table should be bright and gay with oranges and yellows, reds, rich browns to add warm notes to the porch supper or lunch—indoors or out. Let your imagination run riot with the dry leaves, bright berries, sprays from the wayside or fall's bountiful fruits.



Remember, you can do more for your table by arranging Concord grapes tastefully with a few golden pears, blush red apples on rich brown leaves or in well polished pewter, copper or brass vessels than rare, expensive flowers that your family does not know how to appreciate. Then, of course, if you have a few yellow or deep red chrysanthemums in your fall garden, let them fall gracefully in and out among their own leaves in a burnished bowl, and you leave nothing to be desired.

Here's the mousse which you can have as a main dish. Make it the night before and it's already to serve just with unmolding:

Chicken-Ham Mousse.
(Serves 6)

3 egg yolks, slightly beaten
¾ teaspoon salt
1½ cups chicken broth
1½ cups ground, cooked chicken
1½ cups ground, cooked ham
¼ cup salad dressing
1 minced scallion
¼ cup whipped cream
1 package lemon-flavored gelatin

Add salt to egg yolks, then broth. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly until mixture coats a spoon.

Lynn Says:

Easier Way to Live: One good way by which to simplify homemaking is to get rid of troublemakers in your household furnishings as fast as you can.

If you have an expensively upholstered sofa or chair which requires special cleaning often, make a slip-cover for it out of one of the practical cottons or other washable fabrics which are so numerous in the stores these days. A quick trip through the household washer now and then will keep it spic-and-span. Whisk it off and let the regular covering show when special guests are coming, or use the slip-covers day in and day out, for they are so attractive in themselves.

When your draperies wear out, or when you decide to do over a room, look at the beautiful wash fabrics which you can buy for your windows. Make them up with washable linings, these preshrunk, too, of course, and save yourself troublesome cleaning from then on. In time, you can "re-plan" many of your furnishings for practical washing machine handling.

This Week's Menu

*Chicken-Ham Mousse
*All-Bran Blueberry Muffins
Butter
*Julienne Salad
*Whipped Cream Sugarless Cake
*Recipes Given.

Pour over gelatin and stir until dissolved. Cool. Fold in remaining ingredients. Place strips of green pepper, sliced olives, sliced hard-cooked eggs on bottom of oiled mold. Pour in mousse. Let chill until firm. Unmold on lettuce and garnish with romaine, endive and tomato wedges.

Dispositions will all be the merrier when you serve these bran-blueberry muffins because the B-vitamins, often called morale builders, in the bran and the magnesium in the blueberries, which is reputed to create kindlier feelings toward your fellow men, really get together and do their best for the system:

All-Bran Blueberry Muffins.
(Makes 12 small muffins)

2 tablespoons shortening
¼ cup sugar
1 egg
1 cup all-bran
¾ cup milk
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
2½ teaspoons baking powder
½ cup fresh blueberries

Cream shortening and sugar until fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Stir in all-bran and milk and let soak until all moisture is taken up. Sift dry ingredients and add blueberries. Add to first mixture and stir just until flour disappears. Fill greased muffin tins until two-thirds full and bake in a moderately hot (400-degree) oven about 30 minutes.

Greens tossed together with mellow french dressing are attention-getters:

Julienne Salad Bowl.
(Serves 6)

1 cup cabbage
1 cup carrots
½ cup green pepper
¼ cup red radishes
Garlic
Curly endive or shredded lettuce

Shred all the vegetables fine. Arrange mounds of them in a bowl, and toss french dressing over them. Rub the bowl in which they are served with garlic.

A main dish that will go well with the Julienne Salad is this Baked Bean dish:

Baked Bean Rarebit.

1 can baked beans
¼ pound American cheese, grated
3 slices bacon, fried crisp
½ green pepper sliced

Mix beans, green pepper and crumbled bacon with grated cheese and pour into a casserole. Bake in a moderate oven 35-40 minutes.

A cake that's a tasty sugar saver is this one:

Whipped Cream Sugarless Cake.

2¼ cups sifted cake flour
2¼ teaspoons double acting baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter or shortening
1 cup light corn syrup
2 eggs, unbeaten
½ cup orange juice
2 teaspoons grated orange rind
1 cup cream, whipped

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift dry ingredients together three times. Cream shortening, add orange rind, and then syrup beating well after each addition. Add ¼ of flour and beat until smooth and well blended. Add eggs one at a time, beating well after each. Add remaining flour in thirds alternately with orange juice, beating after each addition for best results. Bake in two greased 8-inch layer pans in a moderate (375-degree) oven 30 minutes. Cool. Spread whipped cream between and on top of layers.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

Entered in the Postoffice at Clanton, Alabama, as second class matter under the Act of Congress of March, 1897

MRS MARK L. TUCKER, Owner

R. M. TUCKER, Managing Editor

The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

Let's not get the names confused. Ruml is working to make it easier for us to pay our income taxes. Rommel is working to make it harder to lick the Axis.

People are prone at times to take the unusual for granted. Dr. W. L. Parrish, our County Rabies Inspector has a wonderful record for the past four years to his credit. There hasn't been a single case of rabies in Chilton County in this four year period. Man, child, dog, cow or anything. That is unusual and Dr. Parrish is due much credit for the money saved the people of this county and state for his fine record.

BIRMINGHAM TROUBLE-MAKERS

The question of bare-legged females or stocking-legged females appears to be getting the better of Columnist Graves, of The Birmingham Age-Herald, and Columnist Feidelson, of The Birmingham News. They suspect each other of all kinds of complexes, hidden motivations and failing faculties.

Remember, gentlemen, the war must come first.

And anyhow this issue of the uncovered extremities is so full of dynamite that you should not be touching it. You already have caused trouble, for since the beginning of your brazen and public altercation we read that in the Bahama Islands, where the Duke of Windsor is braving the hazards of war, a new edict bans women in shorts or bathing suits. This is just another example of how great oaks from little acorns grow.—Anniston Times.

We knew a woman who wore stockings once.

CHILTON COUNTY AGAIN GOES OVER

Chilton County went over the top again in August when she bought more than $26,000 worth of War Bonds.

Many counties over the state failed to come up to their quota.

The other day we were in conversation with L. H. Reynolds, county chairman of the Chilton County War Bond Committee. Chairman Reynolds is a booster and not much of a knocker. He thinks that if all of the citizenry of Chilton County will get out and do their utmost to reach their September quota, will cut out the knocking and start boosting, will realize that it is going to take all that we have and just a little more to go over the top and win this war, that we will have no trouble reaching our September War Bond quota.

August was a month of disappointment so far as many Committee's in the state were concerned, and the coming months will find all of us having to work much harder to reach our goal. This one thing we must understand. The boys at the fronts aren't falling down on their job. Neither must we.

Lets not leave it up to those appointed in charge, who are already giving so much of their time and money to make our county 100 percent. Lets remember that it is going to take all of us to do this job and so we must lend our aid willingly and unselfishly to these officials who are taking their job so seriously and working so faithfully to make a good showing for us

After all, this isn't a one man or a two man job. It is a job that is going to take one hundred and thirty million people. And that is just on our side of the water. There are twenty-eight other nations working just as hard as we, and many of them suffering a lot more. Lets back our county committee. Lets make September the biggest month yet in our War Bond drive. Lets go out and BUY BONDS TO BOMB BUMS.

LOCAL FEED DEALER KNOWS HOW TO RAISE BABY CHICKS

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Jones at work in their Brooder Room.

1942 PROMISES TO BE BIG YEAR IN THE POULTRY INDUSTRY

The colossal production of America's factories-the gigantic stream of tanks, planes and munitions is only half of the story of a nation at war! Far back from the industrial centers-on every road and lane of the Southern States are production men of a different kind-each a one-man "factory," boosting by leaps and bounds the output of a different kind of war goods-FOOD-for America and her Allies.

Without drama or fanfare these fighting farmers are pushing upward by 25, 50. and 100 per cent the most difficult kind of production. They will keep full the stomachs that Armies and Navies travel on!

S. A. Jones, owner of the local Jones Seed & Feed Company, has stated that since Secretary Wickard's call was issued last April for more of these vital food stuffs, poultrymen have made amazing strides. Figures just released by the Department of Agriculture show that chickens laid 40 billion eggs in 1941. That's 4 per cent over the all-time record set in 1930. He gave credit to better feeding practices, more careful selection of chicks, and better poultry house equipment for much of this achievement.

The Jones Seed & Feed Company has recently added a new Jamesway incubator to help meet increased quotas. Along with this increase in capacity they are operating a longer season this year. Mr. S. A. Jones supervises his own flocks with the aid of State Poultryman from the State Department of Agriculture. Also, a poultry specialist from the Cosby-Hodges Milling Company in Birmingham comes out to offer assistance to poultrymen who are having difficulties. Showing a personal interest in all their customers has been a law which has governed the success of the Jones Seed & Feed Company. Mrs. Jones is an interested and active partner in the supplying of quality chicks to their many customers, she assists with the office and store work.

"Every poultry house in the country," stated Jones, is a Victory Plant. If food will win the war, as they say it will, then eggs and poultry products rank way up there as a potent weapon."

"But there is one threat," he added, "to the continued success of the program in 1942 and beyond. Up until recently, poultry raisers have not felt the full sting of the farm labor situation, nor the inconvenience of not being able to get needed equipment like feeders, waterers, brooders, and other items needed to successfully raise poultry." Now, however, Jones predicts that with farm boys and hired hands leaving farms in droves, and equipment hard to get, the picture appears threatening.

To a man like S. A. Jones, such a condition is a cause of much concern. He is very close to his customers and suppliers of eggs used for hatching at the Jones Hatchery. He has first hand knowledge of their problems, their hopes and fears, their vital part in the Food for Victory program. S. A. Jones has seen the poultry business climb out of the "chicken coop" category into an industry rated today at a billion dollars.

Small wonder, with such a broad outlook, that S. A. Jones and the Jones Seed & Feed Company have achieved measurable success in business and attained high regard in the community of Clanton.

Farmers, Ginners And Oil Crushers Can Help

Cotton farmers, ginners, and oil manufacturers have a big part in saving cotton linters for use in manufacturing explosives.

Cotton linters to be of the most value must be clean. Dirty, trashy cotton with a high moisture content will not yield good linters. Therefore cotton should be picked clean and dry.

Farmers should not insist on having their seed skinned to get a high turnout, advises J. B. Wilson, extension agricultural engineer of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. This never has been good business as these short fibers or buzz-fuzz actually shorten the average staple length.

Ginners also can help by getting more cottonseed to the oil mills. This can be accomplished and accelerated by arranging trade for cotton seed meal early in the season in order that farmer may have cottonseed meal for feeding.

Oil mill operators have a responsibility. They can turn out good cotton linters provided the re-gin does not nick the seed and cause black specks—known as hull pepper—to get into the linters. Properly sharpened regin saws teeth will not nick the seed. Hull pepper is quite a dangerious element in the manufacture of explosives.

Future Oratorical Contest Planned

Every Alabama high school student who competes in the state finals of The Birmingham News-Age-Herald orotorical contest, to be held at Birmingham-Southern College in April, 1943, is guaranteed at least a one-year tuition scholarship to Birmingham-Southern, valued at $200, a cash prize and the trip to Birmingham for self and chaperon, with the exception that contestants who won a one-year scholarship in the 1942 contest are eligible only for the cash prize and trip to Birmingham, unless they win first place at the state finals, the prize for which is a four-year tuition scholarship to Birmingham-Southern, valued at $800.

However, there are only two or three Alabama high school students who won a one-year scholarship in the past contest who are still in high school. Past state champions are not eligible to compete.

The basic subject for the contest is "Education For Democracy." The scholarships will be awarded by Birmingham-Southern College, the cash prizes and trips, by the Birmingham News-Age-Herald.

A large number of junior and senior high schools are already enrolled. According to Artemus Calloway, News-Age-Herald oratorical contest director, high school students who are interested in this contest should consult the principal of their school, or the teacher in charge of the contest for the school.

Biggest Dallis Grass Seed Crop On Record

Stating that this country has the largest crop of Dallis grass seed ever produced, J. C. Lowery, urges that every available pound of these seed be saved.

The seed from along roadsides, ditch banks as well as in pastures can be saved when they have become fully developed and fairly well matured. Plants can be cut with a mowing machine, raked up, and scattered over pasture land where a stand of Dallis grass is desired.

If no mowing machine is available, a hand blade may be used. Another good method of saving these seed, says Lowery, is by stripping the heads by hand. Dallis grass can also be combined successfully.

Farmers Advised To Do More Soil Building

Alabama farmers are reminded this week that they should try to use all allowances set up under the AAA program for soil building practices, "and then do more if possible, to help win the war."

W. B. Crawley, chairman of the State Agricultural Conservation Committee, said that payments, in most cases, should cover actual expenses for carrying out approved conservation practices, within the limit of the soil building allowance.

Many farmers have done double, or more, than what is required under the AAA program. And their farms tell the story in enriched land and higher yields.

MORAL ECHOES

By Rev. D. W. Haskew, D. D.

The coal digger goes down into the bowels of the earth and for days he lives where the sun does not shine. It is said of John Bunyon that he was placed in such a dark dungeon that he never knew the coming and the going of the season. Because the coal digger could not see the sun and Bunyon did not know the changes of the seasons, are we to conclude that there was no sun and change of the seasons? The sun rose every day regardless of the collier's darkness, and the seasons came and went regardless of Bunyon's ignorance. If one shuts himself away from the sun, the sun shines on, and it will be waiting for him when he returns to the open face of the earth. In like manner we may shut ourselves away from God and live in the darkness of the soul, but God's love and mercy are still waiting our return. Because it is dark all around us, is no reason why God had left His place in the Universe. We are in the dark, not God.

A story tells of how an old Indian chief was driven from his throne and [illegible] devoted wife [illegible] to her father's court. In tears the [illegible] slipped away from his queen [illegible] and for years he was lost to her. He thought that she would be much better off with her father, than with a chief without a kingdom. Many years passed and one day an old crippled cook returned to where the [illegible] been left. He secured a place in the kitchen where the food was prepared for the forlorn queen, and then prepared the meals that went to her table. When she tasted the food, she exclaimed "Bring that cook to me, he is my long lost chief." Sure enough, the cook was the one whom she had loved and lost. When the wife had tasted the food she knew who had prepared it. I am often asked, "How can we know God?" We can know Him when we taste of the food that He prepares for the soul. "O taste and see that the Lord is good." God serves the best and only the best

The one presenting the award replied, "Brave comrade, this gift is not too great for England to give." Christ offers to us the gift of His cleansing power through His Spirit and while that may seem too great for us to receive, yet it is not too great for Christ to give. We may be ever so unworthy, but nothing is too great and good for God to give.

History tell us that once upon a time that the senate of Athens was sitting in session in the woods making laws for the citizenship. While they were thus engaged a little sparrow flew from the trees into the midst of the assembly. Becoming confused the little bird flew into the bosom of an old senator who sat nearby. The old lawmaker snatched the frustrated bird from its hiding place and threw it upon the ground. Then he ground out its life under his cruel heel. When the other senators saw what was done they arose in wrath and shouted that no such cruel man as that should be allowed to make laws for Athens. So [illegible] they were shouting that a cruel man like that should be put to death and forthwith the old man was dragged from the assembly and killed. No man is fit to make laws for others when he is lacking in the appreciation for the [illegible]. When we sing, "Jesus lover of my soul, let me to thy bosom fly," we feel sure that we nestle there that His great heart will understand [illegible] will in no wise thrust aside [illegible] come to Him.

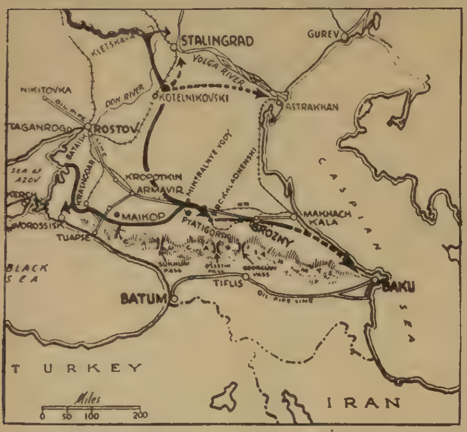
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Savage Russ Counterattack in North Offsets Nazi Pressure in Volga Area; U. S. Upsets Jap Strategy in Pacific; Chinese Register Important Victories

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.



Map shows how Hitler's 1942 conquest of Russia nears the climax as his armies move into position in a pincer movement closing on Stalingrad. A million Nazi soldiers assaulted that vital city on the Volga river, closing in from two directions. By skirting the Caucasian mountains, Hitler's army can push on to the Caspian sea for a junction with the Japanese.

NEW GUINEA INVASION:
Costly to Japs

Despite heavy Allied air action, which cost th eenemy one transport, six landing barges and probably a cruiser, Japanese shock troops made another landing in Milne bay on the island of New Guinea, 240 miles east of Port Moresby and less than 500 miles from the Australian mainland.

However, "Our ground forces anticipated this movement and are in contact with the enemy," a spokesman from General MacArthur's headquarters in Australia said. United Nations medium bombers and fighters heavily bombed and strafed Jap barges which were heading toward shore and Jap troops which already had landed. The aerial attack was carried out despite adverse weather conditions, the communique said.

Spokesmen acknowledged that the Japanese had put into action the airdrome at Buna, 200 miles northwest from Milne Bay on the north coast of New Guinea. They established a beachhead at Buna in July, then pushed south to Kokoda, within 60 miles of Port Moresby.

Solomon Thrust

The violent sea-air battle in the Solomon islands saw the United States win the opening round. Land-based American dive bombers, torpedo planes and fighters were credited with forcing a battered Jap fleet to withdraw from Guadalcanal island in the southeast Solomons, less than a thousand miles from Australia, across the Coral sea.

In the original United States offensive in the Solomons, the American marine corps vanguard obtained beachheads on the island, overcoming enemy resistance and seizing an air field. Planes, bombs, torpedoes, ground crews and gasoline were brought in to repel a major invasion.

While a communique stated that results in the struggle for the strategic islands are "encouraging," it warned that a large scale sea battle still was in progress and that the outcome could not yet be determined. But one official expressed the opinion that "we are winning the second round of the battle of the Solomons."

ACTION IN EGYPT:
Transport Blasted

Striking at Marshal Erwin Rommel's preparations for a new offensive in Egypt, Royal Air force fighters killed or disabled hundreds of enemy troops in a raid on transport columns west of El Alamein.

New Zealand troops saw fast action when they routed an Italian division on the same line, and United States bombers blasted Axis shipping in Suda bay, Crete and the Corinth canal in Greece.

Tension on the Egyptian front has mounted steadily. German tank movements were observed near the Qattara depression and Italian forces were attempting to concentrate their positions.

As the all-out battle of Egypt grew closer British newspapers described this front as equal in importance to Stalingrad. They pointed out that the smashing of Rommel's army would restore the Mediterranean command to the United Nations, whose forces then could start to close in on the enemy. According to the London Daily Mail, "The coming battle in Egypt may in the end reverse the fortunes of war in Russia." Indications are that Rommel will have the hardest fight in his life in the 80-mile stretch between El Alamein to Alexandria.

WAR RISK:
Improving Situation?

Indication that the convoy system for Atlantic shipping was showing improvement was reflected in a 5 per cent reduction of cargo war risk rates charged on certain voyages. Marine underwriters revealed that this was the first important reduction war risk rates in many months.

Trends had been increasingly upward since the submarine activity of the enemy had been intensified off our Atlantic coast.

Most important effect of the reduction would be in the trade between the United States and Brazil and Argentina where the previous rate has been cut from 25 to 20 per cent.

RED OFFENSIVE:
For Stalingrad Relief

Even while clerks and factory hands joined Red troops in the defense of Stalingrad, Russia's Central front armies began a counterattack in the German-held area northwest of Moscow, killing 45,000 enemy troops in the first 15 days of a drive that pushed back a Nazi salient 25 to 30 miles.

As Soviet troops battled for footholds within the streets of Rzhev, the Germans were reported to have thrown fresh reserves into the battle but were compelled to retreat with heavy losses as Russian troops thrust westward. The Russians claimed the capture of 610 communities.

Despite the offensive action, which was intended to relieve pressure on Stalingrad, the situation in that industrial city was conceded to be critical. However, the Russians described it as "no worse."

CHINA:
Counter-Attack

In the provinces of Chekiang and Kiangsi the Chinese were fighting a determined counteroffensive to dislodge the Japs from important bases whence the United Nations might launch air raids on Japan.

This offensive was meeting with considerable success as the Chinese troops pushed toward Chusien, site of the biggest airfield in China and drove hard on Lishui and Sungyang, both vital points. In addition the Chinese forces had recaptured over a hundred mile strip of the Chekiang-Kiangsi railway. At one time the Japs had controlled this railroad in its entirety.

Biggest questions in the minds of military experts was where the Japs were sending their troops now being diverted from this Chinese front. Some sources were inclined to believe that they had gone to the South Pacific for the battle of the Solomons and New Guinea, while unofficial reports told of mass movements of troops toward the Russian back door.

Chinese leaders were on the lookout for a strategic retreat by the Japs which might have as its purpose the setting of a large-scale trap.

DRAFT:
A Forecast

Representative Sabath of Illinois, chairman of the house rules committee, believes that the waning months of the 77th congress will see the drafting of 18 and 19-year-old youths authorized by new legislation. This session of congress ends in January, 1943.

The congressman predicted that:

"In all likelihood congress will be asked this session to permit the drafting of 18 and 19 year olds and will give its approval."

CEILINGS:
For Hogs, Cattle

As the Office of Price Administration worked out its plans for price ceilings on hogs and cattle, J. K. Galbraith, deputy administrator, told a delegation of large stock producers in Washington that revisions of this system would eliminate inequalities between different regions and different classes of buyers.

Meanwhile concurrence with the OPA plan was being considered by the department of agriculture. Ceilings were worked out in conjunction with representative groups of producers and OPA before submission to Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard.

Beef producers were assured by OPA that this agency would take no steps to discourage normal feeding and marketing of livestock.

"While feeders must exercise normal caution and avoid paying high prices for their feeders," said Deputy OPA Administrator Galbraith, "the working out of ceilings will be undertaken in close consultation with producers and with a full and complete recognition of the market relationships involved."

He said further that "feeders who buy carefully may look forward to the coming year with confidence."

DUKE OF KENT:
Dies in Action

The first casualty in England's royal family since the start of the war occurred in northern Scotland when a giant Sunderland flying boat crashed, bringing death to the duke of Kent, youngest brother of King George VI. With him died all but one of the crew, a tail gunner who was thrown clear of the wreck. The duke, fifth in succession to the throne, was 39 years old. On active military duty, he was the youngest of the four sons of Queen Mary and the late King George V. Married to Princess Marina of Greece in 1934, his three children were Prince Edward, 6; Princess Alexandra, 5; and Prince George, who was born last July 4. Prince George also bears the name of Franklin for President Roosevelt, his godfather.

BRAZIL:
Good Neighbors Speak

Just a week after Brazil's declaration of war against Germany and Italy, the Uruguayan government announced that the two South American nations would co-operate in a "common defense against possible aggression."

Thus Uruguay forged ahead of her South American neighbors in a show of solidarity with Brazil. The country's national defense ministry had been authorized to "adopt, in agreement with military authorities of Brazil, all measures designed for better efficiency in the common defense against possible aggressions."

Maj. Gen. Armandox Tromposky, head of the Brazilian air force, pictured at his desk in Rio de Janeiro. Brazil has a modern air force composed largely of planes manufactured in the United States.

Meanwhile, Foreign Minister Caracciolo Parra Perez of Venezuela expressed his nation's "sincere sympathy and solidarity" with Brazil and announced that Venezuela automatically will treat Brazil as a nonbelligerent under a decree affecting any American nation that goes to war against the Axis.

Fifteen minutes later he was running down the Strand, waving a door knob in his hand and yelling: "Let me get at Hitler's aviators—let me get at his bums." "What happened?" asked a bobby. "They just blew a saloon right out of me hand!" cried the furious Cassidy.

Hitler ordered a captured general to be brought to Berchesgarten—"I wish to humiliate him!" Arriving, the prisoner was told by Adolf: "I will show you that the Nazi mind is superior to your Russian intellect. We will now hold a quiz program. And we'll make bets!" "I can't compete with you financially, Herr Hitler," said the visitor. "That's where the humiliation comes in," gleefully cried Adolf. "To every question I can't answer, I'll give you fifty dollars. To every one you can't answer, you give me twenty-five dollars—go ahead, ask the first question!" The Russian asked this one: "What goes up in the sky with 20 legs, makes ten somersaults, whistles four times and then comes down with only one leg?" Adolf thought a minute and cried: "I don't know—here's the fifty dollars!" "I don't know, either—here's twenty-five dollars back!" answered the Russ general.

The physician was now puzzled and he asked: "If I cut off both your ears, why wouldn't you be able to see?" "Because then my hat would fall over my eyes."

The third time he tried it the bruiser knocked Maxie down. Up rushed a cop: "Did he smash you?" "Yes," moaned Maxie, "and if he does it again I won't open the store!"

IMPROVED NAVAL POSITION

Behind the Solomon islands battle are some optimistic naval facts, entirely aside from the announcement of victory. These facts had to be very carefully considered even before U. S. naval chiefs started to invade the Solomons.

One of these naval facts is that the Japs have suffered very severe losses in cruisers. Although it has escaped public notice, U. S. forces have been bumping off this fast, important type of warship with deadly regularity, so that Jap cruiser strength is now cut at least in half, perhaps more.

Another known naval fact is that the Japs have lost approximately half of their airplane carriers. And with air power what it is today, this is the type of vessel they can least afford to lose.

On the American side of the picture is the fact that U. S. repairs of ships sunk or damaged at Pearl Harbor have been miraculously swift.

All this obviously was taken into consideration before the United States started a major engagement and the offensive in the South Pacific. For Admiral King had to calculate the risk of the Jap admirals rushing a large force to the Solomon islands.

Simultaneously he also had to figure the risk of a Jap attack on various other vital points—Midway, Alaska, Hawaii, even the continental United States.

Top admirals these days do not take chances. Not when the fate of a nation depends on them. Therefore, it requires only a mathematician to figure that the scale of American strength in the Pacific has turned. It reached its low ebb just after Pearl Harbor, when the navy was unable to do anything about the Philippines, Singapore, or Java.

But now the Battle of Midway has shown that Hawaii and the West coast can be defended by land-based planes. No Jap ship dares come near land-based planes without committing suicide.

This leaves a reinforced fleet to operate in the Pacific. Top naval men are not doing any crowing yet. But at least the naval picture seems to counterbalance some of the bad news from Russia—which is going to get a lot worse.

BURIED SILVER

Ten years ago, President Roosevelt and Cordell Hull held a series of discussions with the foreign ministers of Europe in preparation for the London Economic conference, at which one of the chief proposals of the United States was world use of silver.

At these conferences, the late Senator Key Pittman, of the great silver state of Nevada, droned through a regular 45 minute lecture on silver which American experts knew almost by heart and which put Hjalmar Schacht, German finance minister, to sleep. After Pittman had finished, the German minister woke up with a start, hastily brushed aside silver.

"We accept silver. Now this is what we want in return."

The London Economic conference was a dismal failure. But the United States had committed itself so completely to silver in these preliminary talks, that it undertook a silver program, which actually meant that the world sold its silver to us at an artificial price and we buried it in the ground at West Point, N. Y. It was a fine thing for Mexico, China and Canada and a great victory for Senator Pittman and the Rocky Mountain states. Also it resulted in the U. S. treasury accumulating two and a half billion ounces of silver—other than coin.

Today, however, there is a shortage of industrial silver. And yet the treasury will not open up the giant hoard of silver gathering mold at West Point.

Shortage Amid Plenty.

What has happened is this. About 5,000,000 ounces of silver monthly is being mined in the United States, which is ample to care for war needs, but not enough for ordinary commercial needs, especially for the silver industry of New England.

The silver industry, which makes knives, forks, and household ware, formerly used alloys and critical materials—all of which have now been dispensed with. However, silver is not a critical material. There is plenty mined for the war effort but not enough to supply the 80,000,000 ounces needed annually for the silver industry.

So New England silversmiths now ask that they be permitted to buy a mere 80,000,000 ounces out of the two and a half billion ounces which the treasury has buried.

We Can All Be EXPERT BUYERS

● In bringing us buying information, as to prices that are being asked for what we intend to buy, and as to the quality we can expect, the advertising columns of this newspaper perform a worth while service which saves us many dollars a year.

● It is a good habit to form, the habit of consulting the advertisements every time we make a purchase, though we have already decided just what we want and where we are going to buy it. It gives us the most priceless feeling in the world: the feeling of being adequately prepared.

● When we go into a store, prepared beforehand with knowledge of what is offered and at what price, we go as an expert buyer, filled with self-confidence. It is a pleasant feeling to have, the feeling of adequacy. Most of the unhappiness in the world can be traced to a lack of this feeling. Thus advertising shows another of its manifold facets—shows itself as an aid toward making all our business relationships more secure and pleasant.

Star Dust

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

AT NINE O'CLOCK on the night of Tuesday, September 1, every theater in the land is expected to stop its program and stage a "Salute to Our Heroes"; it's planned as one of the features of the treasury's billion-dollar war bond and stamp drive. Patriotic airs will be played as a color guard marches down the aisle, a one-minute speech will be made, the audience will give three cheers and then sing the national anthem. If every movie theater is filled, 11,000,000 people will participate.

Bobby Breen, once famous as a child singing star, who retired from the screen in 1939 at the age of 13, is coming back to it. In Republic's "Johnny Doughboy" he will play himself, a passe movie star, appearing with Jane Withers and Patrick Brook.

During the past year Ginny Simms has been working for RKO, under the usual six-month contract, with options. There's been no big publicity build-up. But recently she signed as the singing mistress of ceremonies for the new "Johnny Presents" radio show, starting September 8—immediately she was cast for three important films, and two other studios that wanted to borrow her were refused!

GINNY SIMMS

Orson Welles has given us another superb picture; "The Magnificent Ambersons" rates right along with "Citizen Kane." He makes a story really come to life. And he has done us all a service in bringing Dolores Costello back to the screen.

Dorothy Lamour has a brand-new makeup for "White Cargo," but it sounds like one of those things that one would rather do without. She wears five successive layers of a fluid foundation that combines cream with powder; each is applied all over her body with a sponge and allowed to dry before the next is applied. Then she's sprayed with a film containing gold dust!

"The War Against Mrs. Hadley" has been selected by the Kate Smith radio hour for a nation-wide salute on September 25. It features Edward Arnold, Fay Bainter, Spring Byington, Richard Ney, Jean Rogers and Van Johnson. Quite a way to launch a picture, as the Kate Smith hour is broadcast over 104 stations, and is said to attract more than 30,000,000 listeners.

Susan Hayward can thank her stars that she's a good screamer. Few actresses can scream convincingly, but Susan let out such a good yelp when testing for "Reap the Wild Wind" that C. B. DeMille promptly signed her up for the second feminine lead. As a result of her performance, those in the know are predicting stardom for the pretty little redhead within a year.

Joan Davis can thank broadcasting for furthering her movie career. Though she's such a clever comedienne, her roles just seemed to be getting smaller and smaller. Then Rudy Vallee asked her to guest star on his program a few times, and she was such a hit that he made her a regular. Whereupon the film studios began to wake up to what they'd been missing, and she's in demand once more.

Lesley Woods, who stars in Columbia's "Joyce Jordan" every afternoon, likes to remember when she and Tyrone Power were on the payroll of the Motion Picture Exhibit at the Century of Progress Exposition in 1938. She says they stood around and tried to look like movie stars and ate ham sandwiches.

ODDS AND ENDS—When Jacquiline White reported on the set of "Skyway to Glory" she was handed a telegram wishing her good luck, signed "Uncle Frank"—meaning Frank Knox, secretary of the navy . . . Dave Elman, the "Hobby Lobby" man of radio, has been so busy that he hasn't been able to catch up with his own hobby for months; he's a stamp collector . . . Meyer Davis heads a committee of bandleaders to collect musical instruments for American prisoners of war—the Y. M. C. A. will distribute them . . . William Powell and Hedy Lamarr teamed so well in "Crossroads" that they'll be starred in "Starlight," a story of marital complications.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—In 1924, a handsome young English society girl, daughter of an admiral, living in the suburbs of London, turned away from parties and dances. She told her friends that the failure of England to make a better life after the war, the "artificiality" of her social coterie, the "sterility" of a machine civilization, had made her customary life intolerable and that she was withdrawing, "to find peace within my own soul." She found jail and exile and jail again the other day, but, as she has always insisted, she also found the peace of mind and spirit which she sought.

Out of Aristoi, She Expounds Virtue of Poverty, Humility

She is Miss Madeleine Slade, somewhat inaccurately identified in the news as Mohandas K. Gandhi's secretary, arrested in Bombay with Gandhi and others in the government's drive against the civil disobedience campaign. As well as secretary, she has been Gandhi's cook, nurse, disciple, adviser, co-strategist, high priestess of his nonviolence doctrine, and a faithful herald of the mahatma's "divine mission."

We talked to her a few moments, in a large company in New York in 1934, when, if we remember correctly, she was visiting the late Lillian Wald, of the Henry Street settlement. Her coarse robe of sackcloth and her shawl drawn tightly over her head, her olive skin, darkened by the tropical sun, her large, dark, placid eyes under highly arched brows gave her distinctly the look of an Oriental ascetic. She expounded the virtues of poverty and humility.

When she took up her cloistered life in England, she read Romain Rolland's life of Gandhi. She went to Switzerland, saw Rolland and told him she believed her pathway to peace lay in India. He put her in touch with the mahatma, but she was required to serve a year's novitiate before joining him. Rising at five o'clock, she pursued an unvarying routine of spinning and other handicraft, of set periods of contemplation and of intensive study of ancient east Indian religion, poetry and philosophy—all this with a rigid regime of diet and practice of physical posture and proper breathing.

At the end of the year, she went to India, was received by Gandhi and admitted to the Ashram, his school for advanced novitiates of his faith. Her father, the late Admiral Sir Esmond Slade, had vehemently opposed her spiritual adventure. She had word from England that he had said she would be disinherited. She wrote her parents, insisting that by no means should she be mentioned in their wills, as "non-possession" was one of the first tenets of her religion. A considerable fortune was distributed in the two wills, but in neither one of them was she mentioned—to her great gratification, she said later.

Was Gratified at Her Disinheritance; She Had Urged It

Her Indian name is Mira, that of an ancient east Indian princess. The people call her Mirabel, meaning "Lady Mira."

Her working day is now from four o'clock in the morning until ten o'clock at night, including, as well as her various services for the mahatma, a long walk each day, preaching and teaching among the poor. In many forms and from many texts, she expounds her belief that "in serving the poor, one serves God and that is the only essential happiness."

Marching by the side of Gandhi in his many civil disobedience campaigns, she has been arrested several times, serving an extended jail sentence in 1932. She accompanied Gandhi to London in 1931, when he participated in the governmental conferences on Indian self rule. Only casually and perhaps accidentally did she meet her old friends of her dancing and dining days. Never, she has definitely said, would she leave her quiet haven of peace for which she has sacrificed so much to attain.

LARGE FRESHMAN CLASS TO ENROLL AT AUBURN

At the opening of the Fall Quarter on Monday, September 7, more than 600 additional members of the freshman class will begin their college careers at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute under the Accelerated Wartime Program.

Including the 465 freshmen who entered for the summer quarter, Auburn's freshman class this year will reach more than 1,000.

It was explained by Registrar W. Charles Edwards that under the new year-round four-quarter system, high school graduates can enter college at Auburn at the beginning of any quarter. Because of the preparation offered at Auburn for "critical occupations" and commissions in the armed forces, enrollment is not expected to suffer during the war. More than 95 per cent of the men at Auburn are serving their country by preparing for critical occupations essential in wartime or for commissions in the Armed Forces.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

Had a nice long visit with our friend Dave Cohen at the Parisian the other day and Mr. Cohen was discussing the war in general and its effect on the merchant. He was telling of one order that he had given a wholesaler for a dozen dresses. He had asked especially that they be assorted [illegible] They were. Eleven were red and one was blue.

A letter from Esn. John M. Higgins who is at Cornell University and has an address that completely covers the front side of a six and three-quarter envelope informs us that he is doing fine and liking his work imensley.

The worst news that we received this week was that of the accident be[illegible] Mrs. Mamie Smith. Mrs. Mamie is just about the most popular person around here and we know has more friends than anybody. Mrs. Mamie fell last week and broke her heel and pulled some tendons loose in the back of her leg. She is in Norwood hospital at present but will soon be home again. However, we understand that she will be confined to a wheel chair for three or four months. We' are sorry and wish for her the speediest recovery possible.

All boys who are interested in Scouting should be at the High School Gym Thursday night (tonight) when John Mullins, Scoutmaster and James Carl Martin, assistant, will meet with the boys to get registrations ready for the new years work. According to John and James Carl things in Scouting are going to move fast in Clanton next year. They are planning on giving the boys the best year in Scouting that Clanton has ever known.

We are mighty glad to see Mr. E. E. Upchurch back at his Drug Store again after a long illness. Doc has been pretty sick and isn't exactly ready to 'hit the ball' yet, but anyway things look more natural around that corner when he is there.

Mike Pickens who has been a faithful employee of the staff for the past several months has left us and gone to Washington where he has accepted a position there. Mike is a good faithful worker and we hope that he does well and wish for him the best of luck in his new place. If tending to ones own business and steadily keeping at his own job will win, Mike will make a big success in Washington.

Lawrence Blakely, who has been with the News for quite a while has brought the wife and young daughter to Clanton to reside. Lawrence and his boss come from Hendersonville, N. C., and when we speak of his boss we aren't speaking of the wife, but of that seven year old daughter who is the apple of his eye and runs the ranch at the Blakely's. We welcome them and hope that they get as much pleasure in knowing and living with real friends here as do we.

FOLKS AND THINGS

Asks Cooperation In School Bus Transportation

To Patrons of School Bus Routes:

During the two years we have had our new school buses we have tried to take good cae of them. We have also tried to keep them in good shape by allowing them to be used only for hauling school children to and from school. We have tried to secure drivers as near the beginning of the route as possible to avoid driving them empty. The result of these efforts is that our buses are in excellent condition for the new school year.

We have always been sympathetic to those who have requested that the school bus come as near them as possible. We want to call your attention to the fact that under presen conditions it is going to be hard to replace present tires when they are worn out. We realize that we shall all have to make sacrifices during this war. We hope that parents of children riding the buses will carefully consider the matter before requesting that the bus leave its regular route to go right to their home. For a school bus to leave its regular route to go out of the way one-fourth mile means twenty miles of extra driving a month. When we consider that there several such requests coming to us and that if they are granted the buses will have to be taken off the road just that much sooner and that all the children riding that bus will have no way to go to school, I am sure that we will all agree that except under exceptional circumstances we ought not to ask for special trips.

If we all cooperate and show a sacrificial spirit, we shall all continue to have the benefit of good school buses for sometime to come, even if the war continues for many months.

Respectfully yours,
RASCOE MADDOX
Co. Superintendent of Education.

OCIE WILLIAMS INJURED BY UNKNOWN ASSAILANTS

Ocie Williams was found unconscious in West End late Saturday night after being attacked and badly beaten. Night officers called Martins ambulance and he was taken to Central Alabama Hospital where he is improving.

It is thought that three or four negro men 'ganged' Williams but no arrests have been made to date and the identity of the assailants are unknown.

Harp and Harmony Convention Held

Last Sunday the Chilton County Harp and Harmony Singing Association was in regular convention at Center Hill Church.

The singing was good only there were not so many of them as were present last year, but wth the Demoralization of war in every one's home as it is now, we would say things were very nice all day.

The audience was particularly courteous and the dinner that was spread surely must have been intended for twice the amount of people as were present because after everyone had eaten all they cared for there was heaps left on the table.

The Association membership is grateful to all the people of Center Hill Community who contributed so graciously to the success of the convention.

All directors for the day and the class as well sang with the Spirit of Worship.

All singers and lovers of these old songs, are requested to meet with Pates Chapel Church Sunday, Sept. 13.

Thanks to all and meet us there.

UNCLE SAM NEEDS NURSES

"Nurses Have You Enrolled In The American Red Cross Nursing Serv[illegible]? It is your patriotic duty to do so at once. You know, of course, that the American Red Cross forms a recruitment channel for the Army and Navy. With our loved country's freedom at stake, with millions of our fathers, brothers, sweethearts and husbands in the service, can we sit still and say 'Oh, let the other fellow do it' or I'll do it tomorrow'. The other fellow or tomorrow will do no good when the enemy is on our shores. Nurses between the ages of 21 to 40 are urgently needed. Join the American Red Cross and learn how to be of most service. For complete information, write Miss Annice Jackson, Chairman, Birmingham Local Committee, Hillman's Hospital, Birmingham; or Mrs. Adeline Epping Carr, Alabama State Secretary, American Red Cross Nursing Service, 1402½ 10th Avenue South, Birmingham, Alabama."

DON'T READ THIS

It's About Helping Your Country; Buying War Bonds, and Advertising

First read this letter from Eugene W. Sloan, Executive Director, War Saving Staff.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT IN WASHINGTON

Fellow American:

Your unstinted contributions to the United States War Savings Bond Program in publishing columns of material promoting the sale of U. S. War Bonds have been tremendously helpful to this important phase of our Nation's war effort. We think it only appropriate that we take this occasion to tell you of the Treasury Department's appreciation.

As you are so well aware, sponsored advertising is the only method the Treasury Department has for promoting paid advertising of War Bonds through newspapers, and it's only through continued voluntary and patriotic contributions on the part of your advertisers that we can keep in front of the people the urgent necessity for "everybody saving at least 10 percent in War Bonds every pay day."

May I express my personal thanks for the exceptional contributions you have made and will be making in the future to help win this war.

Sincerely,
EUGENE W. SLOAN,
Executive Director,
War Saving Staff.

This is a letter that we received this week and we decided that we would do our best to do something about it. With this letter we received copies of seven advertisements from the Treasury Department advertising War Bonds and Stamps and we were requested to try and find sponsors for these ads.

On the last week in September the Chilton County News will publish a "Chilton County Victory Edition," printing all pictures of the boys in the service that it is possible for us to get and make arrangements for. This of course will be with a short paragraph giving the boys parents name and his whereabouts as definite as the War Department will allow. If you have a boy in service, Army, Navy or Marines get in touch with us before the 15th of September and bring a picture of the boy with you.

It will be our endeavor to make this one of the biggest special editions that the Chilton County News has ever published, and with your help we can do it. It will be by far the MOST IMPORTANT.

Daily things on the Front Lines grow more serious and daily the folks left at home will be called on to give more. We do not know what the word 'sacrifice' means as yet, compared to what we are likely to experience within the next few years. Germany and Japan must be conquered. The Allied Forces cannot do it without our aid. My help and your help, each and every one MUST do his or her part if we are ever to know peace and liberty again.

Your country needs you. Get in touch with your County War Bond Committee today and tell them that you are behind them 100 percent and that you will do your share in going 'all out' for FREEDOM.

The high school would like to keep him for the year as he would be of invaluable assistance to Coach Porch in his athletic program

The boys most likely to see service in the games this fall are: Backs, Cost. Payton, Higgins, McGee, Culp, Edwards, Coggins, Thomas, Seales. Ends: Smith, Kellum, Cooper, R. Popwell, G. Popwell. Tackles: Dennis, Stanley, Teel, Neeley, Clackler, Peek. Guards: McKey, Mims, Bates, E. Baker, Davis. Centers: Davenport, H. Baker.

It looks as if the punting this year will have to be done by McKey and Payton, while the passing will be done by Cost and Payton.

The schedule this year is one of the most attractive ever offered to the local fans. If Blount County High accepts the local boys will have a team with the same record as theirs of last year. Blount County Hi last year went undefeated and untied for the season. It numbered among its victims some of the strongest teams of the Birmingham district.

With luck against accidents and injuries the local team should have a successful season.

Food Establishments Must Have Permits

All operators of food handling establishments which include restaurants, soda fountains, sandwich shops, candy manufacturers were reminded today that it will be necessary to obtain a permit from the local Health Department prior to October 1, 1942, for operation of any food handling establishment during the license year of 1943. Whether or not these permits are issued depends on the satisfactory compliance with the standards set up as to equipment and physical condition of the establishment.

Each operator has full knowledge of the food handling regulations and continued operation of any establishment depends on the use of this knowledge in safeguarding food supplies that are dispensed to the public.

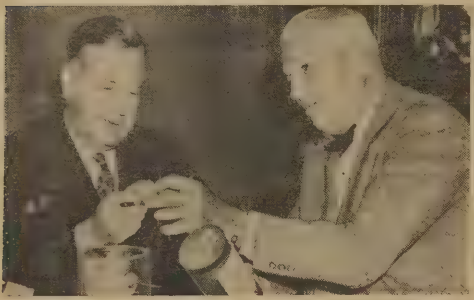
At U. S.-RAF Air Cooperation Meeting

The first 100 raids over Europe by U. S. Flying Fortresses were made without the loss of a single plane. Here Maj. Gen. Carl Spaatz, chief of the U. S. army air forces in the European theater of war, is shown (left) with Air Marshal Richard Peck, assistant chief of the RAF, in London. They announced plans for air co-operation in joint attacks on enemy territory and Germany.

Tinless 'Tin' Can Demonstration



Senator Guy M. Gillette (right), chairman of special committee on utilization of farm crops, is shown the new fiber, plastic-lined container invented by Albert Robbins, which, it is hoped, will be an acceptable substitute for the tin can. R. S. McMillan (left), president of a Los Angeles petroleum company, plans to use the container for lubricating oil.

'The Better 'Ole'

A war correspondent who is covering the scrap in North Africa sits at his "desk" in a slit trench in the desert batting out his "piece." There is no city editor to bawl him out, no clatter of teletypes, and life would be just grand, if it weren't for the shells, dive bombers and strafing planes, not to mention the heat in the daytime, the cold at night and the continuous water famine.

To Be Produced on Canadian Assembly Lines

An excellent view of the Lancaster, first of England's mighty four-engined bombers, as it arrives at Dorval airport in Montreal, Canada. It will be demonstrated and then produced on Canada's assembly lines. This bomber can carry eight tons of bombs, has a top speed of 300 miles per hour and a range of 3,000 miles. It has ten machine guns.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—We get word from Detroit that Igor Sikorsky's helicopter, the rocking chair of the sky, is in production and that one Detroit factory is manufacturing parts. The army and navy have been this way and that about the helicopter, but there is no doubt that it is now a war weapon.

Dreams to Music; War Helicopter Is Latest Contribution

Its uses are a military secret, but its value in spotting submarines and in reconnaissance are obvious. It can take off from any ship deck and it can hover in the air like a humming bird while a mechanic swings down under and changes a wheel.

Igor Sikorsky is a shy, gentle man who dreams great dreams. His book, "The Story of the Winged S," begins with the story of a dream. At the age of 24 he was the father of Russian aviation and he was launching cardboard dinosaurs into the air before the Wright brothers flew at Kitty Hawk. He built the first great air clippers and the czar's first huge bombers were of his design. With the revolution on, he found it difficult to keep his mind on his dreams and went to Paris to lecture before YMCA audiences on a variety of subjects.

Rachmaninoff, the pianist, wanted him to keep on dreaming, and, with other musicians, gathered $100,000 to this end. In the U. S. A., he built the huge S-35. It was to take Rene Fonck to France, but it crashed on the runway and burned two men to death. Mr. Sikorsky kept on designing and building, a pioneer of multi-engined planes, in his 36-acre air plant in Connecticut.

His dreams are paced to music, Chopin frequently, as music is somehow innate in his genius and inseparable from his aeronautical flights into the future—which he says belongs to the air. Eight hundred classical records are a part of his work-a-day equipment. On his tidy little home farm, he raises cucumbers and drives his own tractor. He loves cucumbers, perhaps on account of their nice design. He is plump, bald and hesitant, with a Charlie Chaplin mustache. His father was professor of psychology at the University of Kiev.

IT WOULD BE just like the versatile marines to unveil a sea-going truck. That's just what they have done, and we've been trying to find out whether it was used in the Dieppe raid.

Sea-Going Truck Just What Doctor Ordered for War

The navy wasn't talkative about it, but there is sufficient wide open news of this jungle jalopy to justify the conclusion that it is the most novel and exciting new fighting tool this war has yet produced and sure to score heavily in landing operations to come—and it appears that they are coming fast.

The marines call it their "invasion taxi," and its inventor, Donald Roebling, grandson of the builder of the Brooklyn bridge, calls it the "alligator." It goes about twice as fast on land as on water. Twenty-five feet long and about as wide as a box car, it can be lowered over the side of a transport or warship, take the water like a duck and, hitting the shore, keep right on mushing along

It can carry a big load of leathernecks, a military freight car, or plenty of fighting gear. The caterpillar treads have wide, diagonally placed cleats which serve as fins or paddles in the water, and nobody has to tuck them in or reset them when it reaches land.

It is armed and armored, of course not heavily, but capable of resisting fairly brisk fire. On February 17 of this year, the marines ordered 200 of them at a cost of $3,200,000. They have been in forced-draft production in a big Detroit auto factory.

Down in Florida, it was just a "swamp buggy" at first, or a "mercy tank," developed by Donald Roebling after the hurricane of 1933, to rescue storm victims marooned in the Everglades.

It took him seven years to bring it through and a war to make him change the name from "mercy tank" to "alligator." He apparently inherited the inventive and constructive genius of his grandfather, the late Washington A. Roebling, who not only built the Brooklyn bridge, but spanned Niagara gorge in 1850.

Young Roebling has been known as a sportsman, much at sea on his yacht Iorano, on which he led a Smithsonian exploration of the Caribbean sea and the Gulf of Mexico in 1937. His absorbing life interests are science and invention.

Producing Own Home Beef Aids War Plan

500-Pound Calf at Ten Month Age Is Suggestion

Producing beef for home use is a real contribution to the wartime program. If some families are to have meat they must produce it, says Roy W. Snyder, animal industries specialist of the Texas A. and M. College Extension service.

Even the nondescript, pot-bellied, small, rough-haired Jersey type calf can be made into satisfactory beef for family use. It needs to be fed a fattening ration for four to six months before being killed. Feeding not only makes more beef, but improves the quality to an almost unbelievable degree.

If a milk-pen calf is available it should be started on feed at once. Use the feeds grown on the farm. It may take 1,200 pounds of corn or milo, 1,200 pounds of hay and two sacks of cottonseed meal for the average inexperienced feeder to develop a calf into good edible beef, but the feed will be used to good advantage.

Feeding the calf until it weighs at least 500 pounds when it is ten months old, is a good mark to shoot at. Feed it all it will eat so that it will put on fat as it grows.

A good practice is to feed grain as soon as the calf will eat it. Oats is best to get a young calf on feed, but if it is not available, feed corn, milo or some other grains.

When the calf receives less milk later in the feeding period, add cottonseed meal or cake to the grain at the rate of one pound of meal to five pounds of grain.

From the way the picture looks, little Amy Fry, Montgomery county, Maryland, has figuratively and actually taken this young calf under her protective wing. It seems that Amy is going to make an excellent 4-H-er when she gets a little bigger.

Drug Plants

Defense experts say that this country would be able to raise its own supply of drugs if the 60 medicinal plants now imported were planted here. All of the plants will grow here and the only drawback is the large amount of hand labor required.

Anise is grown commercially in Rhode Island. Its aromatic seeds are used for medicine, in baking and for flavoring confectionery. Oil is distilled from the seed which is used medicinally, in cordials and for flavoring in various beverages.

Belladonna has been cultivated in California, Michigan, Indiana, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. When the leaves and roots are dried, they yield a drug which commanded high prices during the World war, but interest in this crop recently has declined.

In certain localities in New England and the West, Lovage is grown. Its roots are used in the drug trade, while the seeds are used for flavoring confectionery.

Muck lands of southern Michigan and northern Indiana are used for growing peppermint. About 500,000 pounds are produced annually in this country.

Stigmas of the saffron flowers are used in cookery, for coloring confectionery and to some extent in medicine. It is grown as a small garden crop in Pennsylvania.

Bark Valuable

Bark from certain trees is valuable and can be sold.

Two companies in the Buffalo, N. Y., area buy the bark from hemlock and rock oak, while one firm in Fulton county, New York, buys alder bark.

White ash logs are bringing top prices now for uses in the army, navy, and agriculture. The buyers want logs free from crooks and knots, and may take lengths as short as four feet.

Constipation! Why Not Get and Keep "Regular"?

One of the commonest causes of constipation is simply this: Modern diets, superrefined, too often give us too little "bulk food." In such cases, dosing with cathartics and purges gives only temporary relief — the trouble comes back again and again. The way to more lasting relief is to get at the underlying cause and correct it.

You can do this by eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN daily. This delicious, toasty cereal supplies the needed "bulk." It acts pleasantly; works principally on the contents of the colon, helping you to have easy and normal elimination. In many cases, eating ALL-BRAN regularly and drinking plenty of water brings lasting freedom from constipation. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not benefited by this simple treatment, see your doctor.

U. S. Learns Jungle Warfare

Snakebite antidote, compasses, mosquito netting and machetes are part of the regular equipment of American soldiers now receiving training in jungle fighting in the Caribbean area.

To reach their objectives, jungle fighters must climb and descend mountains, hack their way through jungle growth, traverse swamps and cross rivers.

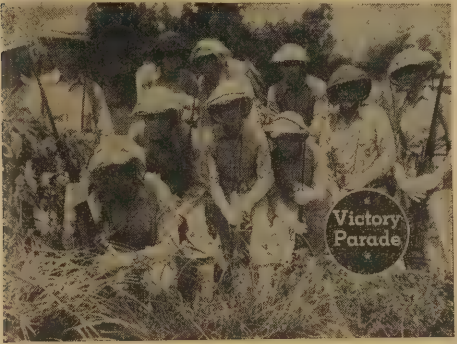
A large body of men carry a good deal of equipment—one soldier a rope, another dynamite, others gasoline and a stove for smokeless cooking; others additional medical supplies and weapons.

Soldiers in the Caribbean area learn to swim rivers with their rifles over their heads and know the trick of bending over, when they have reached the opposite bank, to let the water run out of their packs. In low, swampy places and when crossing streams they must be on the watch for a wall of water which might come at them because of a cloudburst high in the mountains above them, sweeping rocks and trees with it.

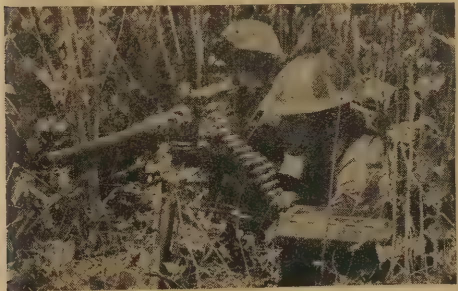
Food is a problem in the jungle, for everything molds, and tin cans in most cases are too heavy to carry. The soldier must learn to live off the jungle as far as possible on fruits or on the meat of canejos, tapirs, snakes and monkeys. He learns that iguanas are a delicacy.

Men in training are never sent on a mission alone; two men must always be together. In actual combat, however, these men will be putting to use all they have learned in order to out-infiltrate and outfight the Japs.

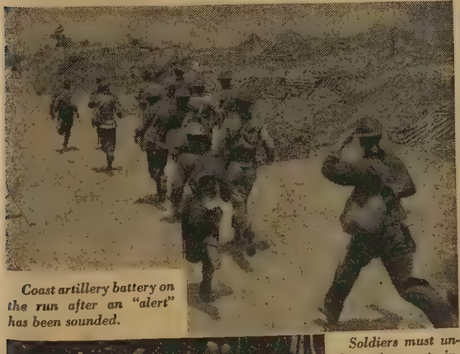
Presented here is a series of jungle warfare training pictures taken by the U. S. Army Signal Corps in remote outposts manned by U. S. troops somewhere in the Caribbean area.



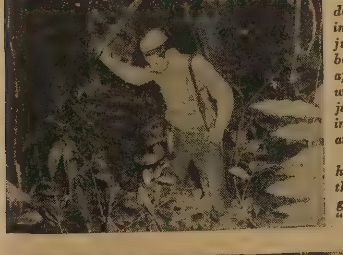
A group of typical fighting men who are manning our Caribbean defenses are shown equipped with modern Garand rifles and wearing mosquito helmets.



Heavy caliber machine gun ready for action and manned by experts.

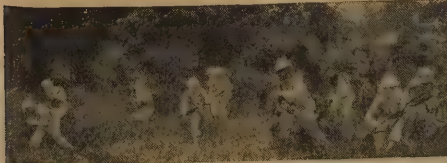


Coast artillery battery on the run after an "alert" has been sounded.



Soldiers must undergo rigorous training to cope with the jungle. They can be chilled when, after hacking their way through the jungle, they emerge into a clearing where air is stirring.

Left: Troopers hack their way through deep jungle growths with a "bush knife."



A charge in the jungle presents this grotesque scene.

Paper Clips

By

DOROTHY DOUGLAS

McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

IT WAS not until Alice reached her office and put down her many packages that she knew she had either lost or left in the bus or train the most important of the lot.

She had sat up, straining her eyes with the fine print of the telephone directory, until after midnight, addressing envelopes to be sent out with samples of her paper clips, and she had stupidly proceeded to lose 500 of them.

Alice felt like indulging in a grand, devastating cry, but realized with her sound common sense that she dare not acquire a red nose and tear-dimmed eyes at the very commencement of her business day. Alice might have felt a bit more cheery as she opened her morning mail.

But from the depths of her gloom she failed to see that glimmer of hope.

A few, nice orders among her letters and the work attendant upon getting them packed up, invoiced and dispatched left her little time to fret about her loss and it was just nearing the noon hour when a young man entered her office.

She had her hat on preparatory to locking the office and going out for her noon breath of fresh air as well as a large cup of coffee and a sandwich.

The young man needed no introduction.

She smiled such a charming smile that young Woodward almost lost his breath and forgot to mention his reason for being there.

However, being an outside salesman and more than accustomed to various types of receptions in offices he visited, he managed to smile joyfully in return and say briskly:

"I found these envelopes in the Fifth avenue bus this morning and being curious, opened up the package. I found the name of A. Caton, Incorporated, and this print of the clip which I suppose your office supplies."

"I happen to be the office, store house, manager, office boy and all the directors," laughed Alice, "and I am tremendously pleased to get those back so soon. I sat up until twelve-thirty addressing them."

"Oh, I say—then I suppose you are Miss Caton." He hesitated for a second, then plunged boldly into his reason for appearing in person with the lost property. "I suppose you are just going out to lunch, but I wanted to make a proposition about this clip."

"Well, I wasn't exactly going out to lunch, but I was going to have some coffee. I have only the noon hour to get out—being a one-man office force. Perhaps—" she smiled at young Woodward.

"Just so. Perhaps you will go with me for that cup of coffee. A pure business cup," he laughed.

And when they sat at the marble counter, each with a steaming cup of coffee with cream floating on top and sandwiches beside them, Woodward plunged into his idea.

"You see, Miss Caton, I am an outside salesman working a few good stationery lines and I feel that I could sell a lot of those clips of yours—commission basis, of course. It looks like about the best paper clip on the market."

"It is," said Alice with conviction, "and I sell millions of them now, but I want to do a lot more. I am just struggling upward at the moment and could do with some outside salesmen—good ones—that is."

"I'm all that," laughed Woodward, "and if you want to save postage on this batch of envelopes, I will take this along with me. It will give me a bit of a start."

Alice laughed at his enthusiasm and felt a great wave of gratitude sweeping over her toward this very attractive and able young man. She had been feeling a bit in need of assistance if her business was to expand and had not known just how to go about it.

"I will have to attach all the clips first," she told him. "I put one of each size on the circular card so that the actual clip is seen and tested in the office."

"That's the stuff," exclaimed Woodward, "no use being mean in business. But it will take you a long time to do thousands of them, won't it?"

Alice sighed softly. "Yes, but—I have to do it. I can do hundreds in the evenings at home."

"Oh, I say—couldn't I help? I have only some uninteresting fellow boarders to spend the evenings with. I'd love to help you. Besides—the sooner we swing this batch into the offices the better."

Alice laughed. The We had come out so unconsciously.

"You are the kind of salesman I have dreamed about, but never hoped to find," she told him with laughing lips.

And Woodward found himself lost in contemplation of a future wherein the girl opposite him played a somewhat more intimate part than that of employer of a commission salesman.

Alice found herself much to her annoyance coloring under that regard—but somehow they both knew that a little paper clip on a lost envelope had given them each other as well as increased business.

NANA WNU Service

THIS seems to be a good spot in which to pay additional tribute to a fellow by the name of Carl Owen Hubbell, a pitcher for Mel Ott's New York Giants.

After taking in all the testimony available from Mel Ott, his fellow Giants and his opponents from the National and American league, Carl Hubbell comes closer to being: "The perfect ball player" than any one we've ever known.

There is, of course, no such word as "perfection" in the human layout. It is the closest approach to perfection that one must consider.

"Here is what Carl Hubbell has," Mel Ott told me. "Just check against it—"

"Skill, courage, brains, modesty, humility, loyalty, stamina, the will to win, concentration, physical fitness—100 per cent of which qualities he has at every start."

This happens to be a fair collection of worthwhile ingredients in an age where such features as "modesty," "humility," "loyalty," "stamina" and "concentration" are often well below par.

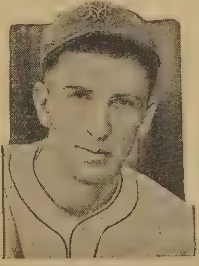
Skill, courage and brains combined in one system are rare enough.

But these qualities are usually accompanied by arrogance, over-confidence, physical unfitness and spotty concentration.

About Carl Hubbell

Lon Warneke, the tobacco chewer from Mt. Ida, Ark., one of the best pitchers in the game, said recently that Hubbell was the greatest pitcher he had ever seen.

"That tells only half the story," Mel Ott said. "Carl Hubbell is the most remarkable man I've ever known in baseball."



CARL HUBBELL

"When he started this season with the Giants back in April he was 39 years old. He had been a star pitcher for 20 years. We kicked away one game after another back of him He never had a complaint. He had lost six of his first seven starts. He took all the blame. But in place of losing heart he kept working just as hard and then won his next six straight starts."

"It doesn't make any difference how many errors you make back of Carl. He takes the blame. He never has an alibi or an excuse. It took him five years through seven different towns to reach the Giants in 1928, but this never slowed him down. He has been their star ever since he arrived."

"Carl has won 19 games in a row. He fanned five of the greatest hitters the American league ever knew in succession. He has won four of his six World Series starts. He won 116 games in five years for the Giants, a remarkable record with only a fair hitting ball club. But that's only a small part of the real Carl Hubbell."

Still Learning

"Hubbell, after 20 years, is still learning. When he sits on the bench he watches every batter that comes to the plate. He watches every pitcher to see just what he has. He works just as hard when he isn't pitching as he does in the box. The greatest pitcher of them all, he takes nothing for granted. During a game, even when he is on the bench, he overlooks nothing. He rarely says a word.

"His whole heart and soul are in that ball game—and that's after 20 years of competition. He is just as keen to win now—I think even keener—than he was at his prime.

"And through it all he is the mest modest man I ever knew. If Carl won 40 consecutive games, if he broke every pitching record, he would still be the same quiet, loyal, modest fellow trying to learn—and giving all the credit to the team."

I talked with several of the Giants about Hubbell.

"He is under one tough handicap," a Giant veteran said, "When Carl pitches we all are so keen to win for him that we tighten up. We know there's no one like him. We'd break a leg and an arm to win for him. So at times we get over anxious, try too hard, and lose games he should have won. But you can make six errors back of Hub and you'll never hear a squawk. When he loses he is the one who takes the blame. When he wins—it's the team that did it."

WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS ARE SELECTED FOR ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN

Three hundred weekly newspapers throughout the south and southwestern Peanut Belt statees have been selected for an advertising campaign lasting several weeks by Carl R. Livermon Company of Roxobel, North Carolina, manufacturers of peanut picking machines. This newspaper is one of the 300 chosen for the campaign.

"In selecting key weekly newspapers in 300 communities throughout the peanut belt," said Carl R. Livermon, head of the Livermon Company," I was influenced by the belief that the weekly newspapers furnish the best contact with the people because they are closely read, and their circulation is centralized. There is no lost circulation scattered over wide areas; you get the reader interest you pay for."

The Livermon company has for many years manufactured peanut pickers and is one sf the leaders in the field.

Mrs. Erle Ellis presented the nuptial music.

The altar was banked with ferns forming a background for baskets of gladioli. Seven-branched candelabra held burning white tapers.

HOW TO MAIL XMAS PACKAGES

Arrangements have been made by the Post Office Deportment in cooperation with the War and Navy Departments for the acceptance of Christmas parcels for members of our armed forces serving outside the continental United States. (For the purpose of these instructions Alaska is included in the terms "outside the continental United States.") In order that such parcels may reach the addreses on time and in good condition, postmasters are requested to bring the following requirements to the attention of the mailers.

TIME OF MAILING.—Christmas parcels and Christmas cards should be mailed during the period beginning October 1 and ending November 1, 1942, the earlier the better. Patrons should be encouraged to endorse each gift parcel "Christmas Parcel." Epecial effort will be made to effect delivery of all Chritsmas parcels mailed during that period in time for Christmas.

SIZE AND WEIGHT.—In view of the urgent need for shipping space to transport materials directly essential to the war effort, Christmas parcels shall not exceed the present limits of 11 pounds in weight or 18 inches in length or 42 inches in length and girth combined. Nevertheless the public is urged by the War and Navy Departments to cooperate by voluntadily restricting the size of Christmas parcels to that of an ordinary shoe box, and the weight to 6 pounds. These departments have pointed out also that members of the Armed Forces are amply provided with food and clothing, and the public is urged not to include such matter in gift parcels. Not more than one Christmas parcel or package shall be accepted for mailing in any one week when sent by or on behalf of the same person or concern to or for the same addressee.

PREPARATION—Owing to the great distance this mail must be transported and the handling and storage it must undergo, it is absolutely necessary that all articles be packed in substantial boxes or containers and be covered with wrappers of sufficient strength not only to resist pressure of other mail in the same sack, but to withstand the weight of other sacks of mail, which in the long transit may be piled thereon. Futhermore, as each parcel is subject to censorship, delay in handling may be minimized by securing the covering of the parcel so as to permit ready inspection of the contents.

Many combination packages will probably be made up, including miscellaneous toilet articles, hard candies soaps, etc. The contents of such packages should be tightly packed, in order that the several articles may not be loosened in transit, damaging the contents of the parcel itself or causing damage to the covering of the parcel Christmas boxes should be inclosed in substantial containers. Candies in thin paste board boxes should be inclosed in wood, metal, or corrugated pasteboard. Sealed packages of candy cigars, tobacco and toilet articles in simplest mercantile form be inclosed within parcels without effecting the parcel-post classification of such packages. Sharp-pointed or sharp-edged instruments, such as razors, knives. etc., must have their points or edges protected so they cannot cut through their coverings and damage other mail or injure postal employees.

PERISHABLE MATTER.—No perlishable matter should be included in any parcels.

PROHITED ARTICLES—Intoxicants, inflammable materials (including matches of all kinds and lighter fluids) and poisons, or compositions which may kill or injure another, or damage the mails, are unmailable.

HOW TO ADDRESS PARCELS.—Addresses must be legible. Parcels addressed to overseas Army personnel should show in addition to the name and address of the sender, the name rank, Army serial number, branch of service, organization, A. P. O. number of the addressee and the post office through which the parcels are to be routed, as, for instance:

From: John R. Doe,
205 West State Street,
Boston Massachusetts.

To: Private William D. Roe (Number)
Company F, 167th Infantry,
APO 810, c|o Postmaster,
New York, New York.

Parcels for naval personnel should show, in addition to the name and address of the sender, the name and rank or ratng of the addressee and the naval unit to which he is assigned, or name of ship, and post office through which the parcels are to be routed, as, for instance:

From: John R. Doe
205 West State Street,
Boston, Massachusetts.

To: John M. Johns, Seaman First Class
(Naval Unit or Vessel),
C|o Postmaster,
New York, New York.

Marine Corps should show the rank or Parcels for members of the U. S. rating, full name and U. S. M. C., U. S. Marine Corps Unit No.—— (insert appropriate No.); c|o Postmaster, New York, N. Y. or San Francisco, Calif. (as instructed by correspondent) for any Marine Corps Unit located overseas, as for instance:

From: John R. Doe
205 West State Street,
Boston, Massachusetts.

To: Private John Henry Smith, USMC
U. S. Marine Corps Unit —o.—
C|o Postmaster,
San Francisco, California.

Units located within the continental limits of the United States may be addressed direct, using the name, rank, organization and location.

Letter To The Editor:

Many thanks for publishing a rookies viewpoint on Army life. We Chilton County boys are proud of our paper, the best county paper in Alabama.

After training five weeks at Miami Beach under weather temperature of 108 degrees. I was shipped August 18 to Ft. Logan, Colorado. Boarded train at 4:00 p. m. and reached destination August 21 at 1:00 p. m.

On the trip I passed through Fla., Ga., Ala., Tenn., Ky., Indiana, Illinois, Mo., Kan., and Colorado. Saw the sand covered shores of Florida, and the fertile warm lands of Ga. and Ala. the Blue Ridge Mountains of Tenn. and Ky.; the corn belt of Indiana and Illinois; the blue saged plains dotted with fine herds of white faced cattle of Mo. and Kansas; and the Rocky Mountains of Colorado.

Onour trip we were greeted and entertained by the USO of Kansas City. I want to thank the USO's for their splendid work of making a lonely soldier feel at home.

The weather here is crispy, for I slept under two wool blankets last night. The camp is still under construction, but everyone here greets you with a smile.

I'm asking everyone in Chilton County to pray a special prayer for all of the dear ole USA so we can win this war by spring of 1943.

Always ready to serve my country.

Yours truly,
Pvt. Julius A. Sample

DEGREES TOTAL 675 IN 1942 AT AUBURN

Including the 145 degrees awarded by Pres. L. N. Duncan Friday evening to members of the summer graduating class, the Alabama Polytechnic Institute has granted a total of 675 degrees this year.

Registration for the summer quarter has been 2,674. "This compares with an average registration of 1561 for the two summer terms of 1941 and is a measure of the success of Auburn's Accelerated Wartime Program," said Dr. Duncan.

Present indications are that enrollment for the Fall Quarter, which opens on Monday, September 7, will approximate the enrollment for the first semester of last year, added Dr. Duncan.

Mr. Grady Harris spent Monday in Birmingham on business.

Mr. T. C. Marcus made a business trip to Goodwater, and other places Monday.

MAKE Fewer Calls
EVERY DAY

In wartime, war needs must have right-of-way. This includes fast telephone service for war agencies and industries producing war weapons.

To provide this service, long distance and local telephone lines, now crowded with the greatest volume of calls in history, must be kept clear of non-essential messages. Ordinary peacetime uses of the telephone must yield right-of-way to war business.

If times were normal, we would build facilities to handle this growing volume of calls, but today, materials needed for telephone construction are going to war—where all of us are glad to have them go.

Therefore we are asking telephone users to make fewer long distance and local calls so as to help keep telephone lines clear for vital war calls.

How You Can Help

Long Distance Calls

Make only the most necessary long distance calls.

Place your calls before 9 a. m.; between noon and 2 p. m.; 5 and 7 p. m.; or after 9 p. m.

Stay near your telephone after you have placed your call.

Plan what you want to say to make your conversation as brief as possible.

Whenever possible, call by number.

Local Calls

Use your telephone sparingly—avoid unnecessary calls.

Be sure to replace your receiver on the hook.

Look up numbers you are not sure of and help avoid the calling of wrong numbers.

Make your conversations brief.

Caution your servants against needless use of the telephone.

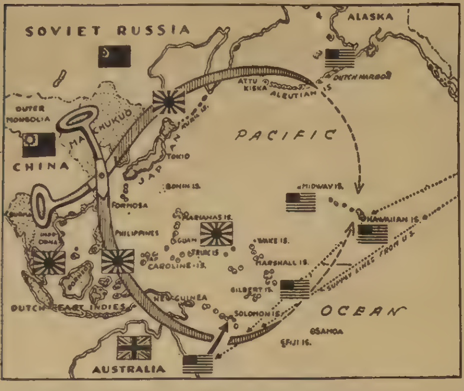
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Battle of Egypt Gains New Momentum As British, U. S. Planes Blast Rommel; Jap War Minister Given New Power; Total Farm Crop Reaches Record High

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.



Japan's great pincer movement, which was aimed at Hawaii, appeared to be effective until the United States marines took Jap bases in the Solomons, thus breaking the lower prong. This failure has been emphasized further by Japanese defeats in Milne bay, on the tip of New Guinea.

DESERT WAR:
With Tanks, Planes

As British and German tanks continued their bitter struggle on a 20-mile desert front in Egypt, American bombers joined the Royal Air force in carrying out almost continuous operations against Nazi concentrations.

Reinforced and rested after a two months' halt, Marshal Erwin Rommel's army started its advance in the rolling, rocky area between the Ruweisat ridge in the center and Himeimat peak, on the southern wing near the Qattara depression.

Rommel's major effort was at the southern hinge of the British line, where troops were taking the brunt of the attack. War bulletins issued jointly by the headquarters and the RAF, said U. S. army air force planes participated in extensive operations over the entire area where the Nazis were trying to smash toward Alexandria, the Nile and the Suez canal.

Dispatches from the front noted that the moon was favorable for night fighting and that the weather was much cooler than the 100 degree temperature during the early summer.

TOGO TO TOJO:
Fourth Portfolio

When Japanese Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo resigned his position for "personal reasons," the Japanese cabinet virtually eliminated the one strong man regarded as being opposed to hostilities against Russia. Togo negotiated the Moscow-Tokyo neutrality pact.

Togo's post was taken over by Gen. Eiki Tojo, who now holds four portfolios in the cabinet—premier, war minister, minister of home affairs and foreign minister. The "strong man" of Japan, Tojo was a staunch advocate of the Axis pact and of Japan's "new order" in the Orient. His present four posts concentrate in one man almost absolute powers over his people.

Premier Tojo

Minister Togo

Anticipating close scrutiny by official Russian sources, Tojo declared that his assumption of the foreign ministry "will not result in any way in an alteration of Japan's foreign policy." However, Togo's resignation, plus Tojo's decision to take over the foreign portfolio, was widely interpreted as presaging a sneak attack on Russia. Information reaching Chunking said that 100,000 Japanese troops—totaling five divisions—had been sent north from the Chinese theater of war.

Supporting this theory, Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, United States commander in chief in India, China and Burma, announced that there is a "good chance" the Japs would attack Siberia.

HOT SPOT:
In South Pacific

Frustrated by hard-hitting United Nations forces at Milne bay, the Jap busied himself by pounding away elsewhere on the island of New Guinea, vital stepping stone to Australia. Port Moresby via Kokoda was the Jap objective.

Though the tempo of the fighting had increased there were strong indications that the trap set by General MacArthur's forces at Milne bay had effected huge losses on the enemy's air power. Particularly was the Jap fighter plane force smashed. At least 30 of the Zero fighters had been destroyed in the Milne bay encounter and while the Japs could ferry additional planes through a chain of islands it appeared that the United Nations had won the first round in the struggle.

Communiques lacked reports of Zero bombing and strafing expeditions but the United Nations were not assuming that Japan's air power had been permanently disabled.

NAZIS GAIN:
In Caucasus

Gloomy news came from the Russian front as the unexpected Red offensive northwest of Moscow failed for the most part in bringing relief to beleaguered Stalingrad.

Despite Soviet counterattacks on the Moscow-Rzhev front, the Nazis still were able to pour large scale reserves of troops, tanks and aircraft into the advance on Stalingrad. Hungarian and Rumanian divisions joined the assault on the vital Volga river city.

German troops had reached a zone in the Caucasus northwest of Novorossisk, Soviet Black sea naval base, a Russian communique acknowledged.

The Red army had withstood a constant hammering northwest of Stalingrad and had delivered strong blows against the enemy's flank. South of Krasnodar, in the Caucasus, the Russians said their troops were annihilating a trapped enemy.

NATION'S CROPS:
Reach Record High

The greatest supply of food in history will come from the nation's farms this year. Department of agriculture reports indicate that crops are the greatest on record for this time of year.

America is producing the biggest corn crop in 10 years, the largest wheat crop since 1915 and the greatest oat crop since 1925. Corn crop estimates place the total at 2,753,696,000 bushels as compared with 2,673,000,000 bushels in 1941. Oats are expected to reach 1,332,000,000 bushels as compared with 1,176,000,000 last year. The department estimates wheat production at 955,000,000 bushels as compared with 946,000,000 bushels in 1941.

Sugar cane production is estimated at 7,379,000 tons; sugar beet production, 12,967,000 tons; cottonseed, 5,800,000 tons; flaxseed, 42,000,000 bushels; soy beans, 186,000,000 bushels; peanuts, 2,800,000,000 pounds; barley, 417,000,000 bushels; rye, 60,000,000 bushels; rice, 74,000,000 bushels.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

ARMY: The duke of Windsor has announced the formation of a Bahamas defense force, the first full-time military unit in the island in more than a century.

BIGGEST: Roosevelt base in California—which the navy terms the largest operating base in the world—has been commissioned on land reclaimed from Los Angeles harbor.

REPLACED: Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese ambassador to the United States for the past 12 years, has been recalled by his government and will be succeeded by Wei Tao Ming, former ambassador to Vichy.

CONSPIRATOR: Convicted of conspiracy to serve Germany as a spy, Herbert K. F. Bahr was sentenced to serve 30 years in prison by a federal judge in New Jersey.

WHERE'S OUR NAVY?:
Secretary Knox Reports

In his first press conference in almost five months Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox came up with some information on activities in the U. S. navy.

He pointed out that all officers over 57 years of age were being subjected to a rigid physical examination as part of the navy's effort to weed out all officers except those in perfect condition.

While he doesn't believe the submarine menace off the Atlantic coast to be solved he did say that he believed the decline in sinkings could partly be credited to the fact that "we've made it tough for them." U-boats, he said, have shifted their activity to other sectors.

Other naval developments of interest revealed at the conference were (1) the ship-building program is ahead of schedule in all categories; (2) naval air officers will be promoted faster than others to "completely answer" criticism that the air arm of the navy has not been getting a good break in important high command decisions; (3) the attack on the Solomons was the "largest amphibious operation we ever undertook" and was successful in obtaining all immediate objectives; (4) in the Aleutian islands, the record "speaks for itself." (Here Secretary Knox was no doubt referring to the record of 19 enemy ships sunk or damaged since the Japs seized the westernmost tip of the island chain.)

MEXICAN WAR CHIEF:
Cardenas Gets Job

Mexico's increased participation in the war effort was emphasized when President Manuel Avila Camacho appointed his predecessor in the presidency, Gen. Lazaro Cardenas, as minister of national defense.

The appointment of Cardenas, who succeeds Gen. Pablo Valenzuela, was looked upon as the initial move toward expansion of the army, navy and air force. Early reports predicted that the navy as well as the army and air force, would be put under the defense ministry, thus making him second in command.

GEN. LAZARO CARDENAS
Minister of National Defense.

In his annual message to congress, President Camacho declared that Mexico is in the war until "a peace worthy of our living it" has been achieved. He added that Mexico will not make a separate armistice or peace.

DRAFT:
Puzzle

Selective Service Director Brig. Gen. Lewis Hershey had informed state draft officials to regulate quotas to individual boards so that married men would not be drafted in one locality before those in another. Then came the next problem: When would married men be called? When would it be necessary to take youths of 18 and 19 years of age into the army?

Efforts were being made to force a congressional vote on the latter issue before the November elections but most observers thought this unlikely. That such a vote would come soon after these elections appeared certain however.

Chairman Andrew Jackson May (Dem., Ky.) of the house military affairs committee declared that when and if married men with children are called the war would be about 18 months older, or they might not be taken at all." He released figures which he said were furnished by the national selective service headquarters indicating a nine million man pool available in advance of drafting registrants with dependent wives and children.

FUEL OIL:
To Be Rationed

Fears of midwest petroleum distributors were realized when Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production board, confirmed reports that fuel oil will be rationed and that rationing may be imposed upon some midwestern states as well as the East.

Rationing would be extended to the Midwest in order to make additional railroad tank cars available to supply the eastern market.

At his press conference President Roosevelt mentioned 25 per cent as the likely amount of curtailment in some areas. Those areas were not specified.

Initial reports indicated that a basic ration would permit heating to an average temperature of approximately 68 degrees, with additional rations to be issued on the basis of need. Full details of the plan will be ironed out by WPB officials.

CAPITOL HILL
By LEON HENDERSON
Head of Office of Price Administration.

Senator Barkley and Speaker Rayburn both came as congressmen with the Wilson administration in 1912—Recently they jovially debated rank. Barkley, because "B" is alphabetically higher than "R," was named to committee memberships ahead of Rayburn. But Sam claims precedence now because if he should die the President would attend his funeral, but would not be obligated to do so if Alben passed on . . .

Senator Barkley, as perpetual keynoter, claims to be an authority on key words—At the 1932 Chicago Democratic convention he says it was "beer"—In Philadelphia, 1936, it was "New Deal"—At Chicago again in 1940 it was "Roosevelt" . . .

Our tomorrows look brighter because of a growing group of young Southern congressmen, such as Hale Boggs, Al Gore, Wilbur Mills, and Mike Monroney, to mention only a handful . . .

I wonder if the American public will ever realize the debt they owe to Senator Prentiss Brown of Michigan.

WASHINGTON VIGNETTE

Recently Don Nelson and I acknowledged tribute to Scotch grandmothers for their training in discipline—Sidney Weinberg thought we overdid it—In a bridge game later, when Sidney set me two tricks, he gleed, "Your Scotch grandmother is no help in bridge against a Brooklyn ward leader like my dad was."

I interview my share of rubber substitute inventors, as do all WPB members, because I believe in miracles—I ought to, I married one. But one long haired scientist took the cake: "These other fellows make synthetic, Mr. Henderson, my process makes REAL rubber" . . .

One of my rationing staff heard complaints daily for two weeks from traveling business men — "Two weeks with the traveling salesmen," he reported, "and not a single new risque joke" . . .

The solution of our transportation problem requires a miracle-worker, and Joe Eastman is the guy who can do it.

THINGS I NEVER KNEW TILL NOW

That according to the squawks there are more landlords than tenants—it couldn't be . . . That there really are a high percentage of statesmen in congress . . . That it's amazing what you can get for nothing nowadays—It would cost us millions to get the services that our rationing boards are giving us for nothing and it wouldn't be as good . . . That a staff of 30,000 can get one into disproportionately more trouble than a staff of ten . . . That Claude Wickard is really a top-notch corn-hog producer . . . That the average height of three of my deputies is 6 feet 5 inches—if they were laid end to end the lawyers say a lot of people would cheer—and the deputies say that if all the lawyers were laid end to end they'd reach no conclusion . . . How fast a $1 a year man can become a temporary bureaucrat . . That Maria Alencastro at the Brazilian embassy would be a star on any radio program . . . That Senate Sec. Ed Halsey was such a peacemaker, pacemaker, and life saver . . . That 16 per cent of the people had no Gallup opinion on OPA—since it sometimes seems like everyone has written to me—and the mail was 77 per cent favorable like Gallup indicates either, some days.

THOUGHTS WHILE STROLLING ON CONN. AVE. AT MIDNIGHT

What this country needs is a good five-cent nickel . . . I wonder where I can get a good second-hand tire for Lube . . . I wonder whether our rent division can keep me from being dispossessed . . . It's good to see Marvin McIntyre with so much zing again . . . I expect Sidney Hillman to zing again. Wouldn't it be fun if Harold Ickes was in the senate . . . If OPA can only get by the canning season and the elections . . . Wait till our new pursuit job ties in with the Zero . . . Sure was funny about the male tenant from Pittsburgh who reported on Form CCD-2 that he "shared a bathtub with his landlady" . . . I wonder what ever became of the NRA visitors who wanted a floor under prices . . . It isn't true that Don Nelson and General Somervell phfft—they've phfft, phfft, phfft—and always made up. . . . Big men . . . I wonder if the Mayos will check up on Charlie Michaelson's no-trump play while he's there . . . I miss Pat Boland . . . Dick Lansburgh . . . General Johnson . . . What some of these wage debates need is Jerry Frank and Sumner Pike . . . I wonder where the Peoria Chamber of Commerce found my Australian hat—I gave it to Sir Clive Baillieu and I dared him to wear it . . . Who trained victory-gardener Leon, Junior, age four, to ask me not to ration seeds . . . My candidate for the United Nations beauty contest, Mrs. Soong.

'Mechanical' Chess Player

One of the greatest chess players was Kempelen's Mechanical Man, a midget who, disguised as an automaton, toured Europe during the late 18th century and defeated all leading players of the time, says Collier's. He and his partner Kempelen were able to fool the public because he was very small and legless, played with mechanical movements and wore a costume having little doors that, when opened, revealed only turning wheels.

We Can All Be EXPERT BUYERS

- In bringing us buying information, as to prices that are being asked for what we intend to buy, and as to the quality we can expect, the advertising columns of this newspaper perform a worth while service which saves us many dollars a year.
- It is a good habit to form, the habit of consulting the advertisements every time we make a purchase, though we have already decided just what we want and where we are going to buy it. It gives us the most priceless feeling in the world: the feeling of being adequately prepared.
- When we go into a store, prepared beforehand with knowledge of what is offered and at what price, we go as an expert buyer, filled with self-confidence. It is a pleasant feeling to have, the feeling of adequacy. Most of the unhappiness in the world can be traced to a lack of this feeling. Thus advertising shows another of its manifold facets—shows itself as an aid toward making all our business relationships more secure and pleasant.

THAT'S quite something in murder mysteries that 20th Century-Fox is cooking up, with Bryan Fox in charge. Instead of having only one famous sleuth, it's going to have practically all of them! Philo Vance leads off, but when he gets stuck he's aided by Michael Shane, the Falcon, Bulldog Drummond and various others. They can't borrow William Powell to be the Thin Man, so they'll just use his voice. George Sanders will play the Falcon. And Mr. Moto, the Japanese sleuth, will participate from an internment camp.

Katharine Cornell, one of the first ladies of the stage, has at last agreed to appear in a motion picture. Producers have been imploring her to do so for years; now she's consented. You'll see her in "Stage Door Canteen," the profits of which will go to service organizations. It will be produced in cooperation with the American Theater Wing. Katharine Hepburn, Gertrude Lawrence, Helen Hayes, Ray Bolger, Kay Kyser and Edgar Bergen will also participate; all will appear as themselves, working as they do at the Canteen.

Harry Sherman's "Lost Canyon," a Bill Boyd picture, ran into a snag the other day. There are scenes requiring cowboys to spend some time in a barn, amid about 100 bales of alfalfa. All was set, when the sneezing ruined the dialogue; seems some of the cowboys were alergic to alfalfa, and it was a case of abandoning either it or the cowboys. So a hurry call for non-hayfeverish cowboys was sent out.

Economy Accent . . . Delicious Chicken Croquettes

(See Recipes Below.)

Budget Stretchers

What can I serve as a main course that won't take too many dishes? What can I give my large family that isn't too expensive? These are the two queries often asked by my readers. The answer to both questions is simple—a casserole. Easy to make, easy to serve, economical too, casseroles solve the main dish problem almost perfectly.

Almost? Yes, I say almost advisedly, because if the family ever becomes aware of your ulterior motives in serving casseroles, their interest in them becomes less, less and finally non-existent.

Make your casserole so delectable and so distinctive in flavor and no one will ever realize that it's packed with economy and you have a one-dish meal that's perfection plus.

Never overwork the casserole by trying to use up all the leftovers lining refrigerator and pantry shelves. Never swamp the flavors of the food so you strike a false note and confuse the sense of taste. Use good food and season with discrimination. Your result will be a real success.

Here are some new ideas I've compiled for you. Most of them of the food you have used often enough so they're old favorites, but in new dress! You'll like:

Rice and Chicken Casserole.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 cups rice
2 cups milk
1½ tablespoons butter
2 eggs
2½ cups diced, cooked chicken

Boil rice in salted water until tender. Stir in butter, milk and eggs. Put a layer of this into a casserole, then chicken, more rice, etc. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven until well browned.

Every now and then you've heard me talk about food affinities. Here's another I'd like to add to the list:

Lamb and Lima Bean Pie.
(Serves 6)

2 pounds lamb neck, shanks or shoulder
1 pound dry lima beans
Salt, pepper
Celery salt

Soak lima beans overnight. Drain and place in a heavy kettle. Have lamb cut in 2-inch pieces. Add to beans, season and cover with water. Transfer to casserole and top with pimiento biscuit rings and bake in a moderately hot oven 20 to 25 minutes.

To make pimiento biscuit rings: add ⅓ cup coarsely chopped pimiento to baking powder biscuit recipe.

You'll get your carbohydrates, proteins along with vitamins and minerals in this economical, hunger-satisfying dish good for family dinner or informal buffet entertaining:

American Goulash.
(Serves 6)

½-pound package macaroni
1½ pounds hamburger
1 large onion, chopped
1 tablespoon fat
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper
3 cups tomatoes
1 can tomato soup
Buttered crumbs

Cook macaroni in boiling, salted water, about 20 minutes, or until tender. Drain. Brown meat and onions in fat. Add macaroni, seasonings, tomatoes and soup. Pour into greased baking dish and sprinkle with buttered crumbs. Bake 30 minutes in a moderate (350-degree) oven.

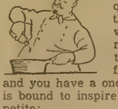
An economy meat cut that is getting itself talked about plenty because of its simply wonderful flavor is this:

Ribs of Beef With Vegetables.
(Serves 6)

3½ pounds of short ribs
1 large onion, sliced
2 cups tomatoes
Salt, pepper
6 onions
6 potatoes
3 parsnips

Season short ribs with salt and pepper. Put in skillet with fat and brown quickly. Place in an iron skillet or roasting pan and add onions and tomatoes. Let bake in a moderate oven for 1¼ hours, tightly covered. Add whole carrots which have been scraped, parsnips, peeled, and potatoes peeled but left whole. Cook another hour or until vegetables are tender. Add boiling water if necessary during the last hour of cooking.

Second day service of chicken is beautifully simplified if you do up the bird in crusty cylindrical croquettes, and dish them up together with golden carrot strips and either canned or frozen asparagus and you have a one-plate meal that is bound to inspire the family's appetite:



Chicken Croquettes.
(Makes 10 croquettes)

2 cups cooked, ground chicken
1 cup thick white sauce
2 teaspoons chopped parsley
Flour
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 tablespoon milk
3 cups oven-popped rice cereal
Salt, pepper

Prepare white sauce using ½ cup chicken stock and ½ cup milk. Add to chicken and parsley and chill thoroughly. Shape into pyramids or cylinders. Roll cereal to fine crumbs. Dip croquettes first in the flour, then in egg (to which milk has been added) and in rolled crumbs. Fry in deep, hot fat (365 degrees) for 2 to 5 minutes or until golden brown.

A crispy, citrus salad goes well with casserole dishes. Suggestion of the week which will take top honors in the hall of fame is this one made with grapefruit, oranges and cranberries for color. Its dressing is unusual in that it combines honey with mayonnaise, and cranberries.

Grapefruit and Cranberry Salad.
(Serves 4)

1 large grapefruit
2 large oranges
Lettuce
½ cup ground, raw cranberries
2 tablespoons honey
⅓ cup mayonnaise

Peel and section oranges and grapefruit. Arrange alternately on lettuce. Mix cranberries with honey. Let stand ½ hour. Combine with mayonnaise. Serve over salad.

Lynn Says:

Store Food Wisely: There are no "Finders Keepers" but you may be the "Loser Weeper" if you do not store those vegetables properly.

Scientific experiments show that lettuce may lose 40 per cent of its vitamin C if kept at room temperature. Refrigerator recommended!

Spinach, left standing on pantry shelf, will be drained of its vitamin C by about one-third. Canned string beans lose about one-third of their vitamin C if they stand in a bowl at room temperature for six hours.

Short cooking time is recommended, too. Cabbage, for instance, loses 69 per cent of the elusive vitamin C and 72 per cent of its calcium and 50 per cent of its other minerals when these valuable nutrients go up in steam.

U. S. GENERAL IN ACTION

Maj. Gen. Charles L. Scott, U. S. tank expert just back from Libya, is not talking about it in his lectures to American armored forces, but he did more than almost anyone to stem the onrush of Von Rommel's tanks when they broke through the British lines and started their mad dash to Alexandria.

General Scott was in Egypt helping out with the American tanks which had been sent to the British. And he happened to be in the thick of it during that part of Rommel's attack when the British seemed most disorganized.

So Scott, though an American, jumped into the battle, actually took over temporary command, and organized a counter-attack. All the details can't be told yet, but when they are it will be a great story.

WHY GIRLS LEAVE WASHINGTON

Many young girls who left home to come to Washington are now leaving Washington to go home. They thought it would be thrilling to work in the capital in wartime, but they are sadly disillusioned.

Clerks and junior stenographers simply don't make enough money to live on. A labor department survey indicates that a single person must earn $1,470 a year to live in Washington, at present rent and food costs. Yet there are two Civil Service ratings below that figure—$1,260 and $1,440, for clerical and stenographic jobs.

Young girls like Washington at first. It's something to write home about—living right in sight of the great Capitol dome, passing in front of the White House every day.

But the thrill wears off when the boss works them 12 hours a day in a war office, when their feet get tired standing in crowded buses, and when they can't sleep comfortably four in a room.

Norah Booth personnel expert in OPA, knows these cases by the score. A girl from Nashville, Tenn., came to Washington last June, thrilled to the eyebrows. Now she is leaving.

"I don't know what's the matter with me," she told Miss Booth. "I'm all jumpy. I guess you call it nerves. It was fun being here at first, but you have to work so hard and pay so much for a room! I'm tired of worrying whether I'll have enough money next week for a new pair of stockings. I'm going home!"

HOW TO WRITE TO SOLDIERS

The army is far from satisfied with the way its V-mail (photo letter) service to troops overseas is going. Despite the big advantages of V-mail in the speed and transmission as well as guarantee against loss, the general public hasn't taken to it.

This is partly due to a misunderstanding of the technique of the service and partly to the fact that V-mail blanks have been available only at larger post offices. However, the army is planning to extend the service soon to every post office and rural route in the country. At the same time, an educational program will be launched.

Actually, it is much simpler to send a letter by V-mail than the regular way, since you don't have to bother with envelope or stamps. All you do is write your message, with your address and that of the receiver, on a blank form, and fold and seal it. The sealed form goes to a port of embarkation, where it is put through a machine and photographed on a small micro-film roll.

Later the roll is printed and developed in a reproducing station at its overseas destination. The photo-letter is then placed in an envelope and delivered. Since the filming and developing are performed mechanically in the dark, senders of V-mail are assured absolute privacy.

Also, they get faster delivery. The army gives priority to V-mail because of a one-third saving in cargo space. The army postal service estimates that 22 sacks of V-mail are equal to 37 sacks of regular mail. However, the chief consideration to senders is that V-mail is guaranteed against loss. The original V-form is preserved for refilming, in case a mail cargo is lost at sea.

NEW EFFECTIVE HAY FEVER RELIEF

Hay fever, which annually causes more sneezes, more inflamed noses and more red, streaming eyes than any other scourge, may have its final big fling this September, all because a Pennsylvania electrical engineer was served a dish of corn meal mush which was entirely too salty.

The engineer, sneezing, and with all other hay fever manifestations, stopped at a hotel where he was served a dish of mush which he considered sending back as it was much too salty. Finally he ate it, however; the hay fever attack lessened, ultimately ceased. Next day he had three meals, all oversalted, and experienced his most comfortable time in years in the "hay fever season."

His analytical mind quickly grasped the possibility that the saline substance in his food was responsible for his relief.

About this time, Dr. E. E. Selleck, a graduate of Columbia University, met the engineer, made notes, and when he returned to his home, began experiments. Today Dr. Selleck declares he has found a certain means of relief for hay fever and is supported in his contention by other medical experts, and a nationally known chemical manufacturing concern, the Hollings-Smith Company, at Orangeburg, New York, has taken over making the remedy, which is called Nakamo Bell.

Describing the experiments, Dr. Selleck said, "After I was sure I had found a means of quickly relieving hay fever through the chloride group, I tested it in the most practical way I knew. I held a three day clinic, to which many hay fever sufferers responded, from ages ranging from 10 to 60 years. Each person was given two tablets with a little water. Some relief came to all within ten minutes. Reports on these cases during the ensuing weeks showed practically a complete cessation of symptoms."

F. F. A. MEMBERS BUY FERTILIZER

Believing that cooperation play a large part in a good sound farming program twenty four members of the Isabella community bought 75 tons of fertilizer cooperatively this year.

By comparing prices with other popular fertilizers it was found that the savings per ton of mixed goods such as 4-10-7, 6-8-4, etc; ranged from $6.00 to $10 Savings on nitrate of soda, muriate of potash, and superphosphate ranged from $3.00 to $6.00 per ton.

This system of buying fertilizer cooperatively began three years ago in an evening school taught by J. H. Camp, teacher of Vocational Agriculture at Isabella. New members have been added each year.

In addition to buying fertilizer cooperatively evning school and F. F. A. members have bought seed oats, chicken feed, winter legums seed, inoculation, and some crop seed.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

We just wonder if some bright [illegible] girl at C. C. H. S. and all the other county schools, for that matter wouldn't like to write up the school [illegible] and the sports each week for [illegible] paper. Any student who is interested in this kind of work and training [illegible] get in touch with Folks & Things at [illegible] Chilton County News and lets [illegible] we can't give the people all of [illegible] school news this year and get the [illegible] more interested in the schools [illegible] county.

[illegible] owe Scoutmaster Fred Buckelew an apology. Last week in one of our paragraphs we told of the plans of the Clanton Scout Troop and officials for the coming year and failed to mention [illegible] Fred is very much Scoutmaster [illegible] takes his work seriously. He is doing a fine job of teaching the boys [illegible] troop Scouting. In fact Fred is [illegible] doggone good scout himself.

Why is it that man thinks shaving such wonderful deed? Before a man shaves he announces to his wife and all that he is going to shave. After he finishes he wants to know just how he looks and if he did a good job of it. Have you ever known a man who didn't? The fact that he has performed the same job thousands of times doesn't seem to change things at all.

Doc's brother, Leo Levine, who spent several weeks here last summer and made lots and lots of friends has been promoted to Corporal. Leo is stationed at Albuquerque, New Mexico. Doc says he likes the Army life fine and may make it a career.

[illegible] tice of the Peace T. J. Bryan Saturday seems to have hit the Jack[illegible] He married three couples within the space of one hour Saturday morning. Two of the boys were brothers [illegible] according to Mr. Bryan two of them were soldiers.

A lady called us last Thursday morning to find out if a pocket-book with [illegible] in it had been turned in to the [illegible] ffice. It hadn't. But we were just thinking about this time of the month what dangerous place a weekly newspaper office was for a pocket[illegible] with money in it to be turned in.

[illegible] day last week Deputy Sheriff [illegible] Murrah drove with one of his helpers to Birmingham for a load of poduce or the like in his pick-up truck. Now upon finishing his business Mr. Murrah was to come on back to Clanton and the truck was to go a different route. Well that is exactly what he did, he caught a ride and come on home. That night late Eunice had to catch a bus and go to Birmingham to carry the key to the pick-up Mr. Murrah had brought the key on home with him and the truck couldn't be moved until the driver could get the key.

She was just a little girl, and pretty too, she was at Kemps Dry Goods Store buying dress material. She had made the money herself while here on her vacation visiting her grandmother. As grandmothers always do, she was letting the little girl pick her own colors and count out her own pennies to pay the lad.y But this was the end of the vacation and 6 year old Clara Mae Howze, of Dadeville was buying her two dresses with her own money that she had earned picking cotton while visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Mattie Jones.

What's this about Birmingham claiming that she has the youngest Barber in the state? Why, that 17 year old Barber is a veteran compared to Billy Bean, son of Dick Bean, who runs the Excange Barber Shop, Billy has been Barbering all summer and has just reached the ripe old age of 15 years. Billy can hold his own along with any of the old-timers too. We're writing those folks in Birmingham to draw in their neck before they stick it out too far. When younger and better barbers are grown, or reared, or what ever barbers do, Clanton will do it.

Mrs.Mattie Williams is slowly improving after being confined to her bed for the past eight weeks under the care of Dr. Wilkerson.

Montgomery—A number of openings are available in state employment to [illegible] students" who, applying to the State Personell Department in pairs [illegible] alternate working for the state three months and attending the University of Alabama, Auburn or Montevallo the next quarter. Accountant statistical, clerical, stenographic and engineering aide positions are examples of how students can earn as well as learn.

Pilot Governor Visits Local Club

The Clanton Pilot Club was honored to have Louise Lahan, Governor of District 2, as guest speaker on Tuesday evening, September 8th, when the Club met in the home of Sophia Jones. Klee Hix and Kathleen Wood were also visitors from the Birmingham Pilot Club.

The Club was called to order by Ruth Waters, President, after which America was sung, roll call was answered and minutes were read and approved. A short business discussion followed.

Louise Lahan gave a very inspiring talk on "The Part Pilots are playing and will play in the present World Conflict". Klee and Kathleen expressed their pleasure in being present.

For the benefit of the District Governor, Bo Searcy gave a brief summary of the year's activities of the Clanton Pilot Club. Mary Will Browder discussed plans for making surgical dressings in Clanton in the near future. The Pilot Club will assist in making these bandages.

During the social half-hour, Sara Madge Mullins gave several vocal selections, accompanied at the piano by her mother, Mrs. Reed Mullins, who is a former Pilot. After group singing, the club adjourned.

COTTON GINNING REPORT

Census report shows that 108 bales of cotton were ginned in Chilton County from the crop of 1942 prior to September 1, as compared with 71 bales for the crop of 1941.

1600 Peanut Pickers Allotted S. E. States

A recent report by the Georgia-Florida-Alabama Peanut Association shows that approximately half of the 1600 peanut pickers, allotted to peanut growers in five southeastern states to harvest the bumper crop, have already been distributed in critical areas and applications are coming in daily for the other 800.

The pickers were made available through the Commodity Credit Corporation and are being distributed on the basis of need by the GFA. The Association, with home office in Camilla, Ga., states that out of the 1600 pickers allotted, 1300 are already placed with designated agencies in cities and towns in the Southeast.

A RESOLUTION

On Saturday morning, September 12, 1942, while on his way to his office and another day of usefulness, in a career rich with achievment, Virgil J. Elmore was accidentally killed. According to accounts, his death was the direct result of the failure of the driver of a motor vehicle traveling an intersecting street to observe and obey an ordinary safety device, stop at a "stop sign" at a street intersection, and drive headlong into and against the automobile in which Mr. Elmore was traveling at the same time with such force as to cause his immediate death. He was a member of the Highlands Methodist Church and of this Board of Stewards since January of this year. He had recently moved to this city from his home city of Clanton, Alabama where he was extensively known for his fine character, a good neighbor and citizen and the outstanding official and member of the Methodist church of that city. Fifty-four years of age he was in the prime of a busy and useful life. The founder and owner of the Elmore chain of stores over the states of Alabama and Mississippi, his life was marked by a business success that continued to grow but in it the finer things of life were not forgotten nor neglected and he was a true and loyal member of his church. The church, the community and the state are the poorer by this untimely death.

Therefore be it resolved by the Board of Stewards of the Highlands Methodist Church as follows:

That in the death of Virgil J. Elmore this Board has lost a valuable and valued member and the Church a splendid type of its christian manhood; this city and the state has lost a man of sterling character whose life was marked with the virtues of a christian gentleman, a generous and civic minded citizen.

That we deeply regret his untimely death and extend to the bereaved widow and children our deepest sympathy.

That these resolutions be spread on the minutes as a memorial and a copy be mailed to the bereaved family as a token of our sympathetic solicitude for them in this their bereavment, and a copy be mailed to the Chilton County News, a newspaper published in his home town of Clanton.

J. D. McArthur,
Chairman Resolutions Committee
Board of Stewards,
Highland Methodist Church,
Birmingham, Ala.

The body of a new-born baby was found on the L&N right-of-way Sunday [illegible] just north of Mt. Creek. Investigators also stated that positive identification could not be determined but it was thought to be a white baby.

Care Of Plants Now Mean Better Strawberries

By: Lyle Brown, Ext. Horticulturist

If the weather is good or bad during the harvest season, the strawberry fields where the matted rows have been thinned the previous fall will come through in the best shape. During good years the crop will be large and good side quality berries will be those for which good prices will be paid, and if a dry season is encountered the crop from unthinned fields will be unusually poor. Every experienced grower knows that it takes more labor to pick these small berries, that they will not yield up to those of larger [illegible] nor is there always a market for them.

Prices promise to be good with the Government's purchase program on for processed berries and growers should certainly make every effort to get good production. Thinning plants in the matted rows in the fall will, according to experiments, give big increases in yields, increase the No. 1 berries and the profits per acre. Growers who thinned last year were well pleased with results.

Thinning of matted rows should be done when it is time to apply fall fertilizer. The first of October is about the correct time for Chilton County. Fruit bud formation takes place in the fall and winter and it is highly important to put on this fall top dressing to promote bud development for next spring's crop. The usual need is for about 400 to 600 pounds of a 6-8-4 or 4-12-4 per acre.

The method used in thinning these plants may differ as there is yet no established practice. Some may find it desirable to run a "scooter" furrow down the center of the bed and rake off the excess plants with a garden rake or potato fork. Others may use scratchers of various kinds or hoe to block out the plants. The edges of the rows should be cut off with a coulter or some other implement. Two thin strips along each side of the center of the row will be the result of most of these methods. Most any method will seem rather rough treatment, but it will have to be to make the practice economical. The plants will recover and develop rapidly.

Fertilizer should be broadcast over the top and sides of the row after thinning, and worked lightly into the soil.

IN APPRECIATION

In the untimely death of Mr. V. Elmore, Chilton County and the State of Alabama have sustained a loss that can never be replaced. He was a true friend to all, A faithful and loyal supporter of the Church, a staunch citizen of Our County, a devoted and loving husband and father, and a devout and active Christian gentleman in the full sense of the word.

For Twenty-two years he was an active member of Clanton Methodist Church; He stood loyally by every pastor that served the church during these years. He was always glad to converse with his pastor concerning church problems. He was present in the Clanton Methodist Church the Sunday before his death. Cheerful and happy. He and his family took communion at the altar on that day The next Sunday his body was laid to rest in the beautiful Elmwood Cemetery to await the resurrection the just when the dead in Christ shall rise first. To know him was to love him To associate with him an inspiration to go forth to higher and better things

My prayers and sympathy are with the faithful companion and the lovely children in these hours of their sorrow.

Sincerely T. C. Casaday.

COUNTY TEACHERS INSTITUTE MEETS

The Institute for White Teachers met in the gymnasium of Chilton Co. High School on Monday September 14, with County S[illegible] Roscoe Maddox as [illegible]

Music was furnished by Chilton County High School Band [illegible] end T. C. Casaday of the Clanton Methodist Church conducted devotions.

The theme of the institute was "Chilton County Schools in Time of War." Mr. J. R. Oglesby spoke on the vital importance of collecting all scrap iron and rubber. Dr. Mary Walton, County Health Officer, called attention to the large number of men rejected as unfit for military service and said that most of these physical defects could have been avoided. The health department through its examination of school children locates defects, but others have the responsibility of correcting them. Miss Mattie Joe Barber, home demonstration agent, spoke on the importance of good food and emphasized that people in the months ahead must grow and raise more of their food. Judge L. H. Reynolds pleaded with the teachers to work the school children to buy savings stamps and bonds. The habit of thrift is one of the best things any child can learn he said.

Dr. W. L. Spencer of the State Department of Education spoke on the instructional part of the school program. Despite criticism of the schools the fighting man of today is bigger, healthier, better trained and better educated than that of 1919. In 1919 only 4% of our soldiers were high school graduates. Today over 20 per cent are high school graduates. The great need today is for men with special training in such fields as radio, auto-mechanics, medicine, and aviation. Because such specialized training is expensive there is great need for the passage of the bill S. 1313 now before Congress providing federal aid for education.

In the afternoon session the teachers voted unanimously one hundred per cent membership in the Chilton Co. Teachers Association, the Alabama Education Association, and the National Education Association. This is the sixth consecutive year the teachers of Chilton County have so voted.

Dogs of War

Long a figure of speech, "dogs of war" has a real meaning, for Uncle Sam is drafting a K-9 corps for war duty. The army has called for two hundred dogs to be trained as the nucleus of a much larger corps, which will be used to guard food depots and other war establishments, accompanied, of course, by the usual human sentries.

Why a dog, you may ask, if there is already a sentry on the job? Well, a saboteur, for instance, might easily succeed in hiding himself from the human sentry in an isolated spot. But he would have a more difficult time fooling the keen sense of smell possessed by a dog.

Dogs for Defense, Inc., is the organization recruiting dogs for Uncle Sam. Rigid requirements are laid down for canine candidates for the corps. Such dogs as Dalmatians, Dobermanns, Afghans and German or Belgian shepherds are the ideal types.

These photos show you the training of the first few dogs to be drafted for service in this war. Photos were made in New Jersey, where soldiers from Fort Hancock gave them their first taste of army life.

In other countries dogs have been used in war for years. Russia has an army of 50,000 dogs; Germany is believed to have a canine corps numbering 100,000; France used to have a big dog army, employing dogs even for hauling light guns.

At left, "Hans" learns to look where the finger points. If he misses anything with his eyes his nose will pick it up.

Victory Parade

ON PARADE . . . The dogs are exercised and walked many times over the "beat" they are expected to patrol, as shown in the picture above. They learn that men in uniform have a right to be on this "beat," but others have not. So when on night duty the dogs are right on their toes for unauthorized prowlers.

Right: An Afghan and a German shepherd are learning to stand fast under fire here. The soldiers blaze away with their pistols while the dogs are kept in leash.

ROOKIE SQUAD . . . A captain and three military policemen are shown with four canine recruits. The dog second from the right is unfamiliar to most Americans. It is an Afghan, a real aristocrat of dogdom.

by GRANTLAND RICE

NANA WNU Service

"WAR," as the late William Tecumseh Sherman said, "is hell." At least, it is around 97 per cent hell. But here and there it also contributes something on the better side.

In the course of a recent transcontinental trip I've discovered one helpful factor from more than a dozen football coaches. Headed by Curly Lambeau of the Green Bay Packers, they all tell me their squads have reported in far better physical shape and all have a much keener spirit than football ever has known before.

Grantland Rice

"In the first place," Curly says, "most of them know they will be in war service soon. Most of these men are married, with kids to look after. But in the grim game ahead of us they are all looking forward to doing their full share.

"In the second place, they all have more than a few pals now in some active branch of war service. They know the sacrifices these men have had to make. They know the harder row they have had to face. And so their pride has made them stick closer to simpler living and the way of life that would leave them ready when needed.

Then and Now

"I've had linemen," Curly says, "who would report at 250 pounds. These men now come in at 230 or 225. They are ready to go. Others who were from 10 to 20 pounds overweight in other seasons, reported at about the same weight they knew after a hard year last winter.

"Practically all of these men have been keeping in shape for months. Maybe that isn't much to ask, but at least it is something. It may be more than many others are doing who haven't been called.

"This is all a new sign of the times," Lambeau continued. "It means we are going to have from now on a far better conditioned set of men. It means that millions of us realize the old, soft days are over. It means a big jump in national fitness. And I think we've needed this lesson.

"Life, as we knew it, had been pleasant. But has it been physically helpful? Haven't we had too many of our people who led soft lives, physically, who took poor care of their bodies? Who drank too much? Who ate too much? Who took little exercise? And so died well before their due time? I think so. So do most of the coaches and trainers who have seen men report from 20 to 40 pounds above the weight they should carry. And this goes for almost every part of our people.

A New Age

"With the expected exceptions," Curly carried on, "we are coming into a new physical age for the young and the middle aged—even for those past 60.

"They all read about and know about the rigorous training of the Commandos, the Naval Cadets, the Parachutists, the marines, the soldiers and sailors.

"Here we have a war that really means the survival of the fittest. Fittest, of course, means brain and spirit, as well as body. But please don't forget the big part that physical fitness plays in stamina and endurance, especially.

"This is why I still insist this country needs all the competitive sport it can get. And that is why I know that football plays, and can play, a big part in this program.

"Football means physical fitness, body contact, alertness, spirit, sacrifice, team play, and the ability to carry on when you are either hurt or almost out."

True Condition

Every football coach I've met feels the same way about the situation. I've seen any number of young college stars report for training when they were in no condition for a pillow fight.

But it takes no great amount of brains for them to see they are facing a new age—a different world. Before too long they will be flying above strange seas, using the bayonet, handling a tank, or swimming in oil-fired water. Their best chance against the odds is to be trained and fit for what they have to face.

What will happen to sports in another year is another guess. It may move into a blackout.

Baseball Umpires

But the main idea is to get from hard, competitive sport all we can at the moment, so that other millions called at least will be partially ready for the job ahead. I believe the majority of those in sport have this understanding. Those who haven't can be listed with "the beautiful—and the damned."

There has been a tradition in baseball that aggressive teams are those which attack the umpires. This tradition is all wrong.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—The Boilermakers' union of Oakland now admits women to full fraternal membership. It wasn't our fault, but our timing was bad in heading into this war, this observation being not altogether a non sequitur. There's a news paragraph today about a pretty chorus girl working in a defense factory. She's a slender, pretty little thing, and when you contrast her with the chorus girls of other days, you realize that our entrance cue for a war was back in the time of Billy Watson's "Beef Trust," when every girl on the stage looked as if she could shoot dice with anvils. That was the time to open the Boilermakers' union to the ladies—not now, when no girl is happy unless she has the running gear of a katydid.

Women With Nice Sense of Rhythm Fit in War Work

The chorus girl is Dora Salvina, 22, blonde, running a big "clicker" machine for I. Spiewak & Sons, North Bergen, N. J. She juggles 24 dies and shifts a lot of levers, for a full eight-hour stretch, bringing through laskinlamb suits for army and navy pilots and bombardiers. She recently received the Award of Merit of the Laskinlamb institute for turning out 50 flying suits in one day, a record to date for any one person.

Miss Salvina was decorating the front line of "Crazy With the Heat" not so long ago, and before that she was in the World's fair patriotic spectacle, 'American Jubilee." With the war on, she sidestepped USO engagements and found her factory job, figuring flying suits were more important than entertainment. Chorus girls are traditionally realistic and she says she works for "pay and patriotism."

There is a cadence in machine operations in which the conditioned rhythms of music and dancing would fit nicely. This no doubt was one of Dora's assets in winning the production award. She's good box-office for I. Spiewak & Sons. They recently doubled their production.

◆

IN THE Bible phrase, one would have to go to and fro on the earth to find a team like Henry J. Kaiser, the demon ship-builder, and Howard R. Hughes, the flier, tool-maker, airplane - designer and picture-producer. They get together to get those 500 cargo planes out of the suspense file and over to the war front. They indicate a short-cut to action.

Two Go-Getters Ready to Fly Over Sea of Red Tape

At the age of 18, young Mr. Hughes, now 37, inherited $17,000,000, along with the Hughes Tool company of Houston, Texas. His money took wings, in the form of his first moving picture, "Hell's Angels," a World war aviation opus. But it landed with a net increment of $3,000,000 and ever since he has been this country's most interesting blend of romance and business.

He kept right on with his tool-making, but in July, 1938, he hightailed it around the world in a plane in less than four days. His uncle, Rupert Hughes, the novelist, first lured him to Hollywood, where he made more pictures, taking time out to build his own plane plant and duplicate many of the hazardous feats of the movie fliers. After his world flight, the Federated Advertising club of Chicago voted him fourth in its list of the 11 outstanding men of the year.

Born and brought up in Houston, he attended the fashionable Fessenden school of Boston, the Thatcher school of Ojai, Calif., and Rice institute of Houston. Yes, he has no diplomas. Craving action on something or other, he always walked out on school before they could tap him for Class day.

He is six feet, three, loose-geared and lanky, with dark, stringy hair, and he is an absent-minded dresser who never worries about the crease in his pants. He has the biggest yacht on the Pacific coast—or did have—but he gets his big thrill out of pitching horseshoes. Hollywood gossip columnists have had quite a romp, getting him engaged to this actress or that, but he is still unmarried.

We noted here recently Donald Roebling, up to his knees in folding money, who hid out in the Florida swamps for seven years and brought through the marvelous amphibian tank for the marines. His grandfather built the Brooklyn bridge and his father is a builder and inventor. Mr. Hughes' forbears were the same kind of people. His father's revolutionary pipe drill built the family fortune. There's a mother lode of this kind of genius in America and naturally it's going to yield cargo planes, or anything else needed to win this war.

Heap High the Cookie Jar!
(See Recipes Below.)

That Sweet Tooth

"Mom, may we have some cookies, please?"

That question asked in a childish voice with real pleading is going to be as daily as the sunrise and sunset these days as your younger members of the family feel the snap of fall in the air. School days with their demand on youthful energies will perk up summer's lagging appetite too!

Very few of you can say "no" to a request for cookies. Far from spoiling the appetite for dinner, a cookie or two with a glass of milk will help the child get gracefully through the late afternoon hours until dinner time.

Keeping the cookie jar full may have been your major problem in former years. This year it will be that plus making cookies with a ration of sugar. But you'll do it, I know, and these recipes will help you:

Oatmeal Crispies.
(Makes 4 dozen)

- 1 cup shortening
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 cup dark corn syrup
- 2 eggs, beaten
- ½ cup sour milk
- 2½ cups sifted flour
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon soda
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 2 cups oatmeal
- 2 cups raisins

Cream sugar and shortening. Add corn syrup. Blend. Add beaten eggs. Sift together dry ingredients. Add alternately with sour milk. Stir in oatmeal and raisins. Drop by spoonfuls on an oiled baking sheet. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 15 minutes.

Ginger Snaps.

- 1 cup molasses
- 3¼ cups sifted flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ cup butter
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- ½ teaspoon soda
- 1½ tablespoons ginger

Heat molasses to boiling point and pour over fat. Add sifted dry ingredients to molasses and fat. Mix well and shape dough into a long, thin roll. Wrap in waxed paper and place in refrigerator to chill overnight. Cut into thin slices with sharp knife and bake in a moderate oven until lightly browned. Remove from pan while hot and store in tightly covered container to keep crisp.

That son of yours may be grown-up now and in the service, but my guess is that some of those good, homemade cookies of yours will be mighty welcome to him at camp

Lynn Says:

Preserving Food: Eat and can whatever you can from your Victory garden. But you still may have some left, you say?

There are several methods to take care of the surplus. First, investigate to see whether your community has one of those storage lockers where you can rent space in the freezing locker. Cleanliness and speed are important factors in this type of storage. Food must be well selected to warrant the expense of this type of preserving.

Drying at home is another excellent way and one of the oldest methods available. Driers can be bought for a reasonable sum and used to advantage for drying and storing fruits and vegetables.

Other foods such as root vegetables, pumpkins and squash have good keeping qualities if stored in their natural state under well regulated temperatures such as in attic or cellar. Dried beans, peas and cured onions may be stored in an attic. Squash and pumpkins require a relatively warm place with free circulation of air.

Honey Fruit Bars.
(Makes 3 dozen)

- 2 eggs
- ½ cup honey
- ½ cup sifted flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon baking powder
- ½ pound pitted dates, sliced
- 6 ounces mixed, candied fruits

Beat eggs and honey to blend. Add sifted dry ingredients and fruits and mix well. Turn into a greased, wax-paper lined pan. Bake in a moderate-to-slow (325-degree) oven for 45 minutes. Remove paper. Cool and cut into bars. Roll in powdered sugar if desired. Store in covered jar for several days to mellow.

Chocolate Chip Cookies.
(Makes 3½ dozen)

- ½ cup butter
- ½ cup honey
- 1 small egg
- 1 cup sifted flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup semi-sweet chocolate chip.
- ¼ cup nutmeats
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

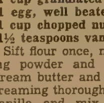
Cream butter and honey until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Sift dry ingredients twice, and add to butter mixture. Add vanilla and blend well. Fold in chocolate chips and nuts. Chill, then drop by spoonfuls on a greased cooky sheet. Bake at 375 degrees for 12 minutes.



Can you spare a cup and a quarter of sugar? I think you can if you know that you will spread that sugar over eight dozen cookies as in the following:

Vanilla Nut Ice Box Cookies.
(Makes 8 dozen cookies)

- 2 cups sifted cake flour
- 1½ teaspoons double-acting baking powder
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- 6 tablespoons butter or shortening
- ¼ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
- 1 cup granulated sugar
- 1 egg, well beaten
- 1 cup chopped nuts
- 1½ teaspoons vanilla

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt. Sift again. Cream butter and sugars gradually, creaming thoroughly. Add egg, nuts, vanilla and mix well. Add flour gradually, mixing well after each addition. Shape into rolls, 1½ inches in diameter and roll in waxed paper. Chill overnight or until firm enough to slice. Cut in ⅛-inch slices. Bake on ungreased baking sheet in a hot oven (425 degrees) 5 minutes or until light, golden brown.

A fruity, unusual pie is this one combining prunes and bananas with cornflakes and coconut. A sugar-saver, too:

American Prune Pie.
(Serves 6 to 8)

- 2 cups cooked prunes
- 1½ cups whipping cream
- ½ cup honey
- 1 cup sliced bananas
- Few grains salt
- 2 cups uncrushed corn flakes
- ½ cup shredded coconut
- Baked pastry shell (9-inch)

Cut prunes from pits in small pieces. Whip cream. Measure one cup and blend with honey. Add fruit and salt and stir to blend. Add cornflakes and blend lightly but thoroughly. Pour into baked pie shell and sprinkle with coconut. Top with remaining cream and serve soon after preparation.

We Must Plunge:

Our leaders have told us that as yet we are only ankle-deep in the war. No nation and no man can remain ankle-deep. They either plunge or get cold feet. This means that the sacrifice of civilians must match the bravery of our fighting forces.

A nation lives by the higher values of its soul. Not by the lower prices on its store counters. In 1942, sugar is a luxury and gasoline a comfort. But liberty and freedom are still American necessities. A cuff on your American trousers isn't worth a Japanese cuff on your American jaw.

Our problem at home is not our standard of living. Too many brave Americans have already set us a heroic standard by dying.

The Marines who land on Pacific beaches are in this war deeper than their ankles. And the skies above the channel cannot be protected by price ceilings. The men of Bataan divided their food, not profits. And there was no night-shift to relieve the defenders of Wake.

It will cost most of our wealth to win this war. But all our riches to lose it. We must give most of our privileges or lose all of our rights. Captain Colin Kelly made his choice. He went into this war not up to his ankes, but up to his heart. Because he knew what it meant to buy peace on his knees.

Notes of a New Yorker:

John Mason Brown, the dramatic critic, who went under the surgeon's blade to put himself in condition for a naval commission, will prove to be worthy of the navy . . . The navy need have no fears about his presence of mind, either . . . Once when Brown was delivering a lecture in New Orleans—he strolled up and down the rostrum, making gestures as he lectured . . . He strolled so far he walked off the platform—dumping himself into some laps . . . Returning to the platform calmly, albeit a bit bruised, he continued with: "To pick up the subject where we dropped it . . ."

Sallies in Our Alley: Gilbert Gabriel, the former dramatic critic, is now an officer in the army—somewhere in Alaska . . . Before being commissioned some intimates were requested to give the War Dep't the lowdown on Gil's character, fitness and so forth . . . "How are his morals?" was one query . . . "He is so moral," replied a chum, "he should be sent there as a missionary!" . . . One of the Broadway sportsmen was saying that the weather at Saratoga was never important to a gambler "because you can sleep like a top when you're winning" . . . "And," said a veteran, "when you're losing—you spin like one" . . . David O. Selznick asked Sam Goldwyn: "Why do you hire so many writers for one picture?" . . . "Because," said Sam, "from each writer I get a germ."

Zeppo Marx of the famed 4 Marxmen was the "kid brother" who was ordered into the act by their mother . . . Zeppo was too young to be trusted with valuable pieces of stage business or punch-lines—and so he merely tagged along, making faces or joining in the chorus . . . Of course, he was paid well . . . While Harpo, Chico and Groucho squandered their coin on their families, fun or at dice games—Zeppo kept salting his away . . . Eventually, he wearied of hamming it and suddenly popped up as a Hollywood agent — buying into a prospering agency . . . Later he opened his own and represented many movie stars . . . He's rich today . . . His brothers aren't . . . In his spare time Zeppo fussed with mechanical things at home—while the brothers made whoopee—and now and then he was laughed at for wasting his time at his "experiments" . . . So what? . . . Zeppo now owns a West coast defense plant!

Man About Town:

The Star-Spangled: Bing Crosby, rumored Washington-bound to enlist in the army, isn't eligible. He went there for orders on the Great Bond Drive . . . Ty Power, who will train for the gliders, proudly wearing the emblem of the marines as a boutonniere . . . Darryl Zanuck, who quit his 20th Century-Fox job (at $5,000 per week) considerably relieved. "I felt," he said, "that I was merely another actor—playing a part" . . . Hazel Scott, who clicked so big in Hollywood, getting a $1,000 bonus from MGM for her fortnight's work . . . Lieut. Burgess Meredith, Wm. Saroyan and G. O. Welles in the 1-2-3—dame hunters . . . Myrna Loy —The Myrna Lisa.

Sounds-in-the-Night: At Reuben's: "Horace Greeley said: 'Go West, Young Man!' and what did he do? He stayed in New York and got rich!" . . . At Mother Kelly's: "On Broadway they keep telling you to keep punching—hoping you'll knock yourself out" . . . At the Park Central Cocoanut Grove: "He was once caught in a truth" . . . At the Aquarium: "She was so lovesick she took the first pill that came along" . . . At Toots Shor's: "One of these days a check is gonna reach out and grab him!"

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

Entered in the Postoffice at Clanton, Alabama, as second-class matter under the Act of Congress of March, 1897
MRS MARK L. TUCKER, Owner
R. M. TUCKER, Managing Editor
The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

This is a good time for Clanton to start thinking about cleaning up her streets and alleys. You can find old iron and other scrap almost anywhere. This will be killing two birds with one piece of scrap, as it were.

Don't fail to buy your War Bond this month. No one knows when this War will be over. And more and more ammunition will be needed as our Soldiers, Sailors and Marines open new fronts.

War time is no time for our Government officials to pay attention to the howl of every little bellyacher in his District. We have a War to win and his time is more valuable now than ever before. Lick the Axis first, then we will have plenty of time to argue among ourselves.

Chilton County needs a County Scrap Pile. Everytime you get something that you don't need you could take or send it to the 'scrap pile.' It wouldn't be long until it come just as easy to throw it on the scrap pile as it is to throw it out the back door or in the alley. But the main thing is, it would be HELPING.

MR. ELMORE'S DEATH

We still have a great deal to learn when a man of the talents and achievements of V. J. Elmore becomes the victim of a street traffic accident. Details are not given as to the accident in which this prominent Alabama merchant met his death in Birmingham Saturday, but there is something decidedly wrong with traffic conditions which snuff out the life of a man like Mr. Elmore and cause the death of a boy riding his bicycle to school on the same day in Birmingham. The sooner rationing of gas and oil comes, the better if it will put a stop to senseless killing of people on the streets by careless or reckless drivers.—Montgomery Advertiser.

We were talking to an authority in the newspaper field while in the neighboring city of Birmingham Saturday.

This gentleman asked us how our local merchants were advertising under the present conditions? Of course we had to shake our head . . . Then the next question he asked was: How many had gone out of business? And, if the mail order houses weren't enjoying a nice business in this section at the local merchant's expense?

We have stated, and stated, and stated, that if the local merchants don't do their part in getting local business now, that there would be a time when it would be too late . . . Please don't kid yourself. Money is leaving here everyday. The mail order houses are getting it. They are going to continue to get it just as long as you sit by and let them get it . . . The business in this section is yours. You should be getting it. You will get it when you go after it, and keep going after it. We don't encourage any merchant to over-do advertising. We encourage some advertising—used right. We believe it is just as essential to your business as your telephone, your lights, your force. This war is going to bring about drastic changes—yes, we mean in 'your' business—you are a part of this country just the same as others. Don't sit up and let the hustler take your business—get in there and encourage the local trade to trade with you, encourage them to trade here. Do that along with your efforts to help win this war—Both will help plenty.

—Sumter County Journal

And mighty good medicine for our local merchants, too, Mr. Sloan.

MORAL ECHOES

By Rev. D. W. Haskew, D. D.

The organist of a village church became huffy and quit her job in a rage. Another young lady was secured to play the instrument. Her music was not so good as the one who blew up on the job, but the congregation was making out and things moved on. This did not please the one whose feelings were hurt, and to further hinder, she took a handful of dry sand and blew it down among the keys of the organ when no one was looking. At the next service the organist started the instrument and the sand was carried under each key that was touched. Soon there were sounds aplenty, but no music at all. The huffy girl in the audience smiled in delight. She had gotten even with the crowd at last. Would you have thought that here was a person in the world that mean? To get even with people, there are some who will pour sand into the harmony of life. Beware of breaking up harmony by dropping grit among the keys of harmonious living.

If I carried a pocket full of stones, I would not have a right to throw a single rock at the greatest backslider on earth. Surely I have done as badly, if not worse, than he. Never set yourself up as perfection personified. Remember that if God had not given you a second chance that you would have been cut off long ago. Therefore be patient and kind to people who stumble and fall. In place of abusing them when they fall, why not run to them and lift them up and help them to travel again. I saw a tiny tot trotting along by her mother, holding to her finger, but for some reason the child fell. The mother pounced down upon her and gave her an unmerciful spanking. That mother needed something that I could not administer. We were passing out at the church door and a friend said to me, "Preacher, we sure got a beating today." With a sad heart I said, "Yes, why not be merciful and kind to the fallen, for it is most likely that you have stumbled a few times yourself."

In the pulpit I heard a good man make this statement, "I was called to visit a young man who was very ill, and while I was at the bedside, the young man cursed many times. I felt insulted and left the room and said that I would never go back to see him again. I was called to see a young man who was very ill. He was suffering greatly and in the throes of his pain he cursed time and again. I pulled off my coat and went to work. I nursed him through the night and for many nights to follow. The young man often cursed me when I tried to help but that did not matter. I was in to help him. When his sickness was over he came to my church and gave his life to God. it grieved me to hear him cursing because I knew that he was sinning against the Christ, but I was not insulted. When we go out to work for Christ, we should leave ourselves behind.

Trace back any river to its source and you will find its beginning to be very small. A little moisture oozing through the sand, or dripping from the side of a rock, and that is the beginning of a stream that becomes a mighty river on which gallant fleets can sail and anchor. The stream is fed mile after mile by streams that flow into it from every shore. In like manner we find the beginning of a Christian's life. At first God's grace flows into the heart in small streamlets, and the individual moves out. In the passing of the years that life is fed from every experience and soon it becomes wide and deep, and the cargo of heaven moves upon the bosom of that serving soul. Our command is to grow in grace and in the knowledge of God. No wonder that we have so many noble saints, who are so rich in the good things of God. They have journeyed long, and have been fed from every shore, and with all the riches of God's grace they are ready to flow out into God's eternity.

Letter To The Editor:

In studying the lesson on temperance for Sept. 6, 1942. I came across a thought in my study which thought had a lot of spiritual food init to my mind. So I desire to pass it on to you only in the name of Christ I do so. As you know the alphabet has 26 letters as we use these 26 letters in direct alphabetical form to show you that those who use alchol are giving themselves 26 downward steps letter by letter. A to Z alchol: Arms villians; Breaks laws; Corruppts officers; Destroys homes; Engulfs fortunes; Fills jails; Grows gray hairs; Harrows hearts; Invites crimes; Jeopardizes lives; Kindles strife; Lacerated feelings; Maims bodies; Nails down coffins; Opens graves; Poisons minds; Quenches Laugh; Raised sobs; Sells virtue; Tells lies; Undermines youth; Violates decency; Wrecks men; Excites murder; Yeilds disgrace; and Zeroes hope.

My prayer is that God will use this in his own way to the saving of as many lost souls as is possible and also to encourage the saved to press onward in the battle for Christ. One who is interested in the lost and urges upon you to let Christ have full control if your life.

Your friend,
T. J. M. Webb.

SAVE THAT RUBBER

Local tire rationing boards really desirous of saving rubber will have the rubber-burning records of tire applicants before them at future hearings. Under plans worked out by state OPA and the State Department of Public Safety, records of speeders will be sent to rationing boards so that tires can be refused to violators of the 40-mile limit.

KEEP 'EM ROLLING

"STEP LIVELY" IS THE WORD
DURING 1941 the railroads moved the greatest volume of freight in their history.
In the first 6 months of 1942 they carried 36% more than in the same period of history-making 1941.
One reason the railroads have been able to do this has been the all-out cooperation of shippers.
Cars have been loaded heavier, sent away faster, emptied quicker.
This is important. For to carry everything the Government, Army, Navy and Business have to haul, cars have to be kept moving.
So you see why there's no room for sleeping shipments. It's transportation we have to deliver—someone else will supply the storage accommodations.
And so to keep war equipment, foods and commercial goods on the move, "step lively" is the word.
"The first World War taught the Government and the railroads and the public a lesson they will never forget. First, that those experienced in transportation can better conduct transportation than the Government or any inexperienced agency. Second, that railroad cars are never to be used for storage, but for transportation. Nothing shall be put in a car that cannot be immediately dispatched and unloaded at destination."—COLONEL J. MONROE JOHNSON, Member of Interstate Commerce Commission in Charge of Bureau of Service.

MAPLE SPRINGS

We had a large crowd out for both services Sunday and Sunday night It wasn't our regular praching day, but our Pastor brought a message at the eleven o'clock hour.

Following the preaching services, the church elected a pastor and other officers for another associational year. The present pastor Rev. M. Lockhart, was chosen for pastor, and the church voted unanimously for half-time preaching, or two Sundays a month. Just what Sundays we will have will be worked out with the Church and pastor in the near future.

Next Sunday is regular preaching day and we will be looking for a large attendance. We will also have baptismal and communion services. The church voted and also raised money to build a baptistry at the spring, which is but a short distance from the chuch. The bapisry will be built this week, and will be ready for use next Sunday, September 13. May we bare this in mind, for the simple fact that the baptismal services were formerly announced to be elsewhere. Baptismal services will be held just following the preaching services Sunday, and the benediction will be given at the pool. Communion services will be held Sunday night.

We will also lirense Rev. Ceril Little to preach the gospel at the services Sunday morning. Brother Little brought an inspiring message last Sunday night.

The pastor and family attended services at Refuge Sunday night, and reports a wonderful service. Plans were made and money raised to dig the well for the batistry at that place.

Carolyn, the baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben DeVaughn has been very ill, but is some better at this writing. We hope for little Carolyn a speedy recovery.

HERE'S THE VERDICT

Of Those Best Qualified to Know and Judge

MANY Alabamians have voiced approval of the constructive "Clean-up or Close-up" campaign waged the past three years by this Committee to maintain wholesome, law abiding retail beer outlets. But most appreciative of its far-reaching benefits are those in a position to know best and judge best what has been accomplished. Here are quotations from a few of many letters that have come to us from those best qualified to measure the actual results:

JUDGE

"Beer has a useful place in America's life."

EDITOR

"The Beer Committee has done a good job."

SHERIFF

"Beer Committee helps law enforcement—greatly appreciated."

REVIEWS AND PREVIEWS

EDUCATION AND WAR

I have just returned from a quarter of college work which is not nearly enough time to get a liberal education but which is enough time to understand one thing very clearly: the American educational system is now preparing to equip and educate American youth for what it thinks and believes will be a long war.

This objective is the result of a very persistant drive by authorities. Some of these authorities were military men who found that in our armed forces there were not enough men with proper training to qualify as offiders. Others were lay observers who put the situation as Time magazine put it: Americans don't know enough mathematics to fight. Many were political writers like Walter Lippmann who felt that the decision about what to take when at college should be taken from the hands of the individual and put into the hands of the government, which would decide by means of competitive examinations. More vocal than others were the mathematics teachers who lamented the condition mathematics departments were in in many of our states. (Some state authorities had long ago decided that mathematics was too "hard", and should be in the curricula as elective courses only.) Also engaged in the fight were those who believed that the natural sciences should receive as much recognition as higher education as is accorded literature and the arts. Newspapers like the New York Times did some statistical research and found that too, too often American history had been neglected, that too few high school and college sudents studied the history of our nation to know what this American heritage we speak of is all about. Their contention was that a good, sound background in American history would reduce to a minimum the necessity for prodding the American people to buy War Bonds and Stamps, to work without strikes and lock-outs.

The authorities also began to work on the time element. High school and college educations are long, drawn-out processes. In peacetime it is probably better that way—there is time for the knowledge to be absorbed, tested, and applied. In war time, however, the need is speed. All-year-round school was the inevitable result. To rely upon the old system of all-year-round school, i.e., two semesters and a summer session, would handicap those who could not attend in that manner and would also result in confusion and disorder. What finally evolved has been called the quarter system; the year divided into four quarters of three months each, each quarter being slightly less than three months so as to allow for vacations. That was the answer of the colleges to the war emergency. In Aalbama, most of the colleges have tried the quarter system this past summer. Its real trial will come this Fall when it attempts to replace the regular semester.

The object of this quarter system is primarily to permit college students to continue through college uninterrupted. It has solved the problem of speed. It hardly seems possible that a better solution for the problem of speeding-up the college course will be found. But the quarter system does not answer the atfier problems. It has not made American history compulsory, it has not brought military training into all schools, it has not providedd compulsory mathematics so that all students will be ready if called. (The government, it is true, has made it attractive and desirable to study mathematics and sciences, however. The Army and Navy offer deferment plans for those taking mentioned above can be answered unmentioned above can be tnswered under the quarter system, and undoubtedly they will be answered soon.

As American educators in high schools and colleges take the necessary steps to introduce military training and compulsory technical science courses into all high schools and colleges, the more certain we shall become that American education is preparing to train and equip America for a long war.

Everyday as this war progresses more and louder is the call for trained men in evey field. These are not men with backgrounds in arts and literature; these are men with science, trigonometry, military discipline. The emphasis is being taken away from the old curricula and given to the new —the new, containing what the Army and Navy needs.

The thought is directed toward training for today's need and doing so immediately, disregarding the future need for men trained in the arts and literature. Deferment has been offered until the completion of college courses, with the prospect of then taking position in the Army or Navy.

These are the educational foundation stones for providing democracy with men who can take responsibility; these are the steps necessary to make America the arsenal of both weapons and trained men.

The problem of education demands public consideration today, for the future of America depends upon its youth, and youth's ability to cope with the future depends upon its training. Every student in high school from the one in the first year to the senior needs to give consideration to the perplexing issue before him. The problem is even more confusing today than it was two years ago when educational agitation first began. Upon decisions made today may well rest the future status of the nation. But this is one decision which cannot be left up to the President or his advisors; it must be made by each and every American who has yet to complete his formal education.

The present-day trend of education and the persistant drives by educational leaders have shown us what to expect. To meet the expected as well as the unexpected depends upon what decisions are made today by each of us for the future.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

FDR Plans Nationwide Gas Rationing With 35-Mile Speed Limit for U. S.; Double-Time Pay Banned for Duration; British Renew Madagascar Occupation

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

When the U. S. marines accomplished their history-making offensive in the Solomon islands, amphibian tractors churned South Seas water to carry them to their first attack to win back Jap-held territory since the start of the war. The tractor is in the background as these marines dug in at the beach soon after the battle's opening. The area was soon cleared of the enemy.

GAS RATIONING:
President Acts

For weeks silvery-haired Bernard M. Baruch and co-members of the President's special rubber committee had labored over the problem of what to do about the nation's steadily diminishing rubber supply.

When the committee handed Mr. Roosevelt its report, the President was ready for action.

First, he announced that "as rapidly as arrangements can be made" he would put into effect a set of recommendations submitted by the committee, including nation-wide gasoline rationing and drastic restrictions on civilian motoring.

Made public in the President's announcement were additional steps recommended by the committee which included:

A 35-mile speed limit for passenger cars and trucks; an average annual mileage of 5,000 miles per car, permitted only for "necessary driving"; release of more rubber to the public for recapping old tires to maintain necessary civilian driving; imposition of gasoline rationing nationally on the basis of 5,000 miles per year per car; compulsory periodic tire inspections; voluntary tire conservation pending establishment of gas rationing.

Submitted with the committee's recommendations was the blunt declaration that rubber conservation was now a matter of "discomfort or defeat."

MADAGASCAR:
'Full Occupation'

Even as communiques revealed that the British had opened a general offensive against the west coast of Vichy-held Madagascar, the state department in Washington announced that Great Britain with the full approval of the United States had decided to undertake "further military operations" in the Madagascar area.

British action was taken to eliminate reported refueling of Jap submarines in secret harbors and Nazi espionage in connivance with Vichy agents.

Significant of the close military collaboration between Britain and the United States and their indifference to Vichy France opposition, the state department announcement declared:

"The full military occupation of Madagascar by British forces will not only contribute to the successful conduct of the war against the Axis forces, but will be in the interest of the United Nations."

DOUBLE-TIME PAY:
Curbed by FDR

"Penalty double time" pay for millions of industrial workers was abolished for the duration of the war when President Roosevelt signed an executive order banning the practice for Sundays, Saturdays and holidays.

The President's action thus invalidated contracts in which employers were required to pay workers double time for work on Saturdays or holidays, even though these days fell within the regular five-day work week.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had taken the step in line with an understanding previously arrived at with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and Philip Murray, president of the CIO.

The order was signed at almost the final hour of a deadline set by the United Automobile Workers union, of the CIO. The UAW which had voluntarily surrendered such double time had protested that rival organizations had not made the same sacrifice. Enactment of the order thus eliminated a possible labor conflict.

RUSSIAN FRONT:
Nazis Rule Air

The gloom of Russia's military predicament was darkened when correspondents in Moscow were permitted to cable the news that the German air force had secured virtually undisputed sway over the beleaguered city of Stalingrad, key industrial and communications center of the Volga area. Added to this pessimistic report was the news that additional "populated places" adjacent to Stalingrad had been lost by the Russians.

With Nazi Marshal Fedor von Bock hurling massive armored and infantry forces into a frontal drive against the city, it was only by the stubbornest resistance that the Reds were able to continue their formula of "fall back and keep fighting." The only comforting aspect was that the Nazis were paying costly prices in men and equipment for every foot gained.

In the Caucasus area the news had likewise been adverse, for the Russian high command acknowledged that fighting had reached the "outskirts" of Novorossisk, last remaining naval stronghold on the Black sea.

VOTES:
For Armed Forces

Wherever they are serving Uncle Sam on the far-flung war front, more than 4,000,000 men and women in the nation's land and naval forces were given the right to vote in the coming November elections and in subsequent elections until the end of the war, when the house of representatives approved legislation extending the ballot to absentee members of the army and navy.

The house's action set a new precedent, for never before in time of war had the armed forces been able to vote away from their home districts.

Affected by the new law was every citizen serving in the army or navy, including members of the Army Nurse corps, the Navy Nurse corps, the Women's Navy reserve, and the Women's Army Auxiliary corps.

SOUTH PACIFIC:
Japs Persistent

Australia felt again the chilling threat of a Japanese approach, as Nipponese and Allied armies had fought for control of the Port Moresby area—only 375 miles from the northeast tip of the Australian continent.

In a drive which had started late in August from the Kadoka area, north of the Owen Stanley mountains, the Japs by infiltration and flanking methods against the Australian defenders had pushed southward through the highest pass in the range toward their coveted goal.

Meanwhile, in answer to General MacArthur's plea that each American kill one Japanese apiece, Yankee forces resumed the offensive in the Solomon islands. A communique indicated that the positions originally seized by the American marines had become so well established that they could now be used as a springboard for delivering further hard blows at the enemy.

BRIEFS:

LONDON: Sir James Grigg, secretary of state for war reported to the house of commons that up to the present date, the government had been notified that 77,190 British war prisoners were in Axis hands. He said that figures did not include prisoners taken in Malaya or most of the other Far Eastern theaters. The number of these had not been determined.

LUXEMBOURG:
Defies the Nazis

Plucky Luxembourgers gave the lie to Nazi propaganda that they were voluntarily acquiring German citizenship and entering the enemy armed forces, by staging a general strike—the first in a German-occupied country.

The pint-sized duchy, which has a population of but 269,913, is nevertheless one of the world's most important steel producing regions. The exiled Luxembourg ministry in London reported that German authorities had declared a state of emergency and threatened striking workers with death.

Repressive measures were imposed throughout Luxembourg when the strike which started at Schifflingen, spread to other towns. Sabotage against railroads in the tiny country was reported widespread, with workers putting equipment out of order.

TRUCKS AND TAXIS:
Face U. S. Control

The operation of 5,000,000 commercial motor trucks, 150,000 busses and 50,000 taxi cabs will be placed under government control by November 15 as a measure to conserve transportation facilities for war purposes, it was announced by Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation. Passenger cars and motorcycles were exempted from the new regulations.

The ODT's order directed operators of commercial vehicles to obtain a "certificate of war necessity" to obtain fuel, tires, tubes and accessories.

Mr. Eastman said the certificates for commercial vehicles would require a tire check every 5,000 miles, or every 60 days, whichever occurs first, to assure proper inflation and repairs. Certificates, he indicated, will be issued to all types of trucks, vehicles built primarily for transporting property and passengers and others available for public rental, such as ambulances and hearses.

The objective, he said, is to limit their use to operations necessary to the war effort, or to the essential domestic economy.

FRANCE:
Petain Is Warned

Edouard Herriot is one Frenchman not afraid to raise his voice in blunt opposition to Vichy. Jules Jeanneney is another. Both command respect in Unoccupied France, for Herriot is mayor of Lyons and a former premier and Jeanneney a former cabinet member. Both were leaders of the last parliament of the Third Republic.

Thus Frenchmen everywhere listened when these two delivered a solemn warning to Marshal Petain and Pierre Laval that France may suffer "convulsions" if the Vichy government attempts to draw the nation "into war against our Allies."

EDOUARD HERRIOT
"... Convulsions will follow."

In an unprecedented letter indicting the present regime, Herriot and Jeanneney implied that despite the French defeat in June, 1940, and the armistice with Germany and despite the rise of Petain and Laval, they still consider France bound by the treaties of alliance with which she entered the war.

TANKS VS. PLANES:
U. S. Passes Axis

Robert P. Patterson, undersecretary of war, had good news for the nation when he announced in Cleveland that American tank production had reached "an impressive figure" and that Uncle Sam was now turning out more planes than Germany, Japan and Italy combined.

Answering criticism of American war material, Patterson said that in speed, range, toughness of armor and hitting power, the U. S. medium tank, either the M-3 or the M-4, "is superior to the best German tank," as "proved in combat in Egypt."

Combat records, he declared, also had proved the Curtiss P-40 better than the Jap Zero planes.

SEA SAGA:
Wakefield Rescue

A grim drama of the sea, abounding in tales of heroism was unfolded when survivors of the burned naval transport Wakefield were landed at an Atlantic coast port.

Formerly known as the liner Manhattan, one-time queen of the U. S. merchant fleet, the Wakefield had been severely damaged by fire, but more than 1,600 passengers and crew members had been removed without loss of life.

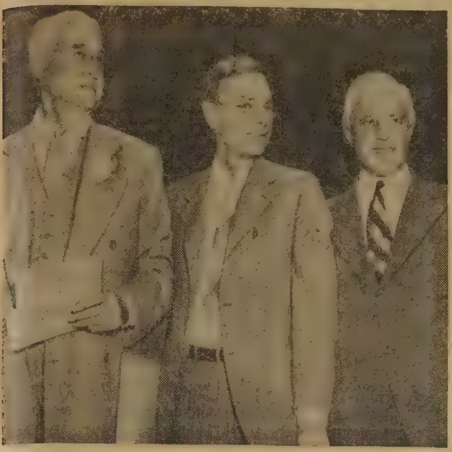
Plan Gas Rationing After Rubber Report



The Baruch Rubber Investigating committee has recommended nationwide gasoline rationing as a means of saving tires, and President Roosevelt, in transmitting the report to congress, stated its recommendations "will be put into effect as rapidly as arrangements can be made." The Baruch committee offered a many-sided plan to insure meeting of military and vital civilian rubber needs. Shown, left to right, are Bernard Baruch, Dr. James B. Conant and Dr. Walter Compton, as they left the White House after conferring with the President.

EVER since she chalked up that amazing success in "Mrs. Miniver" Greer Garson has been pursued by producers who want her to do a play on Broadway this fall. She's read a dozen scripts and turned them down. Now she's been asked to do one called "Queen Elizabeth"; the asker is Margaret Webster, director - daughter of Dame May Whitty; she directed Miss Garson in her last London stage hit, "Old Music." If "Random Harvest," which the red-haired actress is making with Ronald Colman, is done in time, she may consent.

Frances Gifford, the new "Mrs. Tarzan," really owes her new assignment to the impersonation of Dorothy Lamour that she gave in the recently released "Henry Aldrich Gets Glamour." William Thiele, who directed "The Jungle Princess," the first Lamour triumph, and is also directing "Tarzan Triumphs," caught the picture at a neighborhood theater, and asked to have Miss Gifford tested for the role.

FRANCES GIFFORD

Clark Gable certainly made his departure from movie-making in a blaze of glory. His latest, "Somewhere I'll Find You," which he did with Lana Turner, has outgrossed every one of the M-G-M pictures he has appeared in over the past seven years, with the exception of "Boom Town," and that doesn't count because it played at advanced admission prices.

Jean Arthur spent most of a day autographing 500 of her own photographs with kisses not long ago. It was just after she returned from a tour of army camps, following completion of "The Talk of the Town." Whenever she met a boy from New York city, where she was born, she promised to send him a photograph autographed with a kiss. She used two lipsticks before she'd finished.

Ever hear of processed parchment? Loretta Young encountered it the other day; found she'd been wearing it, in fact, in her new picture, "The Frightened Stiff." It's a new substitute material, and was used in an evening gown.

So far as is known, Veronica Lake received the first request from an imprisoned American in Japan for a photograph. It came from marines taken prisoner at Wake island, and was forwarded by the International Red Cross.

A few months ago Ruth Hussey's bridegroom, Robert Longenecker, saw a newspaper picture of the actress. He clipped it and wrote under it, "Here's the girl I'd like to marry." Not long ago he could add "Here's the girl I did marry!" The photographer who took the original photograph, Eric Carpenter, also photographed the young couple's wedding!

Nelson Eddy and Announcer Bob Garred were so busy trying to outwit each other with amateur magic a while ago that the "on the air" signal for their radio show almost caught them off base. Nadine Connor looks upon their efforts with suspicion; she has sworn that the minute the pair shows an interest in the "sawing a woman in half" stunt she'll leave Eddy without a partner.

Kay Harris, feminine lead in Columbia's western feature, "The Fighting Buckaroo," was starred in the first picture in which she appeared. It was "Tillie, the Toiler."

ODDS AND ENDS—"Duffy's Tavern," hailed last season as one of the outstanding new program developments of the year, returns to the air October 6 . . . Just for fun, Lou Nova and Leslie Charteris, author of the "Saint" mysteries, went on as extras in some of the Miami Beach scenes of "The Big Street" . . . Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins and George Brent will have the leads in Warner Brothers' picturization of the successful stage play, "Old Acquaintance" . . . Marjorie Reynolds and Barbara Britton will be leading women for Bing Crosby in "Dixie," the story of Dan Emmett, minstrel man.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

'INSIDE' ON ALEUTIANS

The inside story can now be told of why the Japs were able to land in the Aleutian islands and bomb the U. S. naval base at Dutch Harbor with so little opposition. As with most things in this war, the problem goes back to lack of foresight, and also, to some extent, lack of army-navy co-operation.

Not generally known is the fact that the navy in September, 1941, some two months before Pearl Harbor, refused to let the army build an air base on Umnak island to guard the navy's Dutch Harbor base.

What happened was that Senator Brewster of Maine, a member of the Truman committee and of the naval affairs committee, flew to Alaska last September with Brig Gen. Arthur Wilson to ascertain whether Alaska needed further fortifications. At Kodiak they met Brig. Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner, commander of the army's forces, whose father, a famous Civil war commander, once helped to pay Ulysses S. Grant's way home from West Point and later surrendered to Grant in Tennessee.

General Buckner wanted to go on from Kodiak to Dutch Harbor with Senator Brewster, and although the navy was willing to supply an amphibian plane to the senator, they balked at having General Buckner go along, referred to him as a "hitch-hiker."

Finally, however, the party, including General Buckner, went on to Dutch Harbor and located an excellent site for a flying field on Umnak island. Immediately upon their return, Senator Brewster arranged for a senate appropriation to build an air base at Umnak, while the war department prepared to proceed.

Navy Says No.

The war department also notified the navy of its move, since the army is charged with protecting the shore establishments of the navy. A few weeks later, however, word came back from the navy that it did not want the army to build an air base on Umnak island to protect Dutch Harbor.

When senators asked Vice Admiral Frederick J. Horne why, he replied: "The navy can protect Dutch Harbor."

This was in late September. Two months later, after Pearl Harbor, the navy frantically demanded an air base to protect Dutch Harbor, but it had to be started during the snow and ice of an Alaskan winter. Therefore the date of completion was July, 1942.

Probably the Japs knew this date They have had fishing vessels cruising through the Aleutians off and on for some time. At any rate it was the first week in June, one month before the Umnak air base was finished, that the Japs struck.

And when they bombed Dutch Harbor, the navy's flying patrol boats there were helpless. Heavy and slow, they lacked protection from the army's fast pursuit planes, so speedy Jap Zero fighters made mincemeat of them.

Lack of a nearby army air base from which fighters and bombers could protect the rest of the Aleutians undoubtedly contributed also to the ease with which the Japs took Kiska harbor and the western Aleutians.

PERSISTENT LEON

The army doesn't seem to think that hard-hitting Leon Henderson, price-fixing boss of the OPA, is lethargic about wanting to put price ceilings on tanks, guns, trucks and other army material for which it is now paying top prices.

In a knock-down, drag-out session in the office of mild-mannered Undersecretary of War Patterson, Henderson banged on the table, told Patterson the army was paying too much, that he demanded the power to put price ceilings on army supplies.

"I'm going to keep after you on this till I get it," Henderson stormed. "When I was younger and I was courting a girl, I kept after her until I got her. And that's what's going to happen now."

ℂ The navy has wisely drafted some of J. Edgar Hoover's FBI sleuths to help train naval intelligence officers. They are doing a bang-up job.

ℂ The Truman committee has persuaded the army to lend it Brig. Gen. Frank Lowe, a Maine Republican, as its executive officer.

Sentinels of Health
Don't Neglect Them!
Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.
When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.
Frequent, scanty or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.
The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

PEANUT MEAL CHEAPER AS FEED, THAN TANKAGE

In view of the record production of peanut meal expected for 1942-43 and the strong demand for protein feeds in prospect, hog producers can lower feed costs and increase production by feeding large quantites of peanut meal says W. H. Gregory, extension livestock specialist.

At present, he points out, peanut meal fed with a mineral mixture is a cheaper hog feed than tankage. The price of tankage is expected to continue at or near recently established ceilings during the next few months and probably into 1943.

Pupils Should Be Six By October First To Enter School

Each year many mothers and fathers with children who will be six in October, November or December feel that school authorities are unfair to their child when he is not allowed to enter school. The child who is six in August or September, however, is more often the child who is handicapped than the child who is not allowed to enter until a year later.

The law of Alabama in regard to minimum age at which children may enter school is as follows: "A child who is six years of age on or before October first shall be entitled to admission to the public elementary schools at the opening of such schools for that year or as soon as practicable thereafter: a crild who is under six years of age on Ortober first shall not be entitled to admission to such schools during that school year, except that a child who becomes six years of age on or before February first may, on approval of the board of education in authority, be admitted at the beginning of the second semester of that school vear to schools in school systems having semi-annual promotions of pupils."

Of course, there is little difference in the maturity of a child whether his birthday is on September 30 or October 2, and all children do not reach the same stage of maturity in six year. Reading, however, is taught in the first grade of Alabama. Experiments show that a child does not learn to read before it is six or six years and six months old mentally. The average child has a mental age of six years about ris sixth birthday. As most children are six years and six months old by the time school opens or by the first of October, the average child who is allowed to enter school can learn to read.

In addition to the mental maturity other things must be considered. One of the chief problems is one of the happiness and ability to work with a group. By waiting another year, a child who is six in October can usually assume and maintain a position of leadership. Those who enter before the age of six, or those who are several months younger than the average of the class, are in a relatively poor competitive position in the first grade and in the future years among the older and more mature pupils. Even though a child is six by October and has not reached the stage of maturity of other pupils in his class, parents and teachers should not try to force him to reach the standards of the more mature pupils.

Montgomery—The State Revenue Department has mailed each county an $11,305 warrant covering its share of August gas tax revenue collections. Although the amount is less than the $12,083 distribution a year ago, county distributions in the past 11 months total $12,577 against $116,610 in the like period a year previous. It is estimated collections for the fiscal year to end Sept. 30 will total a million dollars more than in the last fiscal year.

2 Tiny saw-toothed particles of grit work down into the fabric and chafe the fibers. Our Sanitone dry cleaning eases out these particles.

There are so many drives going on now and so much of everything is needed by our Government that we are going to start a drive. This will be known as the Key Kollection Kampaign. All you do is gather up all the old keys around the house that you don't know where they belong anyway, and bring them to town each day and we will have a big Key Kollecting Kan placed on a kounter in one of the prominent stores and you can just drop the keys in there and we will pick them up when the Key Kan is full and send to your Uncle and and he will use them for munitions. Keys we understand kontain just the metal that are so short and we need so badly. Now we ain't fooling. Watch for the Key Kans in town and be ready to place your discarded Keys in them. Had you noticed that Millard Lancaster was hoarse these last few days? The cause is he's put new loud speakers in the Bus Station Cafeteria for announcing busses and he likes it so well that he just about announced himself hoarse. Seasons First Football Game Friday Night; Chilton County High School Plays Sylacauga

Close Game Expected In Opener

The first football game of the season for Clanton will take place Friday night of this week when the local Tigers square off with the team from Comer Memorial High School of Sylacauga. Little is known of Sylacauga team, but in years past they have always put out a good team. The team this year is coached by "Choctaw" Creel who made a reputation as a foot ball player while at the University of Alabama. After leaving college Creel coached some of the outstanding high school football teams of the state. He has been out of the coaching game for several years, but it goes without saying that he has lost none of his wisdom of the gridiron game during these past years. At one time Creel was athletic director and foot ball coach at Marion Military Institute, Marion, Ala.

Coach Porch is not saying what his boys will do in this game, he is merely working hard and planning to have them in the best condition possible by Friday night.

The game begins promptly at 8:00 o'clock admission 25 and 50 cents.

W. M. S. Met Monday To Hear Mrs. Roswell Owens Speak

The W. M. S. of Clanton Baptist Church met at the church Monday afternoon for the pleasure of hearing Mrs. Roswell Owens speak. She told members of the W. M. S. and a large number of visitors, about her stay in Palestine as a missionary. She made all of us realize just how little we have done and are doing to help carry on God's work and also made us see how much we can do if we will "leave" some of our personal responsibilities and use our talents and opportunity to do more of God's work. She made us see and understand how we can be "missionaries" right here at home and in Foreign Lands.

Everyone enjoyed every minute of Mrs. Owen's talk and are looking forward to having the pleasure of hearing her again soon.

The meeting was dismissed with prayer by Mrs. J. A. Hester.

The Cirles meet in the following homes next Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock:

Circle 1—Mrs. J. P. Hayes.
Circle 2—
Circle 3—Mrs. T. L. McKee.
Circle 4—Mrs. Walker Allen.

Chairman Reynolds Urges All To Buy War Bonds

September 22, 1942

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS
Dear Sir:

We have only 8 days left in our Bond Drive to fill our quota for September. Up to this time we have less than ½ of this quota and if we get the full amount, we have to have the help of every committeeman and every other person in the County. We have over two million boys on the firing lines, many of them being killed at this very moment some from the want of ammunitiin and the implements of war to fight with. Chilton County must do its part. No one person nor one committee can put this campaign over. It will take everybody. There are 3 things that it will take to win this war-Money-Men-Ammunition.

Do we people fully realize what it would mean to us if we lost this war? Look at the headlines in the Montgomery Advertiser this morning and you will see where the Hitler Government has 307,000 people executed without a trial and without any kind of defense but just an order from the government to have these citizens shot because they were not in sympathy with his government. Some of these countries might have been indifferent but I am sure if they had the chance now that we have, they would go the limit to defeat Hitler.

We had better give up every dollar of our wealth and possession. You can take everything from us and leave us our freedom and liberty and we would rise again, but if we were placed under a government like Hitler and his allies have, we would never recover.

I feel like there are many people in this County who do not realize the awful and dangerous situation we are in.

I want the citizens of this County to become interested in this campaign. Write letters to both papers and be free to express your approval or disapproval and make any suggestions that you think would help the Campaign. The papers will be glad to publish anything you have to say I feel like I have have had so much to say that some people are getting tired of reading my articles. Anything that you want me to do - let me know.

I have met every call that I have had in this Bond Drive. I have never said that I was too busy with my business to do anything I could to help in the sale of Bonds. I feel like it should be the first effort of all our lives to win this War.

Respectfully,
L. H. Reynolds,
Executive Chairman.

County Scrap Depots Ready For Big Business Saturday

The several scrap depots conveniently located in the county are ready for that scrap that you are supposed to bring in this Saturday, September 26th. The scrap committee is working hard to put this drive over and have designated their stations at points in the county that will be easy for everyone to reach.

At Jemison, Don's Cafe; Thorsby, Bentley's Garage; Maplesville, Chambers Service Station; Verbena, W. A. Gulledge; Cooper, H. J. Taylor; Clanton, Chilton Truck & Implement Company and Dubb's Service Station.

All Depot's will pay 35c per hundred pounds which is the price that the government places upon it. Scouts in Clanton will make a house-to-house canvass Saturday morning and ask every housewife to see that the scrap is gathered together so that it will be ready when the truck comes along later in the day to pick it up.

Those who are interested mean business and intend to see that our county, which has only gathered about half of its quota, goes over the top this week-end with more than a million pounds of scrap. Do your part and bring in yours. Then Chilton County will go over her million pounds.

MRS. HEFLIN THANKS COLORED WORKERS

Mrs. Grady Heflin and Mrs. Mary Will Browder, in charge of the Red Cross work room, wish to thank the colored girls who helped so much in cleaning the building that was recently occupied by them. These girls worked without pay and deserve a lot of praise for their help. They were: Lila Wood, Sallie Bell Jackson, Minnie Davis, Lillian Davis, Joe Sal Dickinson, Arthur Taylor, Boon Gambles. The last two named men are also to be commended for their fine work.

JEMISON FFA MEMBER RUNNING CORN-SWEET POTATO DEMONSTRATION

Billy Joe Varden, FFA and Senior I Class member of the Jemison High School, is running a demonstration of corn and sweet potatoes. These tests are run in cooperation with Mr. L. M. Ware, Extension Horticulturist at Auburn. Mr. Ware has proved that sweet potatoes will make much more stock feed per acre than corn and is testing this out in various localities in the state.

Thesweet potatoes will be shredded and dried and take the place of corn in the ration for cattle. It has proved to be valuable for fattening cattle and for producing milk.

Democrats Meet And Elect Campaign Officials

Chilton County Democrats met last week and named officials for the coming campaign. J. C. Pattillo, now serving his second term in the Circuit Clerks office, was named Chairman, Mr. Pattillo is mighty popular in Chilton County and is the best man in the county that could have been named for this office.

Luther Little, right-hand-man of Governor-nominate Chauncey Sparks in Jefferson county during the last campaign, and W. M. Polk, Chairman of the Chilton County Democratic Executive Committee, were named Co-Chairmen.

The big guns haven't started firing in county politics as yet but the lines are being drawn and both sides are lining up for a fight to the finish. It looks like a Democratic year, however and with the boys in there pitching like Jack Hayes, Buck Roberts, Delos Culp, Buster Foshee, J. A. Nivens, Hoyt Freeman, Howard Roper, and G. C. Walker, Chilton County Democrats just can't be stopped, this year or any year.

LOCAL STUDENTS ATTEND ALABAMA COLLEGE

Among the students at Alabama College from Chilton County this year are: Misses Betty Boo Hollis, Mitchell Dam: Helen Evans Parrish, Katherine Mariagnes Bryan, Hilda Mae Smith, and Imogene Armstrong, all of Clanton; Susie Nell Sexton, Maplesville; Mary Lou Gaines, Verbena.

Freshman orientation activities have filled the girls' calendar since school started. Upperclassmen have been guiding the new students into the whys and wherefores of college life.

Social events, including parties given by the Montevallo churches, picnics at the College camp and splash parties in the College pool, will be climaxed with the Student Government Association reception on September 25.

Tuscaloosa has signed a new street lighting contract and will save $1,200 annually.

Yank Fliers and Subs Blast Jap Ships In Battles for Supremacy in Pacific; Rubber Czar Speeds Synthetic Output; Fuel Oil Rationing Covers Thirty States

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

William M. Jeffers (right), newly appointed rubber administrator, confers with War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson concerning problems to be solved in the nation-wide rubber conservation program which he heads. The former president of the Union Pacific railroad called for the co-operation of all Americans in making the program effective.

PACIFIC FRONT:

Jap Ships Smashed

The Japs got a taste of American air and undersea power when aircraft and submarines struck at widely separated points on the far-flung Pacific battlefront and damaged or destroyed 18 enemy ships.

In the Solomon islands, American bombers attacking the enemy base at Retaka bay, north of the American airfield at Guadalcanal, damaged two cruisers and destroyed vital enemy shore installations.

In the Aleutians heavy army bombers and long range fighters inflicted severe damage. Included in the American score were two mine sweepers sunk, three large cargo vessels damaged, three submarines hit and trapped and "several small craft" damaged. In addition the U. S. raiders set fire to storehouses and supply dumps ashore, destroyed six enemy planes and killed or wounded approximately 500 Jap troops.

Elsewhere in the far western Pacific, submarines sank four ships and damaged four others. The successful attacks on these eight ships raised to 107 the total of Japanese vessels of all types which the navy has reported sunk or damaged by American submarine attacks since the outbreak of war.

FUEL OIL RATION:

Forecasts 65 Degrees

Home owners in the 30 eastern and midwestern states affected by the WPB's fuel oil rationing order were told by Price Administrator Leon Henderson that domestic allotments would be pegged to a daytime temperature of 65 degres under average weather conditions.

Approximately 3,140,000 oil-burning residential units in the rationed area will be affected by the order. The plan is designed to reduce consumption 25 per cent in the designated area.

Mr. Henderson said the amount of oil allowed each heating unit would be based largely on the floor space and the amount of fuel used last year. In order to obtain coupon rationing sheets, householders will be required to furnish local rationing boards with detailed information concerning the dwelling and furnace.

DRAFT:

Fathers or Boys:

Congress was given its choice between drafting 1,500,000 youths of 18 and 19 years of age or the same number of married men with dependent families by Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director.

In a statement before the house committee investigating national defense migration, Hershey said: "We are going to get 18 or 19-year-olds, or 1,500,000 men out of the family." He added that the war department has certain reasons for wanting younger men and that industry would be disturbed less by taking the youths.

RUBBER CZAR:

Tough Job Ahead

Blunt, energetic Rubber Administrator William M. Jeffers had a big job on his hands and he knew it. War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson knew it too, for when he announced Jeffers' appointment, he called it "one of the toughest" assignments in the whole war effort.

As recommended by the President's special inquiry committee, Mr. Jeffers was given full authority over every phase of the rubber program. He was charged with reorganizing, consolidating and administering the government's efforts to alleviate the rubber shortage.

One of the new rubber czar's biggest tasks was to drastically step up synthetic rubber production. The report of the President's committee headed by Bernard M. Baruch had noted that there was "grave danger" that construction delays might hold up the present program as much as four months, leaving rubber supplies next year insufficient even for military needs.

Directness was one of the things Jeffers was noted for as president of the Union Pacific railroad. He showed the same approach when he said:

"This means I have a tough job. But it is also a job for all the people of the United States. The biggest stockpile of rubber we have is on the wheels of our automobiles. I ask every motorist, every truck driver, everybody who runs a car, to remember that he is now the custodian of a material more precious than gold."

RUSSIA:

Needs Second Front

As the news from Russian battle sectors had become gloomier, the increasing necessity of an Anglo-American second front in western Europe to take the pressure off the battered Red armies and thus avoid complete disaster was urged by Soviet military experts in London.

Although the eleventh-hour arrival of thousands of crack Siberian troops at Stalingrad had enabled the Reds to throw fresh reserves against Marshal Von Bock's Nazi legions, the over-all picture remained somber. The need for a diversion elsewhere appeared as pressing as ever.

Soviet representatives in London were said to believe that Allied invasion of western Europe would draw 30 to 40 German divisions away from the Russian front.

Meanwhile as massed squadrons of the RAF had continued their smashes at German industrial centers in a "softening up" drive, Production Minister Oliver Lyttleton declared:

"We are approaching the breathless moment when, if Russia holds a few more weeks, the gathering forces of the greatest alliance the world has ever seen will give us the first evidences of victory."

Captain Lyttleton had predicted in July that the next 80 days would be the war's gravest.

LABOR DRAFT:

Looms for Millions

Approximately 18,000,000 Americans faced the possibility of being shifted, hired or replaced, as Paul V. McNutt, war manpower director, told congress that the national labor shortage is becoming so acute that compulsory home front service for both men and women appears inevitable.

McNutt said the nation must find 4,000,000 new workers between now and 1943 and that a large number necessarily must come from the ranks of women and of men either too old or too young for military service.

There were 57,000,000 persons employed in June, 1942, he said, and between 62,500,000 and 65,000,000 will be needed by December, 1943. There is no "evidence," he added, that labor reserves—including women, Negroes and other minority groups—would prove adequate.

The manpower chief said he believed "the mere existence of statutory power to force an individual to serve where he is needed" would be all that is necessary to establish a system of labor allocation that would help meet the problem.

FARM MACHINERY:

On Ration List

New farm machinery and equipment went on the rationed list when Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard signed an order in Washington. The present order applies to sales for the remainder of 1942. Mr. Wickard said a permanent order would be issued later governing 1943 sales and production.

The curtailment program was made necessary by military requirements, the secretary added.

"The temporary rationing system for 1942," he said, "is designed primarily to control the distribution of the limited supply of farm machinery and equipment now on hand and to assure its greatest possible contribution toward meeting the goals of our food-for-freedom program."

BRAZIL:

War in Earnest

Brazil showed that it meant business in its war against the Axis when President Getulio Vargas ordered general mobilization. With a population of 41,000,000, this nation represented the largest source of untapped military power in the Western hemisphere.

President Vargas' military decree ordered all Brazilians to take home-defense training. It instructed the government ministers and all other federal, state and municipal agencies to take measures dealing with military, economic, scientific and labor measures necessary to defense.

GETULIO VARGAS
. . . 41,000,000 to be tapped.

Already in force was compulsory military service for males between the ages of 21 and 45. Men between the ages of 21 and 30 were placed in the "first line" with all others placed in the "second line." Action against Axis submarines was being steadily taken by the Brazilian air force. Internment of Axis fifth-columnists had been accomplished and Axis-owned banks, insurance companies and other enterprises had been closed.

MORE CHICKENS:

To Supplement Meat

More chickens in every pot were forecast when Secrtary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard called on poultry raisers to produce 200,000,000 extra fowl this fall and winter to help counteract a prospective meat shortage for civilian use.

National poultry organizations estimated that 600,000,000 additional pounds of poultry could be produced for consumers if 200,000,000 birds were reared to a weight of three pounds each. Secretary Wickard was assured that poultrymen and farmers, utilizing existing brooder houses and other production equipment not normally used to capacity during the season would participate in the program.

MIDWAY AFTERMATH:

Taps for Yorktown

Part of the price America paid for victory over the Japs in the Battle of Midway became known when the navy announced that the aircraft carrier Yorktown had been sunk after the battle as a result of Japanese bombs and torpedo attacks.

Although it had been known that the 19,900 ton carrier was put out of action during the battle, the actual loss of the vessel had been a closely kept secret.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

LONDON: Home guards throughout England are to have live ammunition for training with the weapons they will use in the event of invasion, a war office communique said. Within the next few months, millions of rounds of ammunition will be released for rifles, Sten guns, Lewis and Browning machine guns and Spigot mortars with which home guards have been trained.

OTTAWA: No relaxation of prices in Canada and no compromise in the fight against an inflationary increase in prices in commodities will be tolerated, Donald Gordon, price control head, declared. Canada's counterpart of Leon Henderson issued the statement following rumors to the effect that a breathing spell might be accorded to admit an adjustment of prices.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

FOURTH TERM DATA

Not much has been said about it publicly, but already the question of the Fourth Term has come in for a lot of backstage discussion.

Republicans, worried about it, want to do everything possible to block it. And in the vicinity of the White House, some of those who would like to stay around indefinitely, want to do everything possible to encourage it.

But those closest to the President are convinced that there will be no Fourth Term. Even if he could get it, they say that this is the last thing Roosevelt wants.

Or even if there should be a tremendous demand on the part of the public against changing horses in midstream, they don't think the President would yield. His ideals for preservation of the democratic system are too deep-rooted, they say, for him to continue in office for what would be a total of 16 years.

However, the President does have one very definite political goal, and that is to retain control of congress during his two remaining years in office.

He remembers all too clearly, when he was assistant secretary of the navy, the chaos which the country faced when Woodrow Wilson lost control of the house of representatives. He also remembers the troubles faced by Herbert Hoover, Calvin Coolidge and his cousin Teddy Roosevelt when they faced a rebellious congress during their last two years in office.

So the President is out to win the house, and win it at all costs next November. To that end he will leave Washington—something he hasn't done since 1940—and take a swing through the Middle West some time in October.

* * *

JOBS TO REPUBLICANS

Some of FDR's political advisers, among them Democratic Chairman Ed Flynn, tell him privately that the battle to control the house in November will not be easy. One trouble is patronage.

Patronage is a word which may bring a bad smell to the public, but to the politician it is like the smell of raw meat to a circus lion. He will not perform without it.

Back in the early days of the New Deal, Jim Farley kept a little card index of how every congressman voted on important issues and what jobs he had received. When the congressman stopped voting right, he stopped getting jobs for his constituents. That system worked like a charm—for a while. But in recent years Roosevelt himself has given more and more jobs to Republicans, while Leon Henderson, the greatest job dispenser of war times, has placed everything in the hands of state governors, a large proportion of them Republicans.

So today, the President's political friends say that his definition of patronage is: "Something which you hold out to your friends, but use to reward your enemies."

And these friends have had the short end of the patronage stick for so long that, as November approaches, FDR is finding a lot of the old politicoes unwilling to go to bat for him, while the rewarded enemies won't stay put.

So the congressional elections are going to be tougher than a lot of people realize, and you will probably see certain seasoned political sea-dogs, among them Ed Flynn, resigning from the picture before many weeks are over.

Note: Patronage under the old congressional system had a lot of faults, but it was not half as bad as under the present dollar-a-year man system, where somebody gets a key WPB job or a cellophane commission merely because he is the friend of a big accounting firm or a partner of a Wall Street broker.

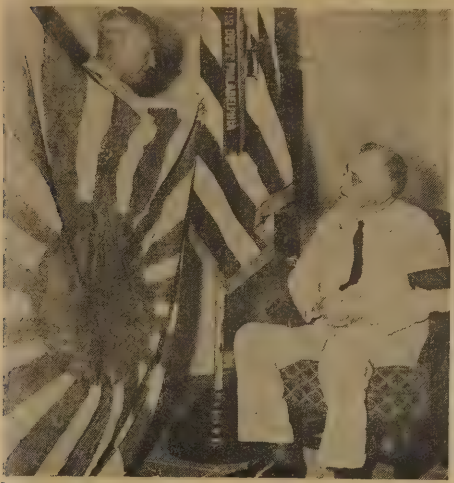
The President Refused to Touch It



President Roosevelt refused to receive—or to touch—a Japanese battle flag captured by U. S. marines during the raid on Makin island in the Pacific. Lieut. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the U. S. marine corps, brought the flag to the White House. The President told him to place it in the marine corps archives. Photo shows him looking at the flag.

West Coast Ship Builder Explains Program

Henry J. Kaiser, West coast ship builder, is pictured here (center) as he spoke with reporters after his meeting with Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production board. IN "WAKE ISLAND" Paramount has shown what a war picture ought to be; the truth was so dramatic that there was no need to dress it up with a fancy plot — and praise goes to the writers, W. R. Burnett and Frank Butler, and to Director John Farrow for letting that plot be as slight as possible. Farrow directed it superbly, the members of the cast did a memorable job. Pretty good cast, incidentally, including Brian Donlevy, Walter Abel, Robert Preston, Macdonald Carey and Albert Dekker. Don't miss it!

A word more about "Wake Island." It was first shown at the Quantico Marine base, with an audience of 2,000 marines, who cheered it wholeheartedly. That's the surest guarantee that there's nothing phoney about this very swell picture.

When you see "Seven Days' Leave," keep an eye on Marcy McGuire, if you're interested in stellar material. She plays a brat sister of Lucille Ball's, with a crush on Victor Mature. During filming, her part was "fattened" three times, so that she finally had two musical numbers of her own, and a comedy romance that wasn't in the original script.

Iona Reed, who's a stunt woman as well as Claire Trevor's stand-in in "The Desperadoes," has ridden horses that cowpunchers wouldn't mount, leaped from high cliffs, risked her neck in dozens of ways—but she balked at an assignment the other day. The script called for Claire to smoke a cigar; Iona was told to do it, and said "No." She can't even smoke a cigarette!

Porter Hall, who plays the thieving, double-crossing heavy in "The Desperadoes," has just been made a deacon in the First Presbyterian church of Hollywood. He's usually cast as a villain, but he's never owned a gun, since he served in the last war, he doesn't drink or gamble, he practically never smokes. Yet on the screen he stops at nothing.

Paramount has a file of what do you suppose? Cobwebs! Due to priorities, it's impossible now to get the liquid rubber of which movie cobwebs used to be made. The studio has quite a few murder mysteries, like "Street of Chance," coming along. So the prop department got busy, wove cobwebs out of the material on hand, and filed them away for reference.

Charles W. Koerner, head of RKO Radio production, has announced that "artistic and prestige films of dubious box-office merit" are out. Well, some of those "prestige" films were pretty dull. But a lot of really fine and profitable pictures would never have been made if that ruling had gone through years ago. We'd not have had "The Grapes of Wrath" or "Gone With the Wind" or "Pasteur" or a good many others that didn't look like money-makers before they were released.

Larry Elliott, announcer on Bob Hawks' "How Am I Doin'" air show, has landed the narrating assignment on Universal's new short entitled "How Canada Tracks Down Nazis."

Notes of an Innocent Bystander:

The Magic Lanterns: The cinema has gone to war, all the newcomers being armed to the teeth . . . "Wake Island" is one of the most meritorious of the battle stories. It sticks to the grim facts of the case, with no sugary heroics. It shows the marines are a tough and glorious outfit even with their backs to the wall. Brian Donlevy, Robert Preston, MacDonald Carey, et al, snap it up . . . "The World at War" is a newsreel catalogue of all the outrages the easy-going world overlooked for a decade. It shows the snatch of Manchuria as the first act of a Jap plan of stick-up that built up to the surprise of Pearl Harbor . . . "Across the Pacific" is hairy-chested meller of the spy school Humphrey Bogart, Mary Astor and Sidney Greenstreet, the aces of "The Maltese Falcon," are reunited here to give your spine another fast workout. Here again the Japs perform their familiar role of sneaks . . . "Berlin Correspondent" means well, but it's as far-fetched as anything to come out of that town since Goebbels opened up his free service to the dopier U. S. newspapers.

The Wireless: Ambass. Grew didn't fool around with any pep talk in his report from Tokyo. The Japs are tough, he warned, and won't quit till they're carried out. The ambassador seemed a little gloomy about the way too many of us are pretending the war is no worse than a bad cold . . . Rex Stout deserves the biggest public. His propaganda spiels are tip-top. There is moxie in his voice as well as his wordage . . . The Goebbels gabble now being broadcast to the Nazis urges them to "forget how to be unbiased and just" and work up more hate for the enemy, especially the Britons. Telling Nazis how to be unjust is as unnecessary as telling skunks how to smell.

The Story Tellers: Frank Kingdon takes care of the isolationists who got patriotic after Pearl Harbor. In "Dangers of a False Peace," in Free World, he points out they kept bleating "peace" and "ignored every voice that cried of our danger from those who kill and enslave civilians as well as soldiers." And there are those who are running for congress on a platform of that same ignorance! . . . Elsie McCormick reports "Boston's Fight Against Rumors" in the Mercury. It is very odd—very odd, indeed—that so many bits of chit-chat, calculated to disturb us in war time, can be traced back to the Nazi shortwavers . . . Pic's editorial, "Coughlin on Parade," is crowded with dynamite.

Clark Gable has been praised by the army and the press for doing it The Hard Way—nevertheless, Clark is receiving some nasty letters from females throughout the land . . . Claiming that The Hard Way "isn't starting in as Corporal" . . . The fact is this: Any man entering the Officer Candidate School in Miami Beach is made a corporal at once. The army does this so that every man starts off equal . . . However, as soon as a man begins classes he loses the temporary rating assigned him at the induction and from then on, until his graduation, he is addressed simply as "Mr." . . . In short, he is not Corporal Gable, but Mr. Gable . . . If and when he graduates he will come out a 2nd Lt. . . . In the last war, Gable probably doesn't recall, being a 2nd Looey was really doing it The Hard Way . . . The quip then went: "What's your idea of a good time, soldier?" . . . "My idea of a good time," was the retort, "is watching a boatload of 2nd Lieutenants sinking!"

Typewriter Ribbons: James Cozzens Gould: He had a mind that hit and ran and got away . . . Ann Hunt: Better to carry the torch of liberty and truth than have it come up and burn you from behind . . . Margaret Culkin Banning: The fire burnt out and slept in its own ashes . . . Correction: Kay Riley should have had the credit for: It's a wise bride who knows whether it's Cupid or Conscription . . . Austin O'Malley: It's twice as hard to crush a half truth than a whole lie . . . Time: Shoebrush-mustached Tom Dewey . . Margaret L. Runbeck: The baby opened her little pink mitten of a hand . . . R. L. Stevenson: She sat around sipping the conversation with her eyes . . . M. R. Eliot: She looks for trouble as if it paid her a salary . . . R. L. Martens: Criticism is what you get when you have everything else.

Eleven others from Rudy Vallee's orchestra are following him into the service . . . Petitions seeking 10,000 signatures are being circulated among sporting circles here in behalf of former boxer Ernie Haas, doing 20 years for murdering a Nazi attache. He wants his freedom to join the Canadian Commandos. He's Canuck . . . James True, the Washington "publicist" (as he prefers to call himself) who has been exploited in Time and elsewhere for his Fascist comments—has opened offices in midtown Manhattan.

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won countrywide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

Entered in the Postoffice at Clanton, Alabama, as second -class matter under the Act of Congress of March, 1897
MRS MARK L. TUCKER, Owner
R. M. TUCKER, Managing Editor
The Defense of American Freedom is our First Consideration

Alabama placed first in the Nation in War Bond Sales month-before-last. but last month she didn't do so good she dropped to tenth place. That's mighty good, but now that we know that we can do better, let's go.

Senator Tom Heflin still has the ability to draw large crowds. He packed the Courthouse here last Friday afternoon. It goes without saying that he made a fine speech.

The Editorial writers are taking those 10,000 strikers in Mobile, who walked out because of a nickle ferry fare, for a ride. One called them "nickle patriots", which we think very appropriate.

"MIGHTY WILL BE OUR PLOWSHARES"

"Today we produce to destroy, but tomorrow we will produce to build." These were the words of Dr. Charles M. A. Stine at a recent meeting of the American Chemical Society as he described the new vistas to be opened to America after this war is won.

In a thousand and one chemical laboratories throughout America chemists are discovering new continents of matter at such a rapid pace under the pressure of war that "the world of 1940 has already become an antiquity," he said.

"The inconceivables of only two years ago are today's realities. The war is compressing into the space of months developments which might have taken a half a century to realize if necessity had not forced the pace.

"These pressures are unprecedented. The developments are unprecedented. Give us a victorious peace and the freedom of enterprise it should guarantee, and our progress will be unprecedented. Let our swords be mighty and mighty indeed will be our plowshares."

WAKE UP CHILTON COUNTY

It seems for some reason or other that the people of Chilton County cannot realize the necessity of entering wholeheartedly into the business of an ALL-OUT attitude toward winning this war.

It is true that up until now we have gone over our War Bond quota every month, which puts our county at the top in War Bond sales and speaks well for our leaders in this work. This, of course, is commendable.

But what about all the other drives that have been undertaken and absolutely flopped? A good example is our Scrap Drive. The County Chairman, Earl Gore, and the committee have worked hard and long trying to get the people; men, women, boys and girls to bring in their scrap metal, but to no avail.

Wake up, let us each and everyone understand that it is absolutely necessary that we gather all the scrap that we can and turn in to the nearest Scrap Depot.

Saturday of this week is Chilton County Scrap Rally Day. Prepare now to devote that day to turning all of your scrap over to the County Committee so that they can turn it over to the Government so that the government can turn it over to the ammunition makers so that they can turn it over to our soldiers, sailors and marines so that they can blast the living daylights out of those blankety, blank Japs.

Whats Doing At Isabella High

By Jesse Culp

The Isabella Mustangs began their football season this year with a somewhat backward score when the West Blocton eleven roamed over them for a 13 to 6 victory last Friday night. That doesn't necessarily hamper these boys, any, however, for they are good enough sports to take defeats as well as victories.

Isabella's only touchdown was scored with Bill Grooms blocking a punt, and Thomas Kelley toting the ball. The writer predicts that you will hear more from these boys in the future. Keep an eye on them.

That fun-packed annual event, the F. F. A. initiation program, was held at the Isabella Agriculture building Monday night (September 21). 13 Greenhand candidates were admitted into the Isabella Chapter.

The event was immensly enjoyed by all present (especially the old members who did the initiating). After all the new boys had received their "bumping", soft drinks were served to everyone present.

The following boys were awarded Greenhand degrees: Clyde Green, C. F. Gandy, Harold Evans, John D. Nix, Earl Wilkins, Bill Matthews, Jerome Conway, Hershel Patterson, Calvin Rasberry, William Henderson, Junior Sims, Hershel Wright, and Arthur Tucker.

Isabella likes her red-heads. For example, Roy Davis, who was captian of the football squad for two consecutive years, and Robert Cummings who is the captian this year. Then, there is another red-headed Cummings boy who plays good ball, too. Anyone who plays good football is popular around here, eh girls?? . . . Oh yes, the blondes are ok, too. For instance "Miss Isabella" alias Kathryn Wilkins whom we know as the "blondest of all blondes" . . . We know how to sympathize with the students who have to throw away their gum in study hall-we've tried it.

What about our P.-T. A. organization this year? We haven't heard anything about it thus far. Let's really get behind it this year and put it over in a big way. Last year parents around Isabella didn't show as much interest in P.-T. A. work as they should have.

It is very essential that parents take part in this, so come on, you parents, whaddaya say?

Oops, the bell is ringing, so I'll have to scram. See you later, when the periods get longer.

HOPEWELL BAPTIST CHURCH EXTENDS THANKS

The pastor and members of the Hopewell Baptist Church wish to express their sincere thanks and appreciation to Mr. R. M. Roper for his gift of $15.00 this year and $10.00 last year, total $25.00. The gift was donated to the church at a time when it was much needed. We believe Mr. Roper is our friend and our protection and we thank him for his personal interest in our welfare. We want to assure him that we are ready to serve him whenever we can. We pray that God's blessings will foollow him.

Chilton County Training School

What? Victory Gardens. By Whom. All men, women, boys and girls in all walks of life.

When? Now is the time to plant and contnue for the duration.

Where? On your farms, in your backyards in all urban centers and cities.

Thereis a continuous cry for the farm boy, girl, man, and woman as well as the same group in the cities and towns to use their backyards for the production of poultry and most especially vegetables. The growing period of the different vegetables should be your guide in arranging your planting schedule. Study your first killing frosts for the fall and the last killing frosts in the spring. Let us use the tendergreen for example: this vegetable will produce a crop in 25 days, therefore, you could plant in the first week in November and have a chance to make a crop of tendergreens.

There are other vegetables that you could plant with a life span of 35 or 40 days. The list of vegetables that can be planted now is as follows: Bush beans, Beets, Broccoli, Cabbage, Carrot, Cauliflower, Collards, Kale, Mustard, Onion (sets), Radish (white icicle), Tendergreens, and Turnips(seven top, purple top, etc.).

Encourage your boys and girls to grow a good fall garden for home use and for sale to get money tobuy War Saving Stamps.

Lets take a glimpse at the main farm program for a moment. There is a shortage of Nitrogen and all farmers are urged to start now with their Winter Legumes to get sufficient growth that your nitrogen and organic matter supply may be increased by the turning of a heavy foliage. I am sure that you are going to put first things first in all phases of your farm program and those first things are the planting of your fall garden and winter legumes, NOW.

Put forth all efforts to bring about an early defeat of the Axis forces. We can do this by buying stamps and bonds; planting fall gardens, so, "Let's Keep'em Eating".

TIMMERMAN-MOODY WEDDING

The marriage ceremony of Blanche Timmerman of Port Arthur, Texas, and Arthur Whipple Moody of New York, N. Y. was solemnized Tuesday September 15, at 8 p.m. in the Harding College auditorium in Searcy, Ark. with Minister Batsell Baxter officiating.

Both the bride and broom were students at Harding for the past two years. Miss Temmerman was active in both music nd newspaper work. Mr. Moody was a transfer from Columbia University, New York City. At Harding Moody was editor of the college paper The Bison.

Before the ceremony Don Harrison, Fort Smith, Arkansas, sang Moore's "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms." Mrs. Florence Fletcher Jewell, Williford, Ark., played the traditional wedding march.

The bride entered with Ward K. Halbert, New York City. Her gown was white; the blouse was of embroidered chiffon with a v-neck. The full marquisette skirt fell from a rosebud decorated yoke. Her finger-tip veil of illusion fell from a star-studded cornet of lace. She carried a large bouquet of dahlias, tube-roses, and asters.

Mildred Gainer, Florence, Ala., college roommate of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a pink chiffon gown with lace inserts in the skirt. The bodice had a lace insert and a square neck. She carried pink dahlias.

Edythe Tipton, Manilla, Akr., the only other bridesmaid, wore an asua taffetta dress with a sweetheart neck and a fitted waist yoke which gave way to a full skirt. She also carried pink callias.

Jack Nadeau, Tulare, California, served as best man. Mac Timmerman brother of the bride, was the only usher.

Five year old Glen Dewey Stapleton was the ring bearer. He was dressed in a white satin suite and carried the ring on a large aster.

Directly after the wedding, the bride and groom left for Penalosa, Kansas, where they will make their home. Mr. Moody will be minister for the Church of Christ there.

What's Doing At Chilton County Hi

By Major Snoopy

This is the fourth week of school here the excitement's over and things have already settled down.

The senior class elected some mighty good class officers Monday. They are Lamar Teel, President Mary Nell Honeycutt, Vice-President and Jean Waite, Secretary and Treasurer. It's off with a good start and I'm hoping it continues so.

Well, the "little buzzing" I've been hearing and the campaigning that has been going on can stop now. The cheerleaders have been elected! Guess who they are??!! They are no others but Elbert Griffin, as head cheerleader (remember him from last year?), Helen Cox, Jerry Alred, Billy Garrett, as his assistants. We're expecting some good games and plenty of cheering. That reminds me—don't miss our first football game Friday nite at eight o'clock. We're playing Comer High School from Sylacauga and it's expected to be a plenty good game. The band of C.C.H.S. and its eight strutting majorettes will be there doin' their stuff. This is very confidenual just between you and me you know so don't breathe a word of it, but I hear they've got a good act to put on at the half of the game. I'm really looking forward to it

Here's some more business that is going to be settled some time this week—that's president of the Student Council. He must come from the senior class, make good scholastic grades, and must have a bunch more qualifications. Wonder who will have honor of holding this office for the semester ????? I'll tell you next week just as soon as I find out, so be looking right here.

Here's some information about the football boys on the first team I thought you'd like to know, also the schedule.

RESOLUTION ADOPTED BY DEFENSE COUNCIL

Non-essential use of automobiles during the war emergency was condemned in a resolution adopted by the Alabama State Defense Council, which also recommended discontinuance for the duration of all conventions which do not deal directly with the war effort.

Calling attention to the vital importance of motor transportation in the present crisis, and to the fact that pleasure driving and other non-essential use of automotive esuipment is still being indulged in, the Defense Council, at a recent meeting in Gov. Frank Dixon's office unanimously adopted the following resolution:

WHEREAS, it is evident to all thinking citizens that the national production effort, both agricultural and industrial, is heavily dependent upon the maintenance of automotive transportation facilities sufficient for essential purposes, and

WHEREAS, it is well known that the rubber situation is extremely acute and that an additional supply of rubber will not be forthcoming for many months, thus making it necessary to most prudently conserve our existing tires, and

WHEREAS, it is equally well known that much pleasure driving and other use of automotive transportation facilities which is not essential to the national war effort is being done and since a breakdown of essential automotive transportation facilities is likely to result in consequences amounting to a national disaster

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED by the Alabama State Defense Council that through this resolution which is to be published thoughout the State of Alabama that this Council stands unequivocably opposed to any non-essential use of any automotive equipment, and in particular that this Council stands opposed to the holding in the future of any conventions, meetings, or conferences which do not deal directly with the national war effort, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that in the light of the above facts and the position of this Council that each and every society, association, or organization in Alabama, whether professional or social is asked to critically reexamine the absolute necessity for holding any statewide meetings, conventions or conferences for the duration, and if possible to cancel such meetings and transact the business by other methods.

Elkmont and Ardmore high schools, Limestone County, have dropped football for the duration of the war.

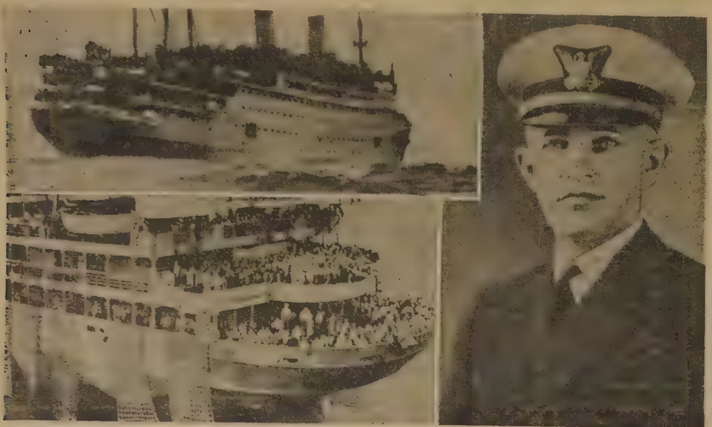
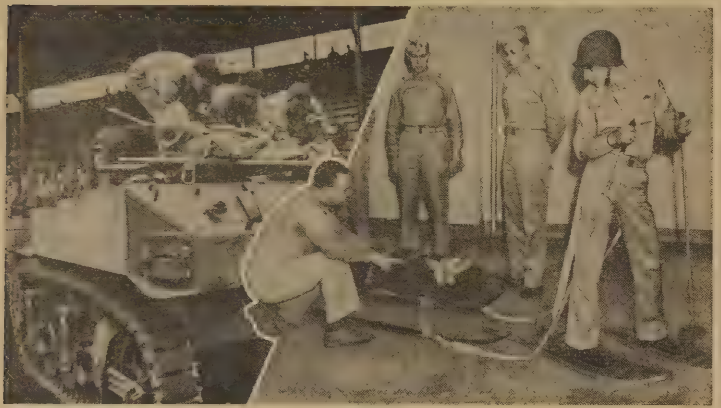
U. S. Transport 'Wakefield' Burns at Sea



The former luxury liner, Manhattan, now a naval transport ship and renamed the Wakefield, caught fire and was severely damaged at sea. More than 1,600 passengers and crew members were removed without loss of life by U. S. warships in the convoy. In the upper left the Wakefield is shown at sea, and at right is its commander, H. G. Bradbury. In lower left, passengers and crewmen are shown jammed on rear decks awaiting rescue. Notice the rope nets which were used to climb to the deck of rescue vessel. (Navy photos.)

Unsung Heroes of Medical Corps Play Important Role



One of the most ticklish jobs which men of the U. S. army medical corps are called upon to undertake is the removal of wounded men from the inside of tanks. The method of this removal may mean life or death to the casualty. At the left you see trainees from the medical corps field service school at Carlisle, Pa., engaged in the task. The man has been successfully removed through the tank turret and is being placed on a stretcher atop the tank. At right you see a demonstration of a method of transforming a pair of skis into a smooth-running litter for transporting a wounded man over the snow.

Commando Tactics at Harding Field, La.

Soldiers are undergoing a special training course in Commando tactics at Harding Field, La. Here we see a soldier about to leave the jumping tower and dive into a blazing pool of water. The soldiers are taught to swim with a modified breast stroke, splashing water in front of them to protect them from the flames. The tower from which they leap is 20 feet high, the approximate distance of a transport's deck from the water. In case of a torpedoing, the soldiers would have to dive into the flaming water with their full packs and swim for shore.

The Axis boasted that a floating drydock they had sunk at an Egyptian port would never be raised. Capt. Edward Ellsburg, U.S.N., confounded them by raising the drydock in record time. He is shown here in an official auto in Egypt.

Feast for Fall Days—Baked Beans
(See Recipes Below.)

Pulling Purse Strings

Today, let's talk about budgets. Food budgets in particular, because they will be a major item in your life the next few months as prices slowly edge upwards, as the days slip into fall and winter and the summer bargains in foods become fewer and you have to do more juggling with figures to give your family the right food, at the best possible prices.

If you are Mrs. Average America, you will be more nutrition conscious this year than last, too. This will be not only because nutrition news has sprinted into the limelight, but because the demands of wartime living upon energy have become so great that you will have to have right foods to do your most and your best.

But, how can budgeting help you to serve "right" meals, you ask. That's simple. Buy the right foods with your dollars and you can't help serving meals that are correctly balanced.

First, divide the food dollar into fifths. One-fifth, or 20 cents, should go for vegetables and fruits. Use the next fifth for milk and cheese. The third of the fifths goes for the basis of your important meals—meats, eggs and fish.

Another fifth will be set aside for breads and cereals, while the very last 20 cents is allowed for accessory items such as butter, fats, sugar, tea, coffee and spices.

General Guide.

The 20-cent rule is not a hard and fast rule. It is only a general guide because prices of the different groups of food vary from season to season, from section to section. Use your judgment in spending.

Perhaps you get milk from the milkman, vegetables from the peddler who comes to your back door three times a week, eggs from the farm, and meat from a favorite butcher. Or, you may get all your food from one place. There is no one way to shop. Pick out what the best way is from the facilities available, but be sure to investigate those facilities before you fall into one pattern.

Shopping Carefully.

Conservation's an important note in these times. And it's mighty important in this fascinating business of stocking up the pantry. If you plan meals for, say three days, or better still, a week in advance, you will not be trotting up to the store twice every day, or calling up your grocer whose time is at a premium and whose delivery facilities have been cut in the midst of cake baking to tell him you simply must have vanilla. Make out lists, and then shop . . . for everything you need at one time.

When the snap of autumn gets into the air, use pumpkin, squash and Concord grapes. When the drifts of snow pile lightly against your door or the weather gets at least uncomfortably cold, use root vegetables and those canned goods in the canning cupboard. In spring, strawberries, asparagus, and broilers should grace your menu. What I mean, is, serve foods-in-season! It's more than economy, it's food at its best!

Cheese Bargains.

Right in line with buying what is most economical at present are the bargains you can find in cheese. Cheese is much more than something you put between slices of bread or the golden orange wedge you serve with pie or crackers. It is the most economical source of protein and as such can be used as an excellent meat substitute.

Easily digestible and easily blending with almost every kind of food, it makes even the simplest dish a distinctive one because of the flavor it imparts to it. And remember, you'll get not only protein when you use it, but those other essential diet necessities like phosphorus, calcium, iron, and vitamins B, D and G.

As American as apple pie, are the American cheese stocks which we now have on hand. You'll be kind to your budget if you make use of some of these ideas:

Cheese and Baked Beans.
(Serves 6)

- 1 large can baked beans
- 1 cup American cheese, grated
- 1 cup grated bread
- 1 tablespoon chopped green peppers
- 2 tablespoons chopped celery
- 1 teaspoon chopped onion

Place beans in baking dish. Then add all other ingredients and three slices lean bacon over top of dish. Bake 30 minutes at 250 degrees.

Tuna and Cheese Souffle.
(Serves 6)

- 1 cup scalded milk
- 1 cup soft bread crumbs
- ½ cup grated American cheese
- 1 cup flaked tuna
- 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
- ⅓ teaspoon salt
- 3 egg yolks
- 3 egg whites
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice

Combine milk with bread crumbs and grated cheese. Flake tuna and add lemon juice, pimiento, salt and well-beaten yolks. Beat egg white stiff but not dry and fold into mixture. Turn into a buttered casserole, set in a pan of water and bake in a moderately slow (325-degree) oven 40 minutes or until golden brown.

Sugar-saving apple recipes do delightful things to fall menus, and help you get the mellow, autumn note in meals. This revives eating interest:

Honey Apple Crisp
(Serves 6)

- 4 cups sliced apples
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- ½ cup honey
- ½ cup flour
- ¼ cup brown sugar
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup butter
- ¼ cup walnuts, if desired

Spread sliced apples in a shallow baking dish, sprinkle with sugar, lemon juice and pour honey over all. In a bowl mix flour, brown sugar and salt and work in butter to make crumbly mixture. Spread crumbs evenly over apples (and nuts) and bake in a moderate oven (370 degrees) for 30 to 40 minutes until apples are tender and crust crisply browned. Serve with plain or whipped cream.

What problems or recipes are most on your mind during these fall days? Explain your problem to Lynn Chambers and she will give you expert advice on it. Address your letters, enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope for your reply, to her as Miss Lynn Chambers, Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Illinois.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: Best of bargains are found in American cheddar cheese at the present time. Production for the first five months of this year was over 50 per cent greater than for that corresponding period last year.

Apples, absent from the markets and fruit stalls during the summer, in greater quantities, are coming into their own now. Apples and honey are food affinities and will help you with sugar rationed.

Fall's bounty will also include squash, grapes, and pumpkins which add economy notes and flavorsome touches to menus.

Are You Needlessly Suffering Constipation?

Many people think that constipation is "one of those things" you must put up with. That the only thing you can do is take a purge or cathartic—and hope it doesn't come soon again. How foolish that is if you, like millions of others, have the ordinary kind of constipation that's due to lack of "bulk" in the diet.

Kellogg's All-Bran is probably just what you need! This crisp, delicious cereal has the "bulk"-forming properties your intestines need to function "regularly"! It gets at the cause of your trouble and corrects it — helps you get back to normal, easy elimination. Eat All-Bran regularly, drink plenty of water, and help free yourself from constipation. All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not helped by this simple treatment, it's wise to see a doctor.

Wings for Glider Pilots

Victory Parade

Before a student makes his first solo flight in simulated glider landing an instructor carefully checks with him to make sure that he knows just what to do. Here an instructor goes over "dead stick" landing rules with the pre-glider student.

NEWEST winged warriors of the army air forces are the G-men of the air—glider pilots—who will guide our huge troop-carrying gliders in the fore of democracy's great aerial offensive against the enemy. Gliding, until recently the sport of a few, has now become the serious war business of thousands of young men who are training to become glider pilots. Typical of the eighteen pre-glider schools now in full operation in the Middle West is the one located on the flatlands of Goodland, Kansas.

During the four weeks of preliminary training the student practices simulated gliding in small power ships, with the power switched off. He masters the technique of "dead stick" landing and in bringing his powerless plane down within a small marked area. In actual combat he will be called upon to cut loose from the towing plane thousands of feet up and miles away from his objective behind enemy lines. From then on he is on his own.

Glider pilot students leaving the operations office of the school, with parachutes strapped on.

RESERVED FOR WINGS

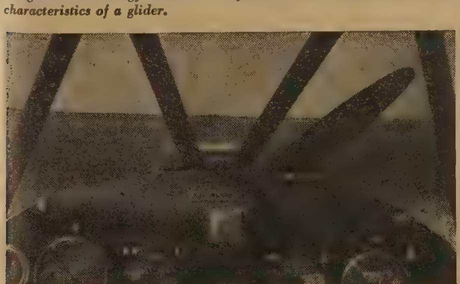
The space marked reserved is for the army air forces silver insignia wings with a glider imposed.

This glider pilot training in the army air forces is open to men between the ages of 18 and 36, inclusive, who are graduates of civil pilot training schools, or who hold a civil aeronautics administration private air-man certificate which had not lasped prior to January 1, 1941, or to former aviation cadets with at least fifty hours in army or navy type training planes, or veterans of at least two hundred glider flights.

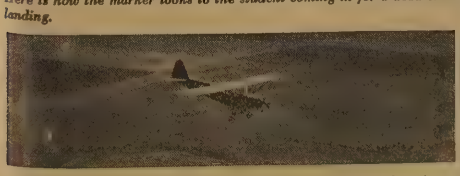
Men who have had no previous flight training will be given an opportunity to qualify for glider pilot training if they are accepted for a complete special primary flight training in a civil aeronautics administration school.

These pictures depict stages of the training given at Goodland, Kansas.

Before the students are ready to make simulated glider landings, they are given meteorology and other subjects. Here students are shown the characteristics of a glider.



The idea is to land the glider as near as possible to this white marker. Here is how the marker looks to the student coming in for a dead stick landing.



Made from another plane flying alongside the students, this picture shows the training plane just as the glider pilot turned off the switch for a gliding approach to one of the auxiliary landing fields.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—Lieut. Gen. Bernard Law Montgomery, as commander of Britain's Eighth army, is in supreme command of Allied forces in Egypt, contesting Nazi Field Marshal Rommel's second major bid for the valley of the Nile. While General Montgomery won the DSO in World War I, he is a newcomer to headlines or citations in this war, having been a divisional commander in Palestine.

He's 'Cal Coolidge' Of the British High Command

He is known as a cautious, reticent officer, highly esteemed in Downing street, according to meager accounts available here, for his tact and skill in allaying political unrest in Palestine and in neutralizing among the Arabs the clamor for a Jewish army to fight with the Allies.

On November 18 of last year, there was an army shakeup in which General Montgomery succeeded Lieut. Col. Bernard C. Paget as chief of the Southeastern command. He is only 55 years old and at the time of this transfer British newspapers noted with satisfaction that the army was calling on its "younger men."

In the years between the big wars, he was busy with staff work, said to be one of the keenest students of traditional warfare, and became a divisional commander with the start of this war. He assumed command of the Eighth army August 18. He is slight of person and sharp-featured, rarely on record with a definite commitment and never has been known to go off the deep end or get out on a limb.

Born the son of the Rt. Rev. H. H. Montgomery, he entered the army in 1908, and fought through World War I as a battalion major.

◆

AT THE Versailles Peace conference, a pretty Chinese girl, one of the secretaries of the Chinese delegation, made an earnest plea to the conference. She urged it not to award the Province of Shantung to Japan, insisting, almost tearfully, that this would open the way for Japanese aggression that would some day "destroy the peace of the world."

A 'Mrs. Miniver' Who's Citizen of China and World

She was then the first and only Chinese woman to hold the degree doctor of laws, and is today Mme. Sourmay Tcheng Wei, wife of China's new ambassador to Washington, Dr. Wei Tao-ming. Slender, smartly dressed, speaking several languages fluently and correctly, she takes rank with Mme. Chiang Kai-shek and other cultured and brilliant Chinese women who have first come to the attention of this country in the war years.

She might be considered a Chinese Mrs. Miniver, who could discuss bombs from first-hand knowledge at an embassy tea party. She not only has dodged them but has used them.

It was in the revolution that established the Chinese republic that this modish little lady was a bomb-toter. Her father was a high official of the Manchu government. She stepped across ancient lines of class and tradition to fight with the young Chinese, and her special assignment was transporting and distributing bombs. Thus aiding old China to blast its way into the modern world, she helped form the new government and then, realizing that she and China needed modern intellectual equipment, she went to Paris and took her law degree at the Sorbonne. This, she later explained, was due to her deep conviction that any enlightened person of today should be a citizen of the world as well as of her own country. She now says she considers herself a citizen of the world.

There might be an idea there—an elite of world citizenry, after the war, recruited by rigorous tests of humane intelligence, forming a nucleus of world co-operation, without recreance to any given sovereignty.

Again, like the Minivers, Mme. Wei and her husband saw their house bombed piecemeal, and dodged behind trees and rocks in the woods to avoid the machine gun bullets of the Japanese bombers. Her embassy teatime talk about war and peace, if and when given, will not merely be academic. Her husband, who studied law at the University of Paris, and who is a former mayor of Nanking, comes to Washington from Vichy, where he was sent, as ambassador, last year. Mme. Wei speaks English with a slight French accent, having studied it in Paris.

NANA WNU Service

JUST how much training and hard driving can the human system stand? When it comes to a matter of lifting a human being to peak form, training is one of the most subtle of all the arts. It is a job that calls for expert treatment.

Grantland Rice

For example, I was talking about this with Col. Bob Neyland, head coach of the army team. Colonel Neyland knows what condition means as well as anyone I've run across.

"The point you have to watch," he said, "is the human limit. You can't afford to pass that point. In my many years of coaching I've seen squads brought up to 80 per cent efficiency when it came to blocking or tackling. When we tried to lift this 80 per cent to 85 per cent by harder work and longer time, on almost every occasion the squad would drop back to 75 per cent or even 70 per cent. They were willing enough to give all they had, but physical and mental fatigue would leave its poison and the extra work was worse than wasted. It was harmful."

Football and War

If this goes for football, it also goes for training needed in war. A good many people, knowing that war is a tougher game than football, or any other game ever invented, can't understand why a soldier shouldn't be worked from daybreak reveille to nightfall. They can't see why any recreation is needed.

But those who know their business in the army and navy understand the cracking point.

When anyone is packed with mental and physical fatigue, there must be resting spots, as every good trainer knows. After that point he can't absorb any further development in skill or condition for the time being.

This is why both the army and navy have been smart in getting so many physical conditioners who know what should be done.

Golf, for another example, is not a killing game. But a fatigued golfer is rarely any good. The message that comes from a tired brain to tired nerves and muscles is always badly blurred.

The Surest System

The surest system is to start training kids from 13 to 16 years of age. They can be trained to walk from 10 to 12 miles a day. As they get a little older this can be lifted to 15 miles or 20 miles. We have too many hundreds of thousands of boys from 13 to 16 who have known far too little leg work. At that age body contact should be light, to be increased from year to year.

Someone was smart enough in both Germany and Japan to start training these younger boys as far back as 10 years ago. Standing before the Army-Redskin game in the Los Angeles Coliseum a few weeks ago several of us from the top tower looked down on the Olympic swimming stadium, recalling Jap swimmers from 14 to 16 years of age winning distant swimming events. These youngsters had been started at the age of nine or ten. Some of them were among the Jap troops that swam to Hong Kong.

I have mentioned before about the hundreds of thousands of German kids from 12 to 16 who were in hard training all over Germany during the 1936 Olympic games. In this respect both Germany and Japan, knowing the inevitability of a war they were going to start, made this youth training a national plan.

This youth training isn't a matter of surmise, but a matter of fact and of record. I still recall an old Southern Civil war poem to Little Giffen of Tennessee. Part of it ran like this—

"Smitten with grapeshot and gangrene—
Sixteenth battle—and he fourteen."

The Only Way

Almost every athlete of any importance started his game as a kid. You never develop stars who start after 25 or 30.

Bob Jones began playing golf at the age of eight. Jack Dempsey was street-fighting at the age of 10. Babe Ruth was playing baseball at 11.

You never make the Big League starting some game after 20. The knack comes to younger minds and younger muscles—to kids who came along to championships later on.

If this is true in sport, it must be true in many phases of combat work in war—flying, marching, shooting, swimming, parachute jumping—any part of the war games that calls for skill and stamina. So far this has been overlooked in this country.

For the army or navy I'd much rather have a 16-year-old boy than a civilian beyond 30 or 35. The latter are game enough. They will have just as much courage. But they can't have that unbeatable gift of youth—so much more easily taught, so much more effective when the showdown arrives.

Speeding and driving on the wrong side of the road made up more than two-thirds of the 1,102 traffic violations charged against 960 drivers involved in 1,189 accidents investigated by the State Highway Patrol the first half of this year. Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

American youngsters when visited by Santa Claus next Christmas time will find that the war has had a decided effect on their playthings. This was demonstrated at the 40th annual toy fair held under the auspices of the Toy Manufacturers of the United States. As a result of the co-operation of the manufacturers with the country's defense efforts, the exhibits demonstrated a sweeping simplification of lines with a reduction of individual items averaging 50 per cent. Non-critical war materials have been substituted wherever possible and to bring about additional conservation of materials, lighter weight construction and simplified packaging have been developed in all toy lines. Also orders are being accepted on a "when and if" basis.

A woman visitor in one of the city's oldest, swankiest and most conservative clubs, the other afternoon made a discovery which puzzled her no end. On one of the marble wash basins, she found a child's size washboard and brush which apparently were kept there permanently.. Knowing that none of the club members was at an age where dolls had any appeal, she couldn't figure out the presence of toys in such surroundings. Finally, she made inquiries and after awhile, obtained the information she sought. It seems that the washboard and brush are the property of a very wealthy but somewhat eccentric member of the club who keeps them in the washroom so that they will be handy whenever she desires to scrub her money.

Coming down Broadway in a taxi at theater time the other evening, there was some congestion near 54th street. When we at last resumed our journey, our driver swung well out in the middle of the street to avoid a taxi which was double parked. There was a driver, but he was slumped down in the seat and snoring peacefully. Our driver informed us that that often happened; the wheel that often, when they make a living, spend such long hours at the wheel that often, when they make a stop, they drop off to sleep. As we proceeded on our way, we saw a cop leave his post and go back, evidently to awaken the sleeper.

A husband and wife, who live at the Biltmore, had made all arrangements for an extended vacation at a highly recommended hotel in Greensboro, S. C. Railroad tickets were bought and reservations made. Then came a wire with the information that the reservations could not be held. Reason: "The government is taking over the Hotel as an adjunct to the airfield and wants immediate possession." So the holiday-takers had to look up another hotel. And that might be a tip to those contemplating trips—first find a place the government doesn't want.

Out-of-towners who go to nightclubs while in New York, may be interested in the fact that part of the check presented to them by the ever-expectant waiter at the end of the evening, goes to pay for food and liquor never ordered or consumed. Even the most verdant visitor of course knows that New York has "clip joints" where the size of the check depends largely on the degree of sobriety of the customer or whether he looks like a "fall guy." But it is not generally known outside of the city—Broadway of course is quite well aware of it—that in perfectly respectable places, especially the swank spots, patrons pay for what they do not get. The reason is the "cuffo" list. That is, those who are entertained by the management at no cost to themselves, except possibly tips.

Maybe the Horse Is Here to Stay Now

LOS ANGELES.—Back at the turn of the century L. P. Willis, blacksmith, wondered like many other people whether the "horseless carriage" was here to stay.

So he has maintained his shop for horse-shoeing purposes.

Now with tires rationed and autos out of manufacture he wonders if he was right.

Yank Wants Return Bout With Japanese

Helped China as Bomber in Sino-Jap War.

SHEPPARD FIELD, TEXAS.—Dana Dodge wants to get a crack at the Japs, but it will be a return bout for him.

A private for Uncle Sam now, the serious-eyed Dodge flew as a major with the Chinese air force and used to bomb Japanese troops by dropping buckets of hand grenades on them. He is at this technical air corps center awaiting transfer to bombardier school.

Reading of the exploits of American fliers in Burma, he recalls his old outfit—"as romantic a squadron as ever you'd find."

They came from all lands to fight at Chungking and nothing was asked of their past except their ability to fly and shoot.

Dodge left the University of California with 14 others at the behest of a Chinese friend.

In China he was a machine gunner and bombardier with fliers whose equipment was 80 obsolete planes. Their duty was to protect thousands of square miles of Chinese territory.

"The planes had fewer instruments than a modern trainer," he said. "It took pilots with nerve and ability to fly them. China was fighting alone then and had to use anything available."

Dodge returned from China impressed with the courage and ingenuity of the Chinese. Almost without armament production—after losing their coastal cities—the Chinese fought a well-equipped army to a standstill.

"Sure, thousands of Chinese died," Dodge said, "but life is cheap in China and people are thinking of saving their country, not their lives. I never met a Chinese who wouldn't gladly die if he were sure of taking a Jap with him."

Courses of Pills Are Charted by Scientists

IOWA CITY, IOWA.—The secret of how a pill knows where to go to stop the pain is out. The pill doesn't know where to go.

It is for this reason that scientists in the University of Iowa pharmaceutical laboratories are working on experiments to perfect a new pill coating which will resist stomach digestion until it passes into the intestinal tract where it is needed.

Dean Rudolph A. Kuever says that mechanical stomachs and actual ones are being used to determine where pills go and when they disintegrate students are using their own stomachs for experimentation. They take harmless pills with different types of coating and observe the progress of the pills through their bodies with a fluroscope.

Some diseases and illnesses can be treated effectively only if the pills do their job in the right places. In a few months experiments will reach a final stage, and we'll know all about the ways of pills.

Rector Reads Law and Gives Out Legal Advice

ST. LOUIS.—An Episcopal rector doubles in brass for his St. Louis congregation, acting as advisor in things both legal and spiritual.

He is the Rev. Leighton H. Nugent. The Rev. Mr. Nugent began studying law during the depression, believing his knowledge would be a practical means to aid his congregation. He practices now without compensation and doesn't handle cases which would require lengthy court appearances nor cases for those persons able to employ an attorney.

He frequently appears in justice of the peace courts, however, to represent members of his congregation in matters ranging from accident cases to eviction and debt procedures. In addition, he draws wills, aids widows in probating estates and protects them from unscrupulous promoters.

Eat Properly and Live 150 Years, Says Expert

BERKELEY, CALIF.—You can live to be 150 years old, if you eat right, according to Dr. Flora Rose, retired dean of the Cornell university home economics department.

The 150-year life span can all be enjoyed with vigorous health, too, she said, if the proper diet is followed.

"Nutrition is the key to a life in which one may enjoy the maturity of experience with youthful vigor," she declared.

Dr. Rose's dietary chart to longevity and good health includes consumption of a pint of milk daily, two vegetables, one green and the other yellow and raw; two fruits, one a citrus; and plenty of whole grain bread. Vitamin concentrates were recommended for persons who lead sedentary lives.

JUNK RALLY DAY SET FOR SATURDAY, SEPT., 26

All Chilton County Clubs; Organizations Are Cooperating

Saturday is to be Chilton County Junk Rally Day. The United States Government needs all of the scrap steel, brass, copper and numerous other items that they can get, and you will find plenty of it laying around your farm or your home. All you have to do is gather it up and take it to your nearest Junk Depot, there is one near you.

Scrap metal collections in 50 counties so far reporting their progress in the Alabama Scrap Harvest totaled [illegible] pounds Saturday.

Tallapoosa County reported 150,000 pounds additional collected, making its total 1,041,600 to date. Gasoline dealers in Hurtsboro, Russell County, checked in 32,000 pounds of scrap metal.

Plans are being worked out whereby a large number of filling stations in every community in the state would act as recipients for donated scrap metal, just as they bought in scrap rubber during the recent drive, it was announced by Leon Gilbert, executive secretary of the Alabama salvage committee.

"Because most filling stations have no access to large scales, they will serve for the most part merely as depots for donated scrap," Mr. Gilbert said

However, he pointed out, all county salvage committees are encouraging citizens to sell their scrap if they wish and to sell it where they please—to any junk dealer of their choice.

"Scrap is moving out of Alabama junk yards at a fast rate," Mr. Gilbert commented. "Whenever one passes a junk yard and sees quite a pile he can be sure that that pile soon will be replaced by another pile, as junk moves out in a steady flow."

So don't wait until the last minute to get your junk together. Get it now. As you see, [illegible] can sell it or yu can donate it to your Government. It does not matter which you do. The idea is to get the junk to the junk man, so that proper authorities can get their hands on it whe nthey need it. DO IT NOW.

September 9, 1942

Dear Ben:

When I was in Clanton, Alabama, back in May you told me if I would send you my address you all would send me a "Good Old Chilton County News". Ben If I ever needed it I need it now. I never get any news from there unless my mother writes it and you know she don't give me all the details. So if you have one to spare sometime send me a copy.

I am a long way from Clanton now. I don't know how long I am going to be here but I will let you know when I get ready to go across. You know I can't tell you much about this place at present but I will write you more in the near future. This is a beautiful country and about the same climate as Clanton. Except in winter when it gets cold there it is around 70 here. And the more it stays hot the better I like it. If you have room give all the folks my address and have them to write me.

I must close for now before the lights go out on me.

I am your friend always,

FARM NOTES

If Chilton County farmers want to be sure of having all the calcium arsenate they need next year to fight the boll weevil, they should order it now, advises. Mr. P. H. Smith, County Agent.

Mr. Smith said he received word from A. W. Jones, Chairman of the State USDA War Board, that to keep producing calcium arsenate the manufacturers must have orders for the material. Otherwise the plants might be forced to close down and start manufacturing calcium arsenate when orders begin coming next summer. This would cause a "bottleneck" because the plants could not get the material out as fast as needed.

However, by placing orders now with their regular dealers, farmers could be sure of having the necessary calcium arsenate on hand when needed next summer, said Mr. Smith.

Since one of the major purposes of the Chilton County USDA War Board is to help farmers play their full part in the War Agricultural Program, we believe that every farmer should keep fully informed about its work, Mr. Napoleon Posey, Chairman of the Chilton County USDA War Board, said this week.

"The War Board functions as a representative of the Department of Agriculture in the war effort, including further extension of the food and fiber production programs, the handling of problems arising out of war priorities on materials needed in agriculture; shortages, such as those of labor, machinery, and materials; the gathering of agricultural information of vital importance to the war effort, and cooperation at county and state levels with other defense agencies and programs.

"The War Boards in this and other counties already have done a big job in supervising the working out of 1942 production goals with individual farmers. They are continuing to attack problems that are equally difficult and important. In addition to assisting in carrying out the Department's activities State and County USDA War Boards are rendering valuable assistance to other departments of the Government," concluded Mr. Posey.

Mr. LeRoy Holt, director of Sales Promotion and advertising and supervisor of the Farm Products Division of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, will head the Alabama War Chest Speakers, Bureau, it was announced today by W. A. Steadman, state appeal chairman, and T. D. Johnson, co-chairman.

WOMEN ENGINEERS

As the need becomes more acute for engineers in war industry and in all branches of the Armed Forces, it is highly probable that women throughout the United States will be called upon to enter this field, said J. E. Hannum, assistant dean of the Engineering School at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

"Women will be used in designing, planning, scheduling, production studies, supervision, and in any other type of engineering work that can be done in the office," he said.

An all-time high for funds on hand, $25,865,596.91, was reported for Aug 21 by State Treasurer Walter Lusk. Finance Director A. R. Forsyth report the state credit A-1, with many bonds redeemed before their due dates. The state income tax has yielded more than $19,000,000 revenue since its enactment in 1933.

"Intrusion by Congress into state election laws means the ultimate control by the federal government of our local elections and should not be permitted," Governor Dixon wired all members of Alabama's congressional delegation. Referring to passage by the Senate, with only 55 of 96 members present, of a bill to exempt absentee soldiers and sailors from poll tax payments, the governor said: "The question is one to be decided by the Legislature of Alabama and not by Congress.

Fight! Work! and Save!

A War Message on WAR BONDS

from the President of the United States

"... The American people know that if we would raise the billions which we now need to pay for the war and at the same time prevent a disastrous rise in the cost of living, we shall have to double and more than double the scale of our savings.

"Every dime and dollar not vitally needed for absolute necessities should go into WAR BONDS and STAMPS to add to the striking power of our armed forces.

"If these purchases are to have a material effect in restraining price increases they must be made out of current income.

"In almost every individual case they should be big enough to mean rigid self-denial, a substantial reduction for most of us in the scale of expenditure that is comfortable and easy for us.

"We cannot fight this war, we cannot exert our maximum effort, on a spend-as-usual basis.

"We cannot have all we want if our soldiers and sailors are to have all they need."

. . . . Franklin D. Roosevelt

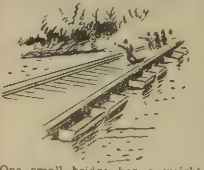
Our army spells and pronounces it ponton, not "pontoon", as you do. Ponton bridges cost all the way from $15,000 to $700,000. The smaller bridge using individual metal pontons is pictured here. The largest ponton bridge is 1,080 feet long and is made of rubber instead of aluminum.



One small bridge has a weight capacity of 25 tons using about 2,000 individual metal pontons. The smallest is used only to take troops over smaller streams. But whether our army uses the smaller or larger ponton, our engineers need plenty of them. If you and every American invests at least 10 per cent of income in War Bonds every pay day we can supply our fighting forces with these [illegible] to a victorious war.

Six Carefree Buffaloes Send Ranchers Up in Arms

FORT COLLINS, COLO.—Know anybody who wants six buffaloes? Colorado and Wyoming ranchers are up in arms because six hairy bison—which are state property and cannot be killed—are wandering about frightening cattle and devouring haystacks.

The beasts amble from haystack to haystack, pushing down any fence between, thereby permitting cattle herds to become mixed.

Granddad in Army; He'll Make It Career

FORT MONMOUTH, N. J.—Pvt. Edward D. Martin is 59 years old and a grandfather, but today he was disclosed as probably the oldest army volunteer.

Martin, a World War I veteran, was allowed to enlist because of previous service.

"I think I'll make the army a career," Martin said.

Jap Toothbrushes Used To Clean Army Rifles

CAMP ROBERTS, CALIF. — A "Made in Japan" product is being put to good use at Camp Roberts. Soldiers here are cleaning their rifles with new, Jap-made toothbrushes. A San Francisco dentist, seeing a letter from a Camp Roberts trainee asking for old toothbrushes, shipped dozens of brand new ones he had ordered several years ago from Japan. He said he couldn't think of any better use for the brushes than helping to keep spic and span the rifles that may be used against the Japs.

Our fighting men are doing their share. Here at home the least we can do is put 10% of our income in War Bonds for our share in America.

Men are dying for the Four Freedoms. The least we can do here at home is to buy War Bonds—10% for War Bonds, every pay day.

Let's Talk About Money

...and WAR

When you hear that bombing planes cost $335,000, tanks $75,000, anti-aircraft guns $50,000—And when you hear, too, that America needs 60,000 planes, 45,000 tanks, and 20,000 anti-aircraft guns at once—

It doesn't take much figuring to see that winning this war calls for every dollar all of us can scrape together. With our freedom at stake—with our farms, families, even our very lives depending upon the outcome, we'd gladly give this money.

But we aren't asked to do that. Our Government asks us only to lend the money—to put our increased earnings into War Bonds—month after month—until this war is won. In doing so, we save for our own security as well. For we get back $4 for every $3 we invest, when the Bonds are held 10 years. And if we need the money, we can get it all back any time after 60 days from issue date. This is the American way—the volunteer way—to raise the billions needed for Victory. And the money can . . . will . . . must be raised.

So let's show them that the farmers of America are helping to win this war in two vitally important ways—by producing more Food for Freedom and by saving more in War Bonds.

HOW TO MAIL XMAS PACKAGES

Arrangements have been made by the Post Office Deportment in cooperation with the War and Navy Departments for the acceptance of Christmas parcels for members of our armed forces serving outside the continental United States. (For the purpose of these instructions Alaska is included in the terms "outside the continental United States.") In order that such parcels may reach the addreses on time and in good condition, postmasters are requested to bring the following requirements to the attention of the mailers.

TIME OF MAILING.—Christmas parcels and Christmas cards should be mailed during the period beginning October 1 and ending November 1, 1942, the earlier the better. Patrons should be encouraged to endorse each gift parcel "Christmas Parcel." Epecial effort will be made to effect delivery of all Chritsmas parcels mailed during that period in time for Christmas.

SIZE AND WEIGHT.—In view of the urgent need for shipping space to transport materials directly essential to the war effort, Christmas parcels shall not exceed the present limits oi 11 pounds in weight or 18 inches in length or 42 inches in length and girth combined. Nevertheless the public is urged by the War and Navy Departments to cooperate by voluntadily restricting the size of Christmas parcels to that of an ordinary shoe box, and the weight to 6 pounds. These departments have pointed out also that members of the Armed Forces are amply provided with food and clothing, and the public is urged not to include such matter in gift parcels. Not more than one Christmas parcel or package shall be accepted for mailing in any one week when sent by or on behalf of the same person or concern to or for the same addressee.

PREPARATION—Owing to the great distance this mail must be transported and the handling and storage it must undergo, it is absolutely necessary that all articles be packed in substantial boxes or containers and be covered with wrappers of sufficient strength not only to resist pressure of other mail in the same sack, but to withstand the weight of other sacks of mail, which in the long transit may be piled thereon. Futhermore, as each parcel is subject to censorship, delay in handling may be minimized by securing the covering of the parcel so as to permit ready inspection of the contents.

Many combination packages will probably be made up, including miscellaneous toilet articles, hard candies, soaps, etc. The contents of such packages should be tightly packed, in order that the several articles may not be loosened in transit, damaging the contents of the parcel itself or causing damage to the covering of the parcel. Christmas boxes should be inclosed in substantial containers. Candies in thin paste board boxes should be inclosed in wood, metal, or corrugated pasteboard. Sealed packages of candy cigars, tobacco and toilet articles in simplest mercantile form be inclosed within parcels without effecting the parcel-post classification of such packages. Sharp-pointed or sharp-edged instruments, such as razors, knives, etc., must have their points or edges protected so they cannot cut through their coverings and damage other mail or injure postal employees.

PERISHABLE MATTER.—No perlishable matter should be included in any parcels.

PROHITED ARTICLESl—Intoxicants, inflammable materials (including matches of all kinds and lighter fluids) and poisons, or compositions which may kill or injure another, or damage the mails, are unmailable.

HOW TO ADDRESS PARCELS.—Addresses must be legible. Parcels addressed to overseas Army personnel should show in addition to the name and address of the sender, the name rank, Army serial number, branch of service, organization, A. P. O. number of the addressee and the post office through which the parcels are to be routed, as, for instance:

Ralph Hubbard, Brent, has an apple tree with 40 apples growing from one smal llimb. D. H. Ellard, Brent, RFD. grew a 58½ pound watermelon.

PLANNED FOR PEACE...

THEY'LL WORK FOR WAR

ON Alabama Power Company System at ______________* and at ______________*, two large steam power plants are being built. They'll be finished and turning out electricity by the middle of 1943 if unforeseen delays do not develop.

They were planned, long before the outbreak of the war, to meet the power needs of peace-time industrial developments in Alabama which our New Industries Division expected to be established as a result of constant effort over many years.

Industries have been established, but they are war industries. Their needs for electric power are great, and will be greater. The new generating plants we are building will supply the power they will require. And after the war, they'll be ready to keep the wheels of those industries turning for peace-time production.

We are glad that ours is an industry whose peace-time plans fit in so well with war needs. Progressive light and power companies in other states have been similarly helpful to the war effort.

Low-Grade Ores Yield Chromium

99 Per Cent Pure Metal Is Obtained by Bureau of Mines New Process.

WASHINGTON.—A method of obtaining 99 per cent pure chromium metal from low-grade American ores has been found by metallurgists of the United States bureau of mines after more than five years of research.

This is one of the most vital of war metals. Its chief use is to form alloys with steel which are very strong and rust-proof. These alloys are best known in the form of automobile finishings and bathroom fixtures.

America uses about 50,000 tons of the metal a year, but in the past has produced only about 3,000 tons. Most of the rest has come from South Africa and Turkey. The Turkish deposits, perhaps the largest in the world, have been considered a major reason why Germany, with no chromium of its own, might launch an invasion of that country.

Large Deposits Available.

There are deposits in Alaska, California, Oregon, Montana, Washington and Wyoming, but for the most part they are of low grade and expensive to work. Broad surveys are under way to discover other deposits.

In the past the metal used in industry has been in the form of ferrochromium—or about 60 to 70 per cent chromium mixed with iron.

This is considered good enough for most industrial purposes. Its extraction, however, is not much less expensive than that of the pure metal—in some cases it may be 99.8 per cent pure—by the new process reported by C. G. Maier of the bureau's staff.

A "Pilot" plant is planned to be operated by the government in order to determine the actual cost of large-scale production.

The pure metal is obtained in powdered form, most suitable for the formation of alloys. A major drawback in the present emergency is that the process requires large quantities of the gas chlorine, one of the most essential of all war chemicals. A shortage of this for a score or more of civilian uses, from cleaning suits to preserving stored grain, already is being reported.

Immediate Benefits Seen.

Hitherto, Mr. Maier reports, there have been only minute amounts of pure chromium metal and these have been laboratory curiosities.

Immediate benefits of the improved form of chromium metal, according to Dr. R. R. Sayers, director of the bureau of mines, probably will be the development of new and important alloying processes.

The practicability of the process, Dr. Sayers says, will depend for the present largely on the availability and cost of the essential chlorine. The chlorine and chromium are combined in a gas at high temperatures. This gas does not take up other impurities in the ore. Then the two chief constituents are separated, leaving the pure metal.

Uncovers Secret Of Wool Elasticity

Research Points Way to New Synthetic Textile.

CHICAGO.—The secret of the molecular structure which gives wool its elasticity and warmth has been discovered by the laboratory and the way is now clear for producers of synthetic textiles to tackle the problem of making an artificial wool, Dr. Milton Harris of Washington said.

Dr. Harris said that another result of the research of more immediate importance because of the war-time scarcity of wool was the development of a method of stabilizing wool's peculiar chemical and physical structure so that it would resist damage from laundering. Application of the process, he said, promised to double, triple or quadruple the durability of wool, depending on the use and method of cleaning.

"We have processed small pieces of wool and the results look extremely promising, almost too good to be true," Dr. Harris said.

After three or four years of research, he said, the foundation discovered that wool molecules are flexible and derive their elasticity and strength from the way some of the molecules form ties or bridges to others. The elasticity accounts for wool's warmth, creating air spaces which hold heat and reforming the air spaces when wool is stretched or compressed. Other textiles lack the ability to reform the air spaces, the research showed.

"We have put the finishing touches on the work of finding out what makes wool 'tick,'" Dr. Harris said. "While we have not made any attempt to produce a synthetic wool, that being outside our field, our discoveries are the first basic step toward that objective. The manufacture of synthetic wool is now entirely feasible."

British Wren Surrenders To Old Dan Cupid in U. S.

PHILADELPHIA. — An English lass and one of His Majesty's sailors, who never met until they came to the United States in the war service of their government, were married after a two-month courtship.

Kathleen Mary Benbow, 22, of Bromley, Kent, was led to the altar under an arch of swords in the Episcopal Church of the Epiphany by 23-year-old Lieut. Philip H. May, R.N., of Warsah, Hampshire.

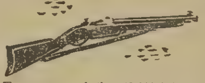
And in faraway England, friends who had been notified of the wedding, had arranged to drink a toast at the appointed hour.

The bride is a third officer in the Women's Royal Naval service—the "Wrens"—and a daughter of John N. Benbow, a commander in the British navy. Lieutenant May is the son of Percy R. May; rubber plantation owner in Ceylon.

The service was conducted by the Rev. G. S. Nason, British naval chaplain.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The Garand semi-automatic rifle, which is the standard issue today for the U. S. army, is superior to the old Springfield rifle in many respects. We literally need millions of these fast shooting powerful rifles to equip our army. They cost $85 each and are being manufactured at the rate of one a minute. They fire sixty 30-calibre shells a minute.



Every one of the 40,000,000 employed persons in America could easily buy one of these rifles for the army. Not that we need that many, but the reserve could go into shells and other much needed supplies. Buy more and more War Bonds and top the quota in your county by investing at least ten percent of your income every pay day.

Teach Workers To Aid Fighters

Train Mechanics to Handle Replacement Parts 'on Spot When Needed.'

DETROIT.—A three-point program designed to "help keep the planes, tanks and guns of the United Nations at highest possible fighting efficiency" was announced by General Motors corporation.

The program contemplates the training of thousands of mechanics, the placing of General Motors engineers in the field and assistance to the army and navy in "having replacement parts on the spot when needed."

The training of mechanics alone calls for expenditures totaling $5,000,000 for the current year. It will involve the training of thousands of instructors in scores of centers throughout the country.

C. L. McCuen, vice president in charge of engineering for General Motors, said in announcing the program:

Opens New Chapter.

"We feel it opens a new chapter in the relationship of war contractors to their government. In past wars a contractor's responsibility ended when he turned in 1,000 horses at a quartermaster's depot. But in today's war of horsepower the old rules no longer apply. Today the three 'R's' of modern mechanized battle are 'reliability, repair and replacement.' When we turn in 1,000 'horses' to the air corps in the form of an airplane engine we feel that's just the first part of our job.

"We conceive it to be part of our job not only to build an airplane engine but to help train men to operate and maintain that engine, to find out through observation in the field how we can build a better engine and to see that spares are on hand when replacements for any part of that engine are needed."

Special staffs are being set up to promote each of the activities proposed in the program.

Some General Motors divisions, such as Allison and Chevrolet, have had schools for army instructors in operation for some time. These will be expanded and other divisions will set up schools of their own. Heads of the various General Motors divisions have been advised that schools should get under way at least 90 days before volume deliveries of any product reach the field.

Engineer Observers.

The plan for the engineering observer service calls for each manufacturing division of the corporation with products in the field to set up its own engineer contracts. In addition, the special staffs created under Mr. McCuen's direction will place one engineer observer in each army area and one in each of the major theaters of war.

The objective of the engineer observer service, General Motors explained, "is to obtain field reaction to our products, both here and overseas, promptly and accurately."

A general program is being worked for the maintenance of an adequate flow of parts to the war fronts. In this phase of the program as with the engineer observer project, General Motors overseas organization is co-operating.

Discover New Treasure Of Relics in Mexico

OAXACA, MEXICO.—A new archeological find, believed to be of major importance, has come to light in the state of Puebla, near the resort city of Tehuacan.

The discovery is of the ruins of Cuta, ancient city which appears to be a mine of relics of the Zapotec style of the great Oaxaca culture. With excavation just begun, scientists have already uncovered mounds which enclose tombs and temples; stairways, ramps and wells which are similar to those uncovered at Monte Alban in Oaxaca.

Travelers in Mexico find visits to archeological diggings among the most thrilling of experiences in the land, for they reconstruct pages of the past when civilizations rivaling our own flourished.

Fur Expert Is All Set For His Long Vacation

EATON.—Harry M. Fudge is all set for a nine-month vacation, now that his annual season of buying and treating furs is at an end.

This year, Fudge says, the furs that trappers and small dealers brought to his big warehouse here netted him $24,000 more than last winter. In December, the 58-year-old dealer bought $50,000 worth of pelts from trappers and farmers in western Ohio and eastern Indiana. He added $38,000 in January, and ended up the season with an aggregate of about $100,000 invested in furs.

"An Old Army Custom"

A SOLDIER'S time is not his own. Every minute of furlough means a lot to him and to his morale. He's away from home and his dear ones and the few hours he gets "in town" mean much to give him a "lift" in spirit and fighting ability. With the service man, every minute counts and when he must report back at a certain time—it means just that, not one minute later.

When granted a furlough, these men turn naturally to Greyhound because schedules are frequent and well-timed . . . no long waits that waste precious hours. Greyhound buses operate right up to most military post gates, saving time, money, and inconvenience. Greyhound gives preference to military men in boarding buses because it is vital for them to report to duty on time. Many of them are changing posts, or reporting to duty for the first time and it is a national expediency that these men be given the fastest means of transportation FIRST. Civilian needs must be secondary. Remember, those boys are in there fighting for you and me.

Yes, both the military and civilian armies prefer Greyhound . . . and Greyhound is bending every effort humanly possible to serve them both.

What interest does my money earn? When held 10 years, Bonds yield 2.9 percent on your investment, compounded semiannually. You get back $4 for every $3.

When can I get my money back? Any time after 60 days from the date the Bond was issued. Naturally, the longer you hold the Bond, up to 10 years, the more money you'll get back. But you'll never get back less than you put in.

Army Initiates Savings Drive

Voluntary Pay-Roll Deductions to Raise Bond, Stamp Sales.

An army-wide campaign designed to stimulate and encourage voluntary purchase of defense savings bonds and stamps has been announced by the war department. All military and civilian personnel under the department, including those at overseas stations, will be given the opportunity to authorize payroll deductions for the purchase of bonds.

As an initial step, the war department has directed an educational program throughout the entire army to acquaint both military and civilian personnel with the objectives to be achieved and the benefits to be derived from the purchase of stamps and bonds, and the procedure to be followed in purchasing them.

Educational Material.

Army authorities will be responsible for direction of the campaign, both as to the educational phase and the actual sales. Educational material will be made available to designated authorities. Regulations have been issued describing the manner in which voluntary deductions from pay may be authorized.

Although the campaign is not designed to be one of competition, the educational program will be so thorough that all army personnel and civilian employees will be fully informed as to the desirability and methods of purchasing stamps and bonds.

Air Raid Training for Deaf Given at Atlanta

ATLANTA, GA.—They will not be able to hear the wail of the air raid sirens or even the thunderous crash of bombs—if such events do transpire in the Southland city of Atlanta. But should such a time ever come, scores of deaf mutes will be standing by, ready to meet the crisis.

Currently, classes in first aid applicable in case of an air raid, are being held twice weekly in Atlanta for a group of 40 of these handicapped citizens.

In this unique class, believed to be the first of its kind in the country, these people who cannot hear tell the story of their work with their hands. The class-instruction is being offered by the Red Cross, in cooperation with the Atlanta division of the National Fraternal Society of the Deaf.

The original class of 40, after the standard 20-week course, will continue into an additional 10-week advanced first aid course, and many of them will then go out among other deaf persons in the vicinity as instructors.

Farmers Producing Food For Victory

Small farmers of Chilton County are demonstrating their ability to produce "Food for Victory" in answer to the Nation's call for increased food production needed to feed the growing army of fighting men and war workers. Farm families working with the FSA in Chilton County-according to a survey just completed-will produce a substancial increase in vital food items this year, as reported by Marvin Durbin, FSA Supervisor.

In studying farm and home plans of the 350 FSA borrowers in Chilton County, there is noted a big increase over 1941 in the production of hogs, eggs, milk, cream, wheat, peanuts, home gardens, brood sows, and other food and feed crops. The increase in food and feed crops by these small farmers will not only mean a better diet and a better income for the farmers, but means that they will be doing their part in producing food for our soldiers and the soldiers of our allies.

Farm Security families are not only producing food and subsistence livestock but they are preserving this food. This year a little more than two carloads of new fruit jars were purchased by these families and are now mostly filled. This does not include the jars that were on hand.

COTTONSEED MEAL BETTER FEED THAN COTTONSEED

Experimental work at the Alabama Experiment Station has shown tha 100 pounds of cotton seed equals 170 to 210 pounds of cottonseed as a livestock feed.

Two good dairy rations that will utilize all home grown feeds are: No. 1, 200 pounds corn and cob meal, 100 pounds velvet beans, 100 pounds cottonseed meal, and 4 pounds salt. Ration No. 2, 200 pounds corn and cob meal, 100 pounds ground oats, 100 pounds cotton seed meal, and 4 pounds salt. In addition they need all the good hay they will eat.

74 CARS WINTER PEAS SHIPPED INTO ALABAMA

Seventy-four cars of Austrian winter peas have been shipped from the West Coast to Alabama to enable farmers to plant a record acreage of winter legumes this fall. The shipments total over six million pounds of legume seed, and more are being loaded. It appears now that Alabama farmers will get all the Austrian winter peas they want to plant their fall cover crops.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

The easiest way to season a plain-cooked hot vegetable is to add meat drippings or melted fat and salt and pepper to taste, just before ready to serve.

Thrifty homemakers save the crusts and scraps of bread to break into crumbs to mix with meat drippings and top a baked dish, or serve as a thickener for the very juicy vegetable.

Boil root vegetables whole in their skin unless too strong or tough. Nature grew this jacket to hold in food value and flavor. If you must peel, make the peelings thin, or scrape no more than skin deep.

OAT VARIETIES OFFERED UNDER AAA SEED PLAN

Ten varities of oats have been approved by the State Agricultural Conservation Committee under the 1942 purchase order plan. These are Red Rust Proof, Hastings Hundred Bushel, Fulghum, Appler, Fulgrain, Victorian Nortex, Norton, and Quincy No. 1 and No. 2. Rye and barley also will be handled under the 1942 purchase order plan.

LEGUMES IMPORTANT TO PEANUT GROWERS

Winter legumes will be of special importance to Alabama cotton farmers who are supplementing wartime oil supplies by growing more peanuts in their cotton, peanut, legume rotations.

Studies by the Alabama Experiment Station, show that use of winter legumes makes it possible to maintain cotton yeild, with less nitrogen, which is now required for war purposes.

Cattle Club Reduces Registration Fee

The American Jersey Cattle Club has announced a reduction in Registration fee on all eligible Jerseys born previous to October 1, 1939, to $2.00

This price should be of interest to many Chilton County farmers who rave older eligible Jersey Cattle which they have failed to register.

The previous fee for registration of animals of this age was $5.00. Anyone having older animals (either male or female) eligible for registry should take advantage of this temporarily reduced rate.

Registration application forms and any information on requirements for registration can be supplied at your County Agent's office or by writing The American Jersey Cattle Club, 324 West, Twenty third Street, New York, New York.

Housewives can help in meat rationing by using more of the foods that are plentiful. Make meat go farther by serving more stews and hashes. Have a cheese dish instead of pork chops; chicken instead of beefsteak.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

Bet you didn't know that Mr. M. L. White was once a slack wire walker and a trick shot in a Circus. He says just after the turn of the century while still a young fellow he has walked a slack wire across Bell Street in Montgomery and made fancy shots with his rifle. Mr. Mally says he can still hold his own with a rifle and a covey of quail.

John D. Eiland, Jr., better known here as Jack, is now a Captain and is in command of his outfit somewhere in England. His mother received a cablegram from him the other day stating that he was well and happy. Chances are that Captain Jack, who is in the Air Corps, is dropping posies on Germany and occupied France every now and then.

We think that they ought to call James Payton, "Jeep". They say that a Jeep can pull out of a hole even with only one wheel touching the ground: . . .well, Payton must have been the inspiration for the inventor of the Jeep . . . he can do the same thing.

Bill Inzer, speaking no doubt for all the fellows who work at night over at Childersburg, asked us to get over to the folks in Clanton that it was no fun trying to sleep in the daytime. Bill says that at its quietest, daytime is still noisy, and when added to this is a bunch of kids playing football on the vacant lot next door or in the street. Or every car and truck in town tearing by blowing horns and a dozen other things to irritate one, its still less fun. Anyway he's calling on the populace to think of these fellows and try to be a little quieter and more thoughtful of them. They make more efficient defense plant workers and can do their job better if they have had a good 8 or ten hours rest.

You know what the lightening bug said after he had been run over by the car: I am de-lighted, no end."

We received this Classified Adv. this week but thought it would serve its purpose better in this column: Wanted—To swap a pair of white sport sox for a pair of red flannel drawers—Apply Gordon Donnavant.

The ladies' show at the City Hall Saturday night was a "hum-dinger"! Especially was Mrs. Renfro Mullins good in Recitation between curtains. But it would be hard to pick a Star from the cast. All did well and played to an extra large audience, considering the rain and speed with which the play was produced. Close to fifty dollars was realized for the Chilton County High School Band.

Well you can't expect to get everything perfect. Last week we must have been in a big hurry when we placed Dubb Huddleston as Sinclair Distributor for this District. Dubb says he'll just remain head man up at Texaco and Mr. Tom Burdette says he don't think he'll give Sinclair to Dubb, so . . . we'er still apologizing.

Uncle Sam finally got Holloway Bickerstaff Pittman, better known as "Pitt." Pitt tried to get into every branch of the service and at one time thought that the Navy had accepted him only to find himself in the hospital for several weeks and then sent back home. His pump was out-of-order. Now the Selective Service Board has got him and he leaves this week for induction center.

Ed Cooper isn't at Clanton Cash Store anymore. He's to be found now waiting on the public at the A. & P. Tea Company, and he told me to tell you to come to see him so here goes. "Go to see him."

JUNK RALLY DATE CHANGED TO BE HELD SATURDAY OCT. THIRD

Due to the hard rains of last Saturday morning the Junk Rally was postponed until this Saturday. The Clanton Scouts will make the rounds as planned to every house in Clanton and ask that all the scrap possible be collected and placed where the City truck can pick it up later in the day.

All organizations and clubs in the county are cooperating in this Junk Rally and it is only the patriotic duty of every citizen to take time out and gather all the scrap that they can for National Defense.

Earl Parrish To Head Chest Appeal

Mr. Earl Parrish of Clanton, Alabama, will head the Alabama War Chest Appeal in this county, it was announced today by the Honorable Haygood Patterson of Montgomery, Chairman of the District which includes Autauga, Bullock, Butler, Chilton, Covington, Crenshaw, Elmore, Lowndes, Macon, Montgomery and Pike counties. October 20th is the date set for the appeal that will be carried on in every county of the state to raise a fund of $589,500 for eight war service relief agencies.

Agencies which have applied and been approved for admission to the Alabama War Chest include the USO which maintains club houses and recreation centers for service men in the vicinity of army camps and centers where soldiers go on leave; the War Prisoners' Aid Committee, which is providing many services for American soldiers held prisoner by the enemy, and the British War Relief, Greek Relief Association, Russian War Relief, United China Relief, Queen Wilhelmina Fund, and Polish American Council. These agencies are aiding stricken peoples of our Allied nations with food, clothing, medical and surgical supplies.

Alabama is the first state to organize a War Chest on a statewide basis for the purpose of consolidating all war relief campaigns into one appeal, hence the outcome of the campaign is being watched with keenest interest throughout the country.

Farmers Adopt Resolution At Meeting Friday

Resolutions adopted at meeting of farmers and other citizens in City Hall at Clanton, Alabama, representing the County Farm Bureau of Chilton, Jefferson, Shelby, Bibb, Autauga, Elmore, and Coosa Counties:

Whereas, We, 300 farmers and other citizens, in a called meeting at Clanton, Alabama, this the 25th day of September, 1942, having considered the message of President Roosevelt of September 7, 1942, to the Congress and the price control bills now before Congress, declare ourselves as follows:

One. We pledge ourselves to continue to the best of our ability the production of food and fiber needed in the war program.

Two. We feel that the drawing of manpower from the farms by excessively high wages in industry threatens to cause a serious food shortage that will endanger our war program.

Three. We are convinced that the carrying out of the recommendations of President Roosevelt of September 7, 1942, will further contribute to the disparity of income between farmers and industrial workers and consequently contribut to a shortage of food and fiber needed for winning the war.

Four. We deeply appreciate the efforts made by our Senators and Congressmen to represent our interests and those of the other people of Alabama and the Nation in Congress and ask specifically tat they do all in their power to see that the price control act or amendment now before Congress:

(a). Provides for the 90 percent floor under farm prices to be in effect not only during the war but at least three years thereafer, and,

(b). That all farm labor cost be included in the determination of parity prices for the floors and ceilings under the legislation.

Five. We favor the Steagall Bill as originally drawn and ask our Senators and Representatives to use their influence and vote to make the final act conform therewith.

Six. We are amazed that farmers and farm prices are pointed to as an important cause of inflation when farmers for 1941 constituted 22.5 percent of the total population and received only 8.2 percent of the national income.

Seven. We recommend that copies of this resolution be sent to the newspapers in the various counties represented, for publication.

L. H. Reynolds, Chairman Committee.
September 25, 1942.

Exact details could not be learned at this writing. Martins Ambulance picked up the bodies and brought them to Clanton where they will be prepared for burial.

"Old Deestrick Skule" To Be Presented At City Hall

Ladies of the Band Boosters Club will present "Old Deestrick Skule," at the City Hall Thursday night, October 1st. The curtain will go up at exactly 8:00 o'clock and the fun will start. According to reports it will be even funnier than the "Old Maid's Convention," given last Saturday night there and that is saying something. Mrs. Dorma Prickett, who made such a hit in that play and walked off with the prize for the best old Maid, will appear in "Old Deestrick Skule" and they say her lines are even better.

The proceeds from the play will go to the Band Uniform Fund, and the admission will be 10c and 25 cents.

Here is the cast of characters: Mrs. Dorma Prickett, Mary Will Browder, Izora Alred, Rose Farley, Mrs. Hugh Jones, Ruth Gowan, Mrs. Hubert Farley, Mrs. Cagle, Mrs. L. J. Stewart, Dr. J. P. Hayes, Cleve Popwell, L. J. Stewart, Mr. Perkins, Reuben Lowe, John Parrish, Dick Hayes, Dr. V. J. Gragg, Jimmie Bell and others.

Democrat Candidates Now Getting Busy

You can tell by the buzzing in the air that this is election year and you can also tell that these Democratic Candidates are getting busy seeing the voters and getting things started for the coming campaign.

It is the duty of every citizen in Chilton County to go to the polls and vote this year. And that includes War Workers as well as anyone else according to Donald M. Nelson, Chief of the War Production Board. It is a duty and not a privilege. It is a duty allowed only to free men and freedom is what we are fighting for.

Says Mr. Nelson, "The war Worker is first of all an American citizen and the first right and duty of an American is to vote. That is the difference between us and our enemies."

So there you are Democrats, go to the polls and vote. The War is important, but so is our right as Free Men important.

CLANTON ELEMENTARY P. T. A. TO MEET TUESDAY AFTERNOON

The P. T. A. of the Clanton Elementary School will meet in the Building Tuesday October 6, at 2:45 p. m. All members are expected to be present and visitors are invited and welcome.

Outstanding features of the program will be a talk by Dr. V. J. Gragg, and a P. T. A. study group directed by Mrs. I. S. Levine. It is hoped that each patron of the school will make an honest effort to be present.

CLANTON F. F. A. PUREBRED PIG CHAIN

The Clanton F. F. A. Chapter in order to get more purebred hogs in the county started the project of giving to its members one gilt and when the received gilt brings pigs, the F.F.A. gets two of the gilts of the litter. They are in turn distributed to other members. Approximately 16 gilts have been given away to the members of the F. F. A. as today.

It is very interesting to observe the growth-rate of the purebred pig compared to the grade hogs in the lots in some of the members fathers. The purebreds are outgrowing the others in a big way.

F. F. A. NEWS

The Isabella F. F. A. Chapter met September 23 at its regular meeting time. In absence of our president, Jesse Culp who is the vice-president, took charge.

CLANTON HIGH WALLOPS COMER HIGH IN OPENING GAME 38 TO 6

By Irvin M. Lande.

The cheerleader from Sylacauga said: "I want to meet that superman Payton!" That just about sums up the way Clanton beat Comer High of Sylacauga Friday night—plus ten other hard fighting ball players.

Kellum, Teel, McKee, Davenport, Dennis, Stanley, and Smith opened up the holes and Payton stooted through four times to pay dirt. And when he wasn't running, Captain F. C. Cost was. Meanwhile Higgins and McGee were stopping the would-be tacklers.

It was that kind of cooperation that gave Clanon 38 points Friday night while B. B. Comer of Sylacauga could get only 6. It was also the kind of ball-playing that will give Clanton another great season. The blocking was good; the tackling better; and the running excellent.

The lop-sided score doesn't tell the whole story. The game was harder fought than the score would indicate, but no time were the "Tigers" from Chilton High in danger. Sylacauga got their touchdown after pass interference put them in scoring territory, Carl Argo then took it over—and that was as close as Sylacauga got all evening, 14-6.

Paytons long runs were beautiful. Once he got going he couldn't be stopped. The prettiest play of the game for sheer surprise occurred when Payton dropped back into punt fomation only to pass to Cost who took the ball at the line of scrimmage and ran the rest of the way behind beautiful interference to scoring territory. Plays like that draw crowds to football games, and the overflowing audience Friday night really enjoyed it.

Clanton's team this year is a made-over job of last year's model. Guy Higgins has been taken from quarterback and made into right half. John McKee has taken over 'Bobo' Collin's place-kicking duties, and though 'Bear' isn't satisfied because he made good only two of his point-after-touchdown tries Friday night, we have a hunch he'll make them when they count most. Paul Smith has been switched over to Collin's end position, and the Alternate Captain looks good on the end-arounds that 'Bobo' executed last year. Paul is an ace defensive man, and if he starts catching passes Clanton will have another formidable scoring combination. Kellum took over Smith's former end position. Lama Teel, Bill Stanley, and James Davenport came in to take care of graduation losses, while Ned Dennis is back to perform again in his line position. Coach Porch has done a splendid job in remaking the team, though there are still some things to be ironed out before Clanton can topple some of their other rivals. Reserve strength this year isn't as powerful as it was last year, but Friday night showed up several boys who hold real promise.

Before we end we have to mention the band. At last Clanton has one—and a very good one. The formations were well carried out Friday night and the music added a stimulus to both players and spectators.

The band and the team both deserve our support. They got that support Friday when an overflowing crowd attended. They deserve it again this Friday evening when the "Tigers" battle Pell City.

My Impressions In Washington

While in Washington recently I spent several days seeing the things that are sacred to all Americans. Nearly everyone who has not yet visited Washington has at least seen photographs of the buildings and memorials and has seen facsimilies of our Constitution and Declaration of Independence, but I shall never forget my first time to look upon the things that reflect the glory and traditions of our country.

As I stood with bared head before the tomb of General George Washington at Mount Vernon, I thought of the struggle which he and the others had in winning our freedom and in laying the cornerstone of our democracy. I thought of those who were with him in the winter at Valley Forge and that come hell or high water, we will never release our grip on that freedom.

Going through Arlington National Cemetery I saw the crosses row on row, marking the resting places of those who have laid down their lives in subsequent chapters in our forward march. I saw the tomb of the Unknown Soldier with its inscription, "Here lies in honored glory an American Soldier known but to God." Here lies an American boy that rests as the symbol of all Americans that have died for their country down through the years. These men still live for they are never forgotten. They breathe with every ripple of the flag They march again with us today Their courage and the glory of their sacrifices shall lend us strength to make the fight, and in the words of Lincoln, we shall say, "That we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain, and that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom and government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

Meeting Dates To Be Announced By Democrats

Once upon a time the Walrus said; "The time has come to talk of many things."

The "Walrus" seems to have arrived at a conclusion: so has the Democratic Campaign Committee of Chilton County. They have decided to put Chilton County in the Democratic Column in the General Election to come off November 3rd.

Since the announcement last week of the Campaign Committee headed by our very popular Circuit Clerk, J. C. Pattillo, word has come in from over the County commending his selection. Word has also come in showing much interest in the election, and in the splendid candidates on the Democratic Ticket. All of them are well known in the County (the full ticket being published elsewhere in this paper).

Mr. Pattillo states that he will furnish a list of meetings and the dates to be held by the Democrats in each Beat in the County for next week's issue. At these meetings all of the Candidates will be present where their views, and the communities' views and problems can be discussed together.

Curb on U. S. Civilian Meat Consumption Eases Supply Problem for Armed Forces; Hitler's Russian Time-Table Slowed Up; 'Work or Fight' Is Edict of Draft Head

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Two Australian seamen, W. D. McBurnie (left) and F. E. Miller, are brought ashore in a lighter at an Australian seaport after being wounded in action in the Solomon islands. They are survivors of the Australian ship Canberra which was lost in action when American marines and naval units supported by Australian forces made their historic attack on the Japanese-held Solomon islands.

RUSSIA:
'If Winter Comes'

Chill autumnal winds that swept the Russian steppes had reminded the Nazi invaders that Adolf Hitler's timetable of conquest was behind schedule. Every day the Russian lines held was that much time lost for the Germans. Every day they held was that much closer to winter.

Up the Volga river from the Caspian sea to beleaguered Stalingrad had come a Soviet naval flotilla. There, southeast of the city proper, the ships poured shellfire on the attacking Germans, answering the thunder of the big guns the Nazis were using to reduce the city. Meanwhile tank battles, air assaults and hand-to-hand encounters had raged in and around the city.

While the heroic Red forces had held their ground and even forced the Germans back in places, the situation remained grave. Defeat on the Volga would mean incalculable injury to the Russian war effort, with vital communications disrupted and the connecting Red armies of South and Central Russia split.

In the Caucasus, the Germans still had goals to reach. Still in the hands of the stout-hearted Red defenders was the south and eastern half of the peninsula.

DRAFT EDICT:
Work or Fight

A "work or fight" edict to end the occupational deferment of men who stay away from their jobs or go on strike in war plants loomed as Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of selective service made public an amendment to selective service regulations which stated:

"Whenever the director of selective service advises a local board that a deferred registrant or group of deferred registrants is not supporting or is adversely affecting the war effort or the national health, safety or interest, the local board shall immediately terminate the deferment and consider anew the classification of such registrant or registrants."

Local boards hitherto had authority to reclassify such persons and in a number of instances had done so.

ALEUTIANS:
'Japs' Wings Clipped'

Heartening news from Alaska was brought to Washington by Congressman Warren G. Magnusen on his return from an official visit to American fighting forces in the north. The navy, said Mr. Magnusen, had definitely turned Japanese occupation of the Aleutian islands to our advantage.

"The situation is good in Alaska," he said. "The joint army and navy command is clearly now offensive-minded. The occupation of the Aleutian islands by Japan has been turned to our advantage by the navy, giving us the opportunity to sink Japanese ships we otherwise would have been unable to get to.

"The navy has clipped Japan's offensive wings if she had any idea of using the Aleutians as a stepping stone for an attack against Alaska."

MEAT RATION:
Aids Armed Forces

A voluntary meat ration of 2½ pounds per week for every American was urged by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard when he announced that civilian meat consumption during the last three months of 1942 would be restricted to approximately 79 per cent of the amount delivered by packers for civilian use during the last quarter of 1941.

After January 1, it was indicated, rationing coupons will be issued.

In his role of chairman of the War Production board's food requirements committee, Mr. Wickard disclosed that to assure sufficient meat for army, navy and lend-lease needs, deliveries of beef and veal to civilians would be 80 per cent of the amount sold during the last quarter of 1941; lamb and mutton deliveries would be 95 per cent; and pork deliveries 75 per cent.

The proposed 2½ pound weekly meat allowance, he said, was entirely adequate for good nutrition. Individual households may use any method the family prefers in effecting the rationing, he added. However, if there are invalids, aged persons, young children, or vegetarians in the home, the housewife should reduce her purchases accordingly.

Simultaneously with his announcement of a limitation in the civilian meat supply, Secretary Wickard warned of a food shortage "in the not too distant future" in urging congress to consider labor draft legislation as one means of halting the mass exodus of farm workers to war industries and the armed forces.

10-DAY MIRACLE:
Performed by Kaiser

Shipbuilder Henry J. Kaiser had broken many a naval construction record and been justly proud. But proudest of all was he when the 10,500-ton Liberty freighter Joseph N. Teal hit the water in Kaiser's Portland, Ore., shipyard exactly 10 days from the time its keel was laid. This amazing feat clipped 14 days from the previous speed record for shipbuilding.

Addressing shipyard workers, maritime commission representatives and shipyard officials, Kaiser said:

"Our original contract called for the delivery of ships in about 150 days. Many experts shook their heads and said we could not do it. Yet here beside us is this great craft—only 10 days from keel laying to launching. It is a miracle, no less—a miracle of God and of the genius of free American workmen."

Kaiser saw in the new record a promise of future prosperity for America.

"If American brains and ingenuity do what they should do," he said, "I will have no fear for the future. We will have to rebuild what we have destroyed. Prosperity can go on and on."

Meanwhile Kaiser was recruiting an additional 50,000 workers to assist him in the construction of three mammoth aircargo planes as the nucleus of a huge air fleet.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

MEXICO CITY: Reporting that higher prices for silver bullion in the United States were draining off Mexican silver money, the treasury ministry announced that it had banned the export of silver coins. The ruling would have the effect of making Mexican citizens and tourists leave their change behind when they crossed into the United States, thus conserving the supply.

MARSHFIELD: Old 102, a railroad engine that served throughout the World war on Coos county, Ore., tracks and was well-known in logging circles throughout the Pacific Northwest, has joined the army in northeastern Oregon, it was announced here. The locomotive, now an oil burner, first used coal when it went into operation 30 years ago. It is now hauling supplies.

MADAGASCAR:
Safe for Allies

Active Vichy French resistance on the island of Madagascar came to an end when British occupation forces supported by South African armored units and East African troops took over Tananarive, capital of the strategic island.

The communique that told of the British capture of Tananarive also disclosed that Antalya, 200 miles from the northern tip of Madagascar on the island's northeast coast was also occupied.

Allied control of Madagascar, lying athwart Africa's southeast coast and commanding sea lanes from Capetown to Cairo and to Australia and India meant that a strategic setback had been handed the Axis. It had been known that the Vichy authorities on the island had been friendly to Axis agents and it had even been reported that Japanese submarines had put into out-of-the-way harbors on the island for fuel and supplies for their forays against United Nations shipping in the Indian ocean.

SCRAP METAL:
Need 17 Million Tons

America had stopped living on its metal "fat" and now must dip back 40 years for steel and iron junk, leading steel producers declared in assaying the nation's critical scrap metal situation.

"Many millions of tons of iron and steel scrap must be collected if the tremendous tonnage of steel needed in the nation's war effort is to be produced," said Eugene R. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel corporation.

At least 17 million tons of scrap would be needed before January 1, when war production was scheduled to reach its peak. Monthly consumption of scrap was running about four million tons, the greatest in history, but still not enough.

"Every farmer and every householder has a heavy responsibility for the country's production of guns, tanks, ships and shells," said Ralph H. Watson, vice president of the U. S. Steel corporation. "The recovery of scrap is one of the most important war jobs facing America today."

NAVY:
Gains on Subs

Evidence that the United Nations were forging ahead of the Axis in the race for control of the oceans was disclosed by Chairman Carl Vinson of the house naval affairs committee in a report compiled in co-operation with the navy department. Allied shipping losses along the Atlantic coast had virtually ceased, the report said, while a five-fold increase was being achieved in the navy's shipbuilding program.

"At sea we have begun to turn the corner," said Congressman Vinson. "Directly or indirectly the first fruits of American naval expansion are already influencing the course of the war."

REP. CARL VINSON

". . . begun to turn the corner."

Citing the American victories in the Solomon islands as an indication of the offensive spirit among the United Nations, Mr. Vinson revealed that at the beginning of July, the United States was building 3,230 combat, auxiliary, patrol and mine vessels for its own navy. This compared with only 697 ships of the same category under construction a year earlier.

VATICAN:
Post-War Plans?

No official announcements from the Vatican followed the conferences of Myron C. Taylor with Pope Pius XII. But seasoned diplomatic observers viewed the visit of President Roosevelt's personal representative to Vatican City as a step in paving the way for collaboration in post-war plans. This was given credence in the light of Mr. Taylor's subsequent conferences with the British and French envoys to the Vatican and the representatives of conquered Poland and Jugoslavia.

Immediately in the foreground as reasons for Mr. Taylor's journey to Rome were: the need to discuss American interests in protecting American Catholics in Japanese-occupied territory; relations between the United States and South American countries; and the American government's protest to Vichy against persecution of the Jews, in the hope that the Vatican formally would support the protests.

But over and above these immediate objectives appeared the possibility that the groundwork was being laid for post-war collaboration.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—Heroes are almost necessarily young these days. Hence the more news in the stand of Edouard Herriot and Jules Jeanneney against Petain, which means against Hitler, and for France. M. Herriot is 70 and M. Jeanneney is 78. There is an old proverb, "A wise old man's word is worth more than a young buzzard's sword."

A Reminder That 'A France There Will Always Be'

M. Jeanneney is president of the senate and M. Herriot president of the chamber of deputies, in the overthrown parliament which still lives in the hearts of true Frenchmen. They were big news in 1934 and 1935, when they were not implicated in the fateful Stavisky pawn shop scandal, precursor of the inside job which delivered La Belle France, roped and hog-tied to Hitler.

Stavisky might have been Mark Twain's "Man Who Corrupted Hadleyburg." Smeared were Chautemps, Laval, Flandin, Tardieu, Daladier and pretty nearly every top-hole politician in France, but not these old-timers, who long before had proven both their honesty and loyalty to the republic. "If there were one honest man among you I would have saved you." France may invoke Scripture and remind the world that she came through with two.

The bullet-headed, bull-necked, pompadoured Herriot, former pedagog and for 25 years mayor of Lyons, was long known as the Theodore Roosevelt of France, supercharged with energy.

He won the premiership in June, 1924, and he and his cabinet of radical Socialists held power until the following April. Then as later the radical Socialist party was full of termites and included in its leadership many of the men who later supervised the moral and political collapse of their country. From then, Herriot was an outsider.

He rose again in 1933 defeating, appropriately, the Tardieu-Laval faction. French politics, in those years, was no place for an honest man and he soon was on the sidelines again. He belongs in the picture of staunch bourgeois liberalism.

Jules Jeanneney, long a bearded patriarch, is an old-school politician who, like M. Herriot, made his political career in the provinces. Several times he narrowly missed being president of France.

SOME people were talking the other night about econometrics, ecology, geo-politik, and logistics. We asked one of them how about it and he said: "I'm a stranger here myself." That goes for a lot of us these days, with new names and events outrunning both dictionaries and encyclopedias. Our fat and conservative old dictionary doesn't list econometrics, but here it is, on the financial page, thoroughly respectable.

There Appears No Movement Against Dictionary Inflation

The news is that Jacob Baker, formerly Harry Hopkins' right-hand man, down among the alphabetical folk at Washington, has been elected vice president of the Institute of Applied Econometrics, Inc. As we get it, after asking many innocent bystanders, econometrics has to do with teaming statistics and economic theory, in mutual aid, by which the statistics take on meaning and the theory becomes possibly provable or plausible.

Within the last four days we have pegged news stories touching on all of the above four new bright facets of dinner-table talk. They have to do with post-war reconstruction. Whatever happens, we'll have a word for it.

Mr. Baker was born and reared in Colorado, was graduated from the Colorado Agricultural college and the University of California school of engineering, found plenty of adventure as a mine manager in Mexican hot spots, and started his Chicago career in the service of oil, utility and engineering firms.

He is genial and baldish, casually dressed, usually smoking a pipe, and is the last man you would pick for such precision and incisiveness as his new title would suggest. We used to meet him at singing parties, a few years ago, at which he was Jake Baker, quite unlike the Jacob Baker of the consulting engineering firm of House, Baker and Associates of Chicago. He was a good catch-as-catch-can close-harmony singer and everything about him was at variance with his career of zig-zag price charts, co-efficients of expansions, torques and obsolescence.

Necessary Evil

Evil is necessary. If it did not exist, the good would not exist. Evil is the unique reason for the good's being.

What would courage be far from peril? And what pity without pain? What would become of devotion and sacrifice if happiness were universal? It is because of evil and suffering that the earth may be inhabited and that life is worth living.—Anatole France.

For the service man who smokes a pipe or rolls-his-own, no finer gift could be sent than a pound of his favorite tobacco. Local dealers are now featuring pound cans of Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco—the world's largest-selling pipe tobacco—to send to men in our armed forces, a favorite with many a pipe-smoker or roll-your-own fan in the services.—Adv.

Notes of an Innocent Bystander:

The Magic Lanterns: The holdovers are breaking run records in the major temples, which makes the new list meager . . . The Two Bodies, also known as Betty Grable and Victor Mature, pour the glamour on "Footlight Serenade." This is a happy-go-lucky musical. The story voted for Rutherford B. Hayes, but the tunes and gags help it to hide its age. It is packed with likable troupers, including Jane Wyman, Jas. Gleason and John Payne . . . "Lady in a Jam" reveals Irene Dunne as a hare-brained heiress who winds up with a psychiatrist going "tck tck" at her, but he's making loonier noises on his own later, being in love. The flicker is of the old screwball school. Patric Knowles and Ralph Bellamy horse around in it . . . The current quip concerns the soldier in "This Is the Army," who felt that he wasn't doing enough toward the war effort. And so he sat through "Wake Island" twice.

The Wireless: The strut has gone out of the Jap radio. Its spielers are preparing the people for tough times. The earlier assurances were that beating the Americans was a breeze . . . The patter they write for M. Gross wouldn't be funny if he delivered it in baggy pants and fell on the seat of them every other word . . . The V for Victory series improves with every performance. It has acquired showmanship and gives it plenty . . . Charlie McCarthy returned to the airwaves feeling funnier than ever. Said it was so cold in Alaska "the inhabitants have to live some place else" . . . Roy Shield's crew, weaving the ditty, "I Get a Kick Out of You" (with velvety violins) formed a musical rainbow . . . Victor Borge, awarded the Comic of the Year prize last season, isn't to be renewed by his sponsor.

The Story Tellers: The most shocking charges against the Nazis are now being offered by the krauts themselves. In acts, not words. "The Black Book of Poland," a record of the German atrocities in that land, sounds like a report on the behavior of savage beasts . . . Rex Stout has compiled the pre-Pearl Harbor quotes of some of the brothers in congress, which will make a book called "The Illustrious Dunderheads." Frank Sullivan will quip the introduction, and Gropper's caricatures will make the squirming complete . . . A nice dab of fiction is "Mrs. Willoughby's Letters," by Mary Elizabeth Plummer in Atlantic Monthly. Incidentally, that monthly is on the hustle nowadays, going in heavy for promotion, trying to pull away, presumably, from the graybeard clientele . . . The Most Beautiful Girl on Broadway, according to Harry Thompson in Cosmopolitan, hails from Sioux City. She is Constance Moore.

The Front Pages: Proof that Vichy has accepted the brute philosophy of its Nazi masters was confirmed by the poignant headline in one ayem gazette: "Vichy to Jail Priests Aiding Jewish Children" . . . The Mirror's breezy interview with Special U. S. Prosecutor Oscar Ewing (he sent Pelley to prison for 15 years) revealed that his stormtroops sent Pelley $10 a month (700 of them) during one month before the trial. After his conviction they sent him about $150 daily . . . The most arresting news story locally was that one about the Very Rev. R. I. Gannon, president of Fordham, who publicly confessed that his prewar isolationist views were wrong and "that President Roosevelt was right" . . . "If," he said, "the President had listened to me, China, Russia and Great Britain would now be prostrate and we should be facing our zero hour alone and unprepared."

Edward G. Robinson, the star, was coming out of Dinty Moore's 46th Street rendezvous when someone pointed out Detective Johnny Broderick passing by . . . "Oh," oh'd the famed film hero, "I once played Broderick on the screen. I'd love to meet him. I've heard so much about him."

A pal introduced them. "This is a real thrill," said the movie star. "But another thrill I'd enjoy would be to go with you when you and your colleagues are shooting it out with gangsters!"

"I don't think you'd enjoy that, Mr. Robinson," said Broderick. "When hoodlums shoot at cops they don't use blanks."

One of the more amusing Washington stories (unquestionably untrue) concerns Halifax and FDR . . . "Mr. President," the British ambassador is supposed to have said, "when I was viceroy of Indiah, I felt that all of Indiah would have understood me overnight had I wrapped myself in a sheet and sat on the floor with Gandhi."

"Then why didn't you?" asked the President.

"Because," blandly basso'd the Britisher, "Indiah would have understood—but Britain—nevahhhh!"

Posey Explains Machinery Freezing

The U. S. Department of Agriculture order of September 17, temporarily "freezing" all farm machinery in the hands of dealers, was described by Mr. Napoleon Posey, Chairman, County Rationing Committee, as necessary to insure fair distribution of available equipment and its placement where it will do the most good in wartime farming production.

Administration of the farm machinery rationing program was delegated by the War Production Board to the Office of Price Administration, and redelegated to the Department of Agriculture. County rationing will be handled by a County rationing committee composed of the County AAA Chairman and two farmers appointed by the County War Board. Two alternates will also be appointed.

Farm machinery in one classification (Group A), which is scarce and especially needed to meet current agricultural needs, may be sold only upon approval by the county farm machinery rationing committee. Machinery in a second catagory (Group B), including items somewhat less scarce, may be sold upon certification by the farmer to the dealer that it is required to meet current agricultural needs. A third classification (Group C) includes the smaller items that may be sold without restrictions.

Group A includes beet lifters, beet loaders, combines, corn pickers, disc harrows, feed grinders, fertilizer spreaders, grain drills, grain elevators, hay balers, lime spreaders, manure spreaders, milk collers, milking machines, pickup balers, potato diggers, shredders, and tractors (including garden tractors).

Group B machinery, which can be purchased upon certification to a dealer that it is needed for current production, includes most other farm equipment and machinery.

Group C, which is exempt from any hoes, rakes, forks, scythes, shovels and all hand-operated and one and two-horse drawn farm machinery and equipment not included in Group A.

There are no restrictions on sale or transfer of used fam machinery, equipment or repair parts.

Eligibility requirments for Group A purchases include inadequacy of present equipment and inability to meet farm production goals by repairing, or by purchasing or renting used machinery, or by custom or exchange work. A purchaser must turn in replaced equipment and agree to rent or let others use the new machinery on specified terms and conditions. The purchaser must present a satisfactory reason if changing from horses or mule power to motor power, or from hand labor to machinery.

Applicants who are refused certification for machinery purchaser may appeal to the State USDA War Board and then to the Special War Board Assistant to the Secretary of Agriculure.

A list of applicants receiving certificates and equipment which they purchase will be available for inspection in County offices and will be made available for publication in local papers.

Equipment in Group A must not be purchased later than Oc. 31, 1942.

Low-Income Farmers To Hold Meetings

There is going to be more war talk in group meetings of low-income farmers in Chilton County than ever before, said Marvin Dorbin, County Supervisor, of the Farm Security Administration, today.

"Or I should say," explained Mr. Durbin, "that they are going to talk about ways of helping win the war by working together. The farmers who will participate in the FSA program already have pledged themselves most universally to produce more foodstuffs. Now, with harvest time near, their group meetings will be turned into councils of war. They are getting serious about how to fulfill these pledges."

Topics of discussion among small farmers in the FSA program, the Supervisor said, will be:

1. Sharing farm equipment and acquiring jointly the machinery that may be shared and that a small farmer needs but never has been ble to buy or use alone because his place is too small to justify the outlay.

2. Lending a hand to his neighbors, booking transportation, buying and selling together and planning new money crops together.

3. Exchanging labor for harvesting, for repairing, building, clearing and doing other jobs together so that the total job of helping to win the war may be done more efficiently and quickly.

There has been a general increase of food crops among farmers on the FSA program in this county, Mr. Durbin said, far beyond anything they ever produced before, certainly before 1941.

"But raising food crops is one thing," he said, "and harvesting and marketing them are others. There is a growing feeling that the small farmer must work with his neighbor of the cycle is completed from planting to selling—or getting the foodstuffs to places where they are most badly needed to help 'win the war and write the peace.' ".

Look! While they last. A beautiful 9x12 rug for only $2.95. Where? At Bell Hardware.

Come on folks, 'less give our boys a Rah, Rah, Rah. They won the first game for Maplesville over Greensboro in American history. Although a hard battle was fought, all the boys played a good game, but don't forget Walker and Hicks for stepping over the line for one of those things you call a touchdown. Well maybe they were the nearest the line.

But remember our new coach Mr. Daniels, all the boys work hard for him.

We Didn't Know It 20 Years Ago

ALMOST TWENTY years ago we completed the Mitchell Dam hydro-electric development, the second in a series of six large hydro-electric plants. We began building Martin Dam, and greatly enlarged our steam generating facilities. Preliminary planning was started on hydro-electric and steam generating projects to be built later.

AT ABOUT the same time we established our New Industries Division, whose efforts in publicizing Alabama advantages to industrialists elsewhere resulted in the establishment of many new industries in Alabama.

THESE WERE peace-time industries, just as our power plants were. Today many of these industries are converted to war production, and about sixty per cent of the electricity generated at our plants is being used in war production and activities.

WHEN WE pioneered in large power development in Alabama and began to tell industry elsewhere about the advantages of locating in Alabama, we didn't know that there would be a war twenty years later, and that our generating plants and the many factories resulting from the efforts of our New Industries Division would be so helpful in today's war effort.

SO WE claim no credit. However, knowing that our accomplishments are being helpful in this manner gives us and our employees a feeling of pride and inspires us to whatever further efforts are necessary to help win the war.

What's Doing At Isabella High

By Jesse Culp

The course of study is handicapped somewhat at Isabella yet, due to the fact that school hours are shorter. We realize the fact, however that this is war, and that many sacrifiecs will come our way.

Speaking of the scrap campaign, last year, during school, the F. F. A. chapter here at Isabella made an effort and succeeded in collecting quite a bit of scrap, which they sold. But the climax of the story came recently when they invested this money in a war bond. I think this stands as an excellent example to other clubs and organizations. It is both patriotic and profitable!

T'would be a mistake to say that I. H. S. students aren't airminded, as is evidenced in a certain roll call period, when, if the majority ruled, paper airplanes would reign galore . . . Some students still insist on dressing in keeping with the calender rather than the thermometer. Why just the other day, all of us went to class in our coas, and shivering at that. About the time we got seated, in walked some students with their sleeves rolled up. When a discussion of he matter started, I just retired to a neutral corner and shivered.

When better attendance records are made, Isabella students will make them. For example, there is our own Walter Kendrick, a Junior in high school this year. He has never missed a day in school. A record like that hasn't been easy to make, either. For example, there was that morning when he had to walk to school in the snow. But despite all these odds, he came through with a perfect attendance record. Who can beat it?

The Cosmopolitan and Jeffersonian societies are doing a great work at Isabella. These are the only clubs of their kind in which students under the ninth grade are eligible for membership. Last year, speaking contests were held in each society. The winners from the two societies then spoke against each other. The result was interesting, and very educational. I hope that this can be repeated.

Dear me, I see the teacher starting over this way with a mad look in her eye, so I might ought to close right hasty-like. See you later.

19 USO Clubs In Alabama

To many thousand Alabama boys in our armed services, USO is a "home away from home." In our state alone USO now operates nineteen club houses in the vicinity of army camps, flying fields, Government war industries, training centers and cities where soldiers go on leave. In these club houses and recreation centers, service men mingle with their buddies, write the folks back home, rest, relax and enjoy wholesome entertainment and homelike surroundings. Thru USO they receive introductions to families and churches in their localities. Alabama service men have the privilege of one of USO's 900 club houses wherever they go, in the U.S.A. or overseas. USO also maintains mobile units which serve troops stationed along lonely coastlines and on detached guard duty in the United States, the Hawaiis, Alaska and other bases. On September 2th, USO will open a splendidly appointed troops-in-transit lounge for service men at the terminal station in Birmingham.

USO has been allocated $60,000 of the fund which will be raised by Alabama's War Chest in the campaign thatbegins October 20th. Seven other war relief agencies, which are sending food, clothing, and medical supplies to stricken peoples of Allied nations, will also share in the donations made by Alabama citizens in the War Chest appeal. These are the British War Relief, the Greek Relief Association, Russian War Relief, United China Relief, War Prisoner's Aid Committee, Queen Wilhelmina Fund, and the Polish American Council.

FIRST AID . . . First aid for the injured is important in peace time, but in war such training is of the greatest value. Above, a Girl Scout leader is instructing a group in elementary first aid. The girls are learning to anchor a triangle bandage for an injured arm.

GIRL SCOUTS OF AMERICA, an organization of about 654,000 scouts, have their work all cut out for them in the American war effort. All of them are trained to take care of themselves and of others in case of need. And 44,000 of them are seniors, between the ages of 15 and 18, who have been in training since last fall for specific defense needs.

The Senior Service Scout Training program is modeled on the training of the Girl Guides of England, who performed valuable work in the Battle of Britain. Candidates for S. S. S. training must measure up to a severe standard before they may even start training. They must be physically fit; must pass a test in the standard Junior Red Cross first aid course; must know the country about their community intimately enough to get around in daylight or dark; must know how to pack an overnight kit with common necessities within a limited time; must know how to prepare a shelter; arrange emergency sanitary facilities; and arrange for cooking meals indoors and outdoors for any number of people.

Right: Typical S. S. S. girl saluting you here is one of the two girls first to earn the Senior Service Scout rating in New York.

The importance of blankets in time of disaster was learned the hard way in bomb-battered Britain. Girl Scouts have profited by that sad experience and have organized blanket brigades, trained to pack and deliver blankets to specified areas in a hurry, as shown in picture at left. Right: Senior Service Girl Scouts are trained in the ways of babies, and know just how to handle them—just in case babies and parents should become separated during an air raid.

WHAT'S COOKING? . . . There's quite a difference between cooking for one and two persons and cooking for large groups. Girl Scouts learn how to prepare mass meals under tutelage of a Red Cross canteen worker.

U. S. '42 Farm Output Planned to Fill Needs

AAA Authorities Say Two Records Broken This Year

Farmers from Maine to California will chalk up two history-making achievements when their 1942 harvests are in, according to the United States department of agriculture.

Harvest like this of potatoes on the C. A. Brown farm of Dallam county, Texas, have been planned in advance in order to insure the right amounts of the right products to fill anticipated needs of the U. S. and United Nations.

American farms this year will produce more than any nation in all time and, for the first time, the nation's total farm output will be planned to fill needs determined in advance.

This double-barreled record will be the American farmer's ringing answer to the challenge of war.

The great harvest will consist of the right amounts of the right products to fill anticipated needs of the United States and the United Nations.

These goals have been broken down into goals for states, counties and individual farms for farmers to shoot at.

Goals have been used for years by AAA for basic crops. But this year ALL crops have goals to insure abundant Food for Freedom. The food will make America strong, feed her Allies' soldiers and civilians and create reserves of such easily stored concentrated products as cheese, evaporated milk, dried eggs and canned fruits and vegetables.

Export commodities will be an important part of the output. Lend-lease pork purchases, excluding lard, have already exceeded the equivalent of 11 million hogs. Egg-drying capacity has been expanded from 50 million to 300 million pounds annually.

Exports alone for the current fiscal year are expected to require more than twice as much acreage as in 1941.

When Pearl Harbor suddenly cut off all imports from the Far East, the 1942 production goals established as the original Food for Freedom goals were jacked up. Revised goals call for one-fifth more production than the average of the 1930s and 5½ per cent more than in the record year of 1941.

A. C. A. A. Photo.

Another view of the same Brown farm showing still more potatoes which will soon be on the way to hungry Yanks, hard working armament workers, and Allies throughout the world.

Last fall, after war needs had been canvassed, more than 135,000 AAA farmer committeemen, under the direction of USDA war boards, began calling on farmers to see what they could do to meet heavy war demands.

Virtually every farmer in the United States was given an opportunity to pledge all-out war effort on his farm by controlling production of products not urgently needed for war and intensifying production of those in great demand.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

LITTLE BUSINESS CRUSADER

Donald Nelson's "get tough" policy gets increasingly unfortunate reverberations. Part of this is because Donald, nice as he is, and well liked as he is, just doesn't seem to have a knack for feeling the public pulse.

For instance, he should have known that the most popular man in Washington, as far as little business is concerned, is Guy Holcomb, head of the justice department's small business bureau. Yet Nelson reached into the justice department and demanded that the attorney general fire Holcomb. The reaction against Nelson has been bad.

Nelson had no jurisdiction over the justice department, and it is unusual for one executive to reach into the affairs of an outside office. However, Holcomb has been consistently critical of WPB's failure to award war contracts to little business; his cracks got on Nelson's nerves, and he demanded that the attorney general fire him. So to keep peace in the official family, Holcomb was "permitted to resign."

Actually, Holcomb was a hustling young business man from Atlanta, Ga., who knew nothing about red tape, spurned bureaucracy and went around saying exactly what he thought of people who seemed to be lying down on the job. Result: He made a lot of enemies, but he got an awful lot done for little business.

For instance, he discovered that only three companies in the entire United States got all the contracts for putting boilers in merchant ships.

ALASKAN ATTACKS

The senate military affairs committee got some encouraging news when it met behind closed doors to hear the report of a subcommittee which has returned from an inspection tour of our Alaskan fortifications.

For military reasons, the greater part of the report cannot be revealed. However, this much can be told:

The subcommittee, composed of Senators Happy Chandler of Kentucky, Mon Wallgren of Washington and Rufus Holman of Oregon, was unanimous in declaring that our aerial defenses in Alaska were strong enough to repel any attempted Jap invasion.

Remarkable progress has been made since Pearl Harbor in establishing new land and sea bases in the Alaskan area. The three senators also paid high tribute to the morale and skill of U. S. airmen, who are forced to fly in the worst kinds of weather conditions.

Though refusing to predict on how soon we can start an all-out air offensive to drive the Japs from their footholds in the Aleutians, the subcommittee reported that one obstacle which has been holding up such an offensive has now been licked.

Hitherto we have been unable to send protective convoys of fighting planes with bombers raiding Jap positions in the Aleutians, because our fighters do not have the flying range for the 1,000-mile round trip from the army base at Umnak island, nearest outpost to the Japs. However, this problem has been solved by the installation of "belly" gas tanks on fighters. They carry several hundred gallons of fuel and can be dropped after they are emptied.

The subcommittee also reported that interference with army and navy radio communications in the Alaskan area, caused by bad weather and the Aurora Borealis, was being largely circumvented by compass flying.

UNFOUNDED RUMOR DEPARTMENT

The Rumor: One of the Freuhauf brothers in Detroit, who manufacture trailers, gave his yacht to the navy, but before doing so said he wanted to take it on a farewell cruise. He had no sooner got a few hours offshore, however, when he received a peremptory demand from the navy to return, after which Harry Hopkins and his new bride took over the yacht and sailed away on their honeymoon.

The Truth: Harry Hopkins doesn't like yachting, gets seasick easily, spent his vacation in Connecticut. Harry Freuhauf, interviewed by this columnist on the telephone, said: "My brothr did turn his yacht over to the navy, but the arrangements were entirely amiable, and Harry Hopkins never was on it at any time or place. We have heard all sorts of rumors about this, but there is absolutely nothing to them."

POLITICAL ECONOMY

Hard-working Representative John H. Folger of North Carolina will go the limit for a constituent, but a recent request from a job-seeker in his district almost got him down.

"I have filed an application with the Civil Service commission for a position as an economist.

"I am a farmer of many years' experience and believe I am eminently qualified for the job I'm after.

"I have practiced economy all my life."

Let's Have a Real Football Supper!
(See Recipes Below.)

Football Supper

Thoughts for fall naturally bring to mind fall's favorite game, football, and foods that go well after the game. It makes no difference whether you have been to one of the big games or whether you are going to feed the hungry crowd of youngsters who come in from playing in the nearest available field, the uppermost thought in your mind is good, hot, appetizing food.

Smart management dictates a delicious hot dish that you whisk out of the oven, a crisp salad for balance and contrast to the meal, and a smooth, light dessert. Your crowd will be thirsty, too, so don't forget coffee for the grown-ups and a hot, chocolaty drink for the children.

Do something special for the table—even a little touching-up will bring the appreciative oh's and ah's from your family and guests. Perhaps there are a few chrysanthemums still in the garden or you might try to get together a few, small novelty footballs to make up into a centerpiece. A cloth in the burnished fall colors or deep brown, bright yellow, or what-have-you will mark you as a hostess whose eye is ever on the calendar and season.

Bring on the food! And such food it will be if you serve spaghetti, done up in casserole with plenty of sauce and cheese for extra goodness:

Spaghetti Creole.
(Serves 8)

2 pounds long spaghetti
2 onions, chopped
1 clove garlic
¼ cup butter
¼ cup oil
2 cans tomato puree
2½ cups tomatoes
2 teaspoons worcestershire sauce
Salt, pepper
1 pound ground beef
Grated cheese

Cook onion and garlic (peeled and a toothpick run through it) in the hot oil and butter, slowly. Remove garlic. Add tomato puree, tomatoes, worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper. Cook meat in additional fat. Add to first mixture and cook very slowly for two hours. Cook spaghetti in boiling, salted water. Drain and rinse in hot water. Place in buttered casserole, first spaghetti layer, then sauce, grated cheese, and so on until casserole is full. Garnish with an additional slice of bacon if desired. Bake in a slow (325-degree) oven 45 minutes.

Contrast note to the Spaghetti Creole is a green vegetable chilled to a crispness. It's also a good idea to balance a starchy food with something as full of minerals and vitamins as an armload of greens clinging together with a light, tart french dressing:

Tossed Greens.

Wash lettuce and separate into leaves. Use several large spinach leaves, carefully washed, and shredded with the lettuce leaves, or small spinach leaves used whole among the lettuce. Shred three carrots, mince one small onion and toss among the greens. Marinate 1 cup of cooked green beans in french dressing for 20 minutes and add to salad bowl. Add more french dressing and serve.

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: The secretary of agriculture, Claude Wickard, has announced that meat rationing days are in prospect, so learn now, how to cut down on meats. Fewer meat cuts will be available, so be prepared to learn how to do many different things with what you have.

Eggs, cheese and fish are obtainable at moderate prices and are wonderful props in place of meat, and are all rich sources of protein which is one of the main values of meat.

Tea supplies are short, so it's suggested you dispense with the one teaspoon per pot measure as a means of saving.

A bit of the something different for the menu is provided if you serve this salad:

Chiffonade Salad.

Combine cooked, cubed beets with riced hard-cooked eggs and minced onion. Marinate and serve on crisp romaine or lettuce. You can turn out a chili con carne in no time and it's a wonderful dish on these evenings with a fall tang in the air. The kidney beans, tomatoes and ground meat blend in delicious flavor:

Chili Con Carne.
(Serves 6)

2½ cups kidney beans
1 large onion, sliced
1 chopped green pepper
1 pound ground beef
3 tablespoons lard
3½ cups tomatoes
1½ teaspoons salt
Paprika
3 whole cloves
1 bay leaf
1 tablespoon chili powder

Brown onion, green pepper and meat in hot lard. Add tomatoes and seasonings. Simmer two hours, adding water if necessary. Add beans and heat thoroughly.

Corn bread is a delightful variation for any kind of dinner but is especially welcome if you serve the golden wedges at your football supper. Piping hot is the order of the day:

Corn Bread.

1 cup yellow cornmeal
¼ cup wheat flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 beaten egg
½ cup milk
1 tablespoon melted butter

Sift flour and mix with other dry ingredients. Combine egg with milk and add to dry ingredients. Add melted butter and pour batter into a well greased pan. Bake in a hot (425-degree) oven about 25 minutes.

Apples can be found in generous quantities now, so use them for thriftiness' sake. To save on your sugar, this recipe calls for part molasses and part sugar:

Apple Pandowdy.
(Serves 6)

1 Recipe Pastry
4 cups sliced apples
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
2 tablespoons butter
¼ cup molasses
½ cup sugar
¼ cup water

Divide pastry into two portions and roll thin. Line shallow baking dish with pastry. Mix apples, salt, spices and sugar and put in pan. Combine molasses with water and pour over fruit. Dot with butter, cover with remaining pastry, press edges together and trim. Bake in a moderately hot (425-degree) oven 15 minutes. Lower temperature to slow (325 degrees) and bake 30 minutes. Remove from oven, chop top crust into fruit, return to oven and continue baking 1 hour. Serve with butter or with plain or whipped cream.

Football Brew.

Use 1 heaping teaspoon decaffeinated coffee, regular grind for each cup water. Pour cold water into pot or percolator. Set percolator basket with coffee in it. Cover. Let percolate 15 to 20 minutes slowly and gently.

by GRANTLAND RICE

NANA WNU Service

SOME alert statistician has figured it out that the next two months will see more big football games than any season in history. Even with the call of the bugle there will be a greater number of stars in action, and a greater number of headline contests.

Grantland Rice

But what about the size of the crowds? How will the transportation snarl be settled? This is where the big guess enters.

George Preston Marshall, owner of the Washington Redskins, would like to make a wager that his big professional team will outdraw any other squad in the country, college or pro, and that it will equal its best year in this respect.

Whether or not he can outdraw Notre Dame is still part of future happenings. Frank Leahy has one of his finest squads at South Bend, and from the present outlook he will play to capacity in most of his contests. This will be true against Army, Michigan, Navy, Northwestern and Southern California. Capacity won't be far away against the others, including Stanford, Iowa Naval Cadets and the Great Lakes squad.

It would not be surprising to see Notre Dame close to the half million mark.

Naval Cadet Teams

The Georgia and North Carolina Naval Cadet teams will attract fully as much interest as any college squad, especially if they can get away with fair success. They are still gambles to a certain extent, but they won't be weak. They are taking the hardest training in any service for future flying, and will be physically ready for even their starting assignments. They are all ably coached, and they all have the heart and the fire to give all their systems can carry.

The major cities, such as New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Boston, Philadelphia, San Francisco, etc., will draw big crowds. The smaller bowls or stands that call for automobile transportation will have a rougher road ahead. There also will be less railroad travel on the spectator's side.

Close to the Top

Pennsylvania, with a hard nine-game schedule and the outlook for a first-class team, should be close to the leaders in packing them in. Philadelphia is one of the best of all football cities.

Michigan is another team facing a big attendance year. The Wolverines won't be far from the front with such teams to meet as Great Lakes, Michigan State, Iowa Naval Cadets, Northwestern, Minnesota, Illinois, Harvard, Notre Dame, Ohio State and Iowa. This is what you might easily label a package of heavy trouble. It is close to being the hardest schedule in the country.

Fritz Crisler has a fine squad with such backs as Tommy Kuzma and Paul White, but no one can expect the Wolverine to claw its way unbeaten through this barrage of human flesh. Minnesota and Notre Dame alone are twin bundles of dynamite.

Fritz Crisler

There will be no bother about big crowds in the Middle West, including Ohio State's home at Columbus, with so many feature games and so many featured stars.

In the East

What about the East? New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Baltimore will be beyond the average.

New York, with several games transferred to its subway service, will have its best football year. Between the colleges and the professional Giants the Polo Grounds and the Yankee Stadium will set new records.

Even with the transportation odds against them, all other sports have shown an amazing attendance record. This goes for baseball, golf and racing, especially.

As football happens to be the best crowd magnet of them all, there is no reason why the fall season just ahead shouldn't more than keep pace with other forms of competition.

Although at least a hundred stars have been taken by the various services from the pro camps, there has been no lapse of public interest as the Chicago and Los Angles games have already shown, with close to 200,000 at these two opening salutes. Teams are expecting capacity crowds from Denver to Boston and Baltimore, via New York, and I don't think they will be disappointed.

There may be a dizzy drop later on, but 1942 will set some form of record before the final block is put on and the final pass is thrown on the gridiron.

PREPAREDNESS

by ✚ the AMERICAN RED CROSS

ASSISTANCE to members of the nation's fighting forces and their dependents is the primary duty of the Red Cross.

This obligation is set forth in the charter granted the American Red Cross by congress in 1905, and in the army and navy regulations. It is also stated in the present selective service regulations, which require all draft boards to refer questions concerning the welfare of selectees and their dependents after induction to the Red Cross.

Red Cross help to service men and their dependents takes two forms: In every army camp and with every American fighting unit anywhere a Red Cross field director is on the job. His duty is to help the service man with his problems and relieve him of worry over them.

In nearly every county in the United States is a local Red Cross chapter, with a home service worker. Its job is to help the service man's dependents, and relieve them, too, of worry and need.

Assistance to members of the armed forces may take the form of advising them or their dependents on government life insurance, allotments or pensions, and of helping them in filling out the necessary application forms.

The Red Cross may even help members of the service man's family in getting employment, emergency medical treatment, or it may grant them money to tide the family over until an allotment is actually received from the government.

Erratic Currents

Sometimes natural electric currents are so erratic over one area that they will disrupt telegraphic service, while they are so intense and steady over another that they may be used to send messages without the aid of other power, says Collier's.

An outstanding exhibit of this phenomenon occurred on September 2, 1859, when these currents alone were used to transmit telegrams for two hours over the 100-mile line between Boston and Portland, Maine.

The sagging arm rest, magazine holder and frayed-out wicker around the legs should be removed. Cotton batting is then basted to muslin and sewn to the chair. The sateen cover for chair and cushion is made next. The tufting is done by sewing through cover, padding and openings in the wicker work with carpet thread and a long darning needle; adding a button at each stitch.

Dressed for Christening

The bottles of champagne that are used in christening American ships require more than two hours to be "dressed" for the occasion, reports Collier's. They have to be fitted with a 1-16th-inch flexible copper mesh jacket, to keep the glass from flying, and adorned with two tricolored ribbons, each 62 feet long.

After launching, the bottle and ribbons are usually stored aboard the vessel to insure lasting good luck.

J. Fuller Pep

I been readin' about some of these divorces and it seems to me husbands are like automobiles. If you take good care of them, you don't have to keep getting new ones all the time

And one way of takin' good care of him is to see he gets all his vitamins. And that's where KELLOGG'S PEP comes in. 'Course it hasn't got 'em all, but it's extra-rich in the two most likely to be short in ordinary meals—vitamins B_1 and D. What's more, PEP'S one grand-tastin' cereal, too!

Kellogg's Pep

A delicious cereal that supplies per serving (1 oz.): the full minimum daily need of vitamin D; 1/4 the daily need of vitamin B_1.

I KNOW WHAT TEAMWORK CAN DO

I work in a war industry where every man has his shoulder to the wheel to keep 'em rolling off assembly lines. Teamwork keeps us ahead of schedules. We give all we've got to our job because we're helping beat the Japs and Hitler.

From all I hear, teamwork is seeing to it that beer is sold under good conditions in Alabama. Law enforcements agencies, the ABC Board, beer dealers and your Committee have sure worked together to bring this about.

You can help by reporting any law-violating outlets to our Committee.

FOR VICTORY — BUY WAR BONDS AND STAMPS

THE NATION'S STEEL MILLS ARE RUNNING OUT OF SCRAP. THEY HAVEN'T ENOUGH ON HAND FOR EVEN 30 DAYS MORE.

When this is gone they may have to shut down---for all new steel is 50% scrap.

GET YOUR SCRAP READY TO TURN IN NOW!

Whose Boy Will Die Because YOU Failed?

Think about it as revenge — a way to get back at the scum who have attacked us. Or think about it as a little more protection for our fighting men—something you, yourself, can do to bring as many as possible home alive.

But think about it now — for the scrap in homes, farms and factories has got to be moving to stock piles within the next few weeks or it may be too late!

Maybe you don't know what it means to have production fall off. Maybe you can't imagine how it feels to be hunkered down in a foxhole wishing for just one more clip of cartridges. Or to see the enemy rolling through your lines because you didn't have just a few more tanks.

Or maybe you don't care!

We think you do. We feel that our whole community is ready to rise up and bring in the scrap as soon as you get a chance. So you're going to get that chance!

Next Monday we're starting the biggest drive you've ever seen, to get this precious material. And you're going to pitch in, too, because this situation is serious.

Start looking around your place for scrap today.

If you've got a son in the service, do it for HIM. Do it for the neighbor's boy—for those fine young chaps you just passed, out on the street.

Above all do it for your country . . . and do it now!

Schools Will Also Close Doors To Help Reach Quota

In compliance with the request from the Governor, Mayor Stapp is asking that the schools and places of business close at noon Friday and let everyone work on the collection of scrap.

It has been pointed out that only two weeks supply of scrap iron is onhand. It is urgent that everyone do his or her best in this important scrap collecting campaign.

The leaders of various groups and local defense councils have been requested to meet at the courthouse Thursday night, October 8th at 8 p.m. where they will receive further instructions as to their part in the scrap campaign. The leaders will be requested to ask their wardens to be on duty Friday afternoon to help direct the gathering of scrap in every block of the town. Business houses with trucks or other transporting facilities will be asked to aid the city trucks in getting the scrap.

Scouts Again To Canvass For Scrap

The Clanton Scout Troop will again canvass the residential section of the city this Saturday for your scrap. Four truck loads were gathered last Saturday but the boys did not get around to all the residents so they are going to call again Saturday, October 10th.

Earl Gore and T. L. Williams, chairmen of the County Scrap Committee are supervising this work and received a check this week from State Headquarters for the scrap already sent in. This money goes to the County Criple Children Clinic and other worthy organizations.

The County Scrap Quota is 1,171,425 pounds of which 687,460 pounds had been gathered prior to September 28. Since that date several thousand have been accounted for by the Scouts and other patriotic citizens.

Get your scrap ready without having to be called on by the Scouts. It is as much your duty to get it in as it is the Scouts. Why not do your share without having to be solicited.

Dear Editor:

I want to congratulate everybody that bought a War Bond in September, and every Committeeman that aided and assisted in the drive, all the postmasters, and bankers that did such splendid work, and through the effort of all the people in the County we reached our quota which was $30,500 and a few dollars over. Our quota for October is $30,300. We must not forget our duty to our Country and our boys, and we must raise the quota for October.

I am trying to interest the children of our County to buy Stamps and Bonds. The program has been nearried to nearly every school in the County and I want to thank the different speakers that aided in this work.

I want to say for the school teachers of Chilton County that they are working with their children and neighbors one hundred percent.

We are going to have a parade here October 17, at 2:00 o'clock p.m. The school buses will bring the children and they wil unload at the Thomason Hotel at 1:30 p.m. and will form a parade led by the school band through the main street of Clanton, to the High School Park. Prof. Roscoe Maddox, County Superintendent has agreed to direct the different schools about bringing the children to Clanton. Prof. E. D. Sledge, the teacher at the Colored Training School, will direct the buses and arrange to have the colored teachers, and colored children brought to Clanton.

If there has not been a speaker to any school in the County, if the teacher will notify me, I will get someone to come to their school and explain the program. We want every school in the County and every teacher to be in the parade. We hope to have a leading speaker to talk especially to the children and teachers. If any teacher wants any further information about the program, if you will write me I will be glad to inform them. Let's make this the greatest school day that Chilton County has ever seen.

Respectfully,
L. H. Reynolds,
Executive Chairman.

A GREAT CALL

Gone from our County are hundreds of men in the armed services of our country. They are scattered throughout this broad land. Some are living in the green country-side of England. There are dozens on the plains of Australia. We have others from Pearl Harbor to Cairo.

In this county there is no military establishment. We have no need for entertaining the military here but we do need to concern ourselves about the entertainment of our own soldiers who are serving in all parts of the world. It is important to us that they be made as comfortable and happy as they can under the unfortunate circumstances which we always find in time of war. It is important that they be given clean recreation and wholesome fun and that the inevitable pangs of homesickness be relieved at least a little.

We are all familiar with the magnificent work which the War Service Organizations are doing for our armed forces everywhere. In the past we have contributed liberally and graciously to this agency—and the day will come soon when we will have the opportunity of displaying again our faith in it. Last spring, Governor Dixon called a meeting in Montgomery and proposed the organization of an Alabama War Chest which would undertake to raise sufficient funds for all War Service Agencies deserving of support and asking to participate. This Alabama War Chest, under the direction of Mr. W. A. Steadman of Birmingham, will soon set about its stupendous task of raising funds not only for the U.S.O. but for seven other agencies as well and these agencies include the British War Relief Societies, the Greek War Relief Association, the Russian War Relief, the United China Relief, the War Prisoners Aid Committee of the Y.M.C.A., the Polish American Council, and the Queen Wilhelmina Fund. The budget allotment of the Alabama War Chest is $589,500. Of this, the U. S. O. will get $272,000, the seven relief societies will get a total of $180,000 and the remainder will go into administrative expenses and a contingency fund, with $50,000 to be retained for local purposes by the counties.

It is needless for us to point out the tremendous value of this campaign. It is useless for us to cite the necessity of our assistance. War Chest leaders in this county are asking for your help. Every mother and father in this county is asking for your help. It is a great cause which can neither be denied nor challenged. Do your part that the men who are fighting this war may be better able to do theirs.

MORRIS (RED) MIMS

Taking initial flying at Gragg Field here, Red enlisted in the Air Corps four months ago. Finishing pre-flight training at Kelly Field, making 97 per cent, he has been transferred to Tulsa, Okla., made his first flight Sept 9th. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs Ocie Mims, Clanton.

Crippled Children's Clinic At High School Friday

The annual district crippled children's clinic will be held in Clanton at the Chilton County High School Friday, October 9th. Dr. Marcus Skinner from Selma will see all old cases who have been under his treatment at the clinic at Selma and any new cases. Children with any kind of bone deformity, bone disease, old burns that have caused a deformity or have not healed, and those who have suffered from infantile paralysis should come to the clinic.

The examinations will begin at nine o'clock and continue until all the children have been seen. At the clinic last year seventy-five children were examined.

Children may ride the school buses into Clanton. Children who can ride the buses to Jemison will be furnished transportation from Jemison to Clanton and back to Jemison.

Chilton County Downs Pell City 61-6

By James Foshee, Sports Reporter

The Chilton County High "Tigers" defeated Pell City 61 to 6.

Last Friday October 2, the "Tigers" won their second game of the season. The "Tigers" began to roll when Paul Smith, Clanton's ace end, raced for the first score on an end around. Smith also caught a pass and scored again later in the game.

Guy Higgins, the right half-back chalked up a few markers for the "Tigers".

Captain F. C. Cost, the team's plunging full-back, played good football by driving through the line where a few yards were needed.

James Payton, the flashy left halfback, also added most of the scores by his excellent runs of the game.

The most sensational play of the game was when Pell City kicked out of bounds on Clanton's 2 yard line: then Payton took a lateral from Paul Smith the end, and raced about 90 yards to score.

McKey, Dennis, Stanley, and Teel opened up the line and the backs went through for the touchdowns.

Lloyd McGee, the "Tigers" quarterback, played good headup football which led the team to victory.

The opponents were out-weighed and out classed for the Clanton team, Champion, Pell City's end, was the best player of the opposing team.

The Pell City "Panthers" scored when Champion caught a pass and raced over for the score. Both teams showed good sportsmanship all through the game.

The Chilton County "Tigers" will go to Sylacauga this coming Saturday night, October 10 and meet B. B. Comer again. The Clanton machine opened up the season with this team and defeated them 38 to 6. Coach Porch says his team will be in good shape for the game Saturday night.

SERVICE MEN MAY VOTE ABSENTEES

Alabama probate judges may issue regular absentee ballots instead of special "war ballots" in providing a means for absentee members of the armed forces to vote in the Nov 3 general election, Secretary of State John Brandon, said today

Brandon advised county officials to this effect in connection with the recently enacted legislation providing for absentet voting.

"I am of the opinion," he said 'that the provisions in Act 712 are included in the provisions of our election laws. and that instead of having 'war ballots' printed, you may have printed an additional number of your regular absentee ballots which you think will be needed

"Act 712 states that every member of the land or naval forces of the United States absent from the place of his residence who is or was eligible to register for and is qualified to vote may make request of the secretary of the state of his residence for a ballot.

"The only difference in this provision from our law is that instead of the applicant making application to you for a ballot that he shall make application to the secretary of state. I cannot foresee whether we will get a great number of applications or whether we will receive a negligible number."

Brandon said he had received applications for about 50 "war ballots" and would forward them to probate judges so that the applicant might be sent regular absentee ballots

Committee Named To Increase Navy Enlistments

In an effort to stimulate interest in Navy recruiting a Civilian Navy Recruiting Committee for Clanton and Chilton County was organized this week with A. L. Farley, druggist and former Chief Petty Officer in the Navy as chairman.

An organizzation meeting will be held by the committee in the form of a Dutch Treat Dinner at the Exchange Hotel at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 13. Speaker for the occasion will be announced later.

"This is a time when every man wants to serve his country and the Navy needs good men, men who can be trained to become experts in their lines of work. The Navy can and does train men to take a better place in their communities."

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Aid for Small Business Urged by WPB; Allied Land-Air Offensive Relieves Jap Pressure on Critical New Guinea Front; FDR Envisions Higher War Production

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

British raids on the German lines in Libya have yielded considerable success in damage to enemy communications and supplies as well as in prisoners captured for questioning. Above photo shows some of the 97 German prisoners taken on a recent foray.

SMALL BUSINESS:
To Get Lifeline

With the nation's inevitable progress toward total war economy, many a small business man faced the prospect of becoming a postwar casualty unless a lifeline were thrown to him.

Help appeared likely, however, when War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson urged on congress the immediate creation of a war liabilities administration charged with the job of seeing to it that the little business man survived.

Four essentials for saving little business were recommended by Nelson in testimony before the special senate committee studying wartime problems of little business.

No. 1 is to help little business enterprises take care of overhanging liabilities they would have been able to discharge under normal circumstances. No. 2 is to provide a means for financing small business after the war. Third is to furnish technical and other assistance for small business after the war; and fourth, is to provide a mechanism giving small business enterprises a priority in the acquisition of machinery and equipment when the war is over.

ROOSEVELT:
High Goals Ahead

Expressing the opinion that war production was proceeding at an extremely satisfactory rate and that the rest of the nation was far ahead of Washington in war spirit, President Roosevelt returned to the White House after an unprecedented secret inspection of war activities from coast to coast. Mr. Roosevelt said that even higher production goals would be set in months to come.

Although every detail of the historic journey remained a military secret during its progress, the publicity which followed it reverberated across the nation once the censorship curtain was lifted. In a dramatic press conference that paralleled in drama his famous "horse and buggy" attack on the Supreme court seven years ago, the President hit out at certain elements in congress, in the press and radio and in parts of his own administration that were either deliberately or misguidedly hampering America's war effort.

The President had warm praise for the nation as a whole. The people in general, he said, have the finest kind of morale.

PACIFIC AREA:
Yanks Infiltrate

In the New Guinea area of the Southwest Pacific, Allied mountain troops gave the Japs a taste of their own medicine by taking the offensive, sifting through jungles and over mountains to recapture Nauro in the Owen Stanley range, well beyond Ioribaiwa, the high water mark of the Nipponese advance on Port Moresby.

A communique from General MacArthur's headquarters in Australia revealed that American and Australian pilots attacked Japanese supply lines for 78 miles back to Buna, the main Japanese coastal base in New Guinea. Using native porters as pack trains the Allied troops covered difficult ground as rapidly as had the Jap invaders.

In the Solomon islands the marines continued to consolidate their positions and to strengthen the defense of the vital Guadalcanal air base against expected enemy assaults. MacArthur's airmen made repeated raids on the Jap-held northern Solomons.

Meanwhile in Washington the navy department reported the loss of two American transports in the original battle of the Solomon islands. These were the 8,378-ton naval transport George F. Elliott and the transport Gregory, a small auxiliary.

HITLER:
Boasts Anew

Making his annual winter relief address at the Sportspalast in Berlin, Adolf Hitler outlined a three-point program for winning the bulk of Russia's natural resources and converting them to the uses of Germany. He assured his audience that Stalingrad's fate was sealed, and said he and his high command were constantly preparing for an Allied second front wherever it might strike.

Listed as 1942 objectives on the Russian front by the fuehrer were: domination of the Don river area; capture of Russia's oil fields and coal deposits; and securing the German position in the Black sea area through settlement of the Crimea.

Observers who remembered Hitler's boasts of a year ago that "Russia is beaten and will never raise its head again" expressed the belief that winter once again would find the fuehrer's claims unfulfilled.

Indications that increasing RAF raids were affecting German home morale were seen in the applause that greeted Hitler's promise that "the hour will come when we shall strike back."

Ridiculing the prospects of a second Allied front, Hitler declared that if the British tried again to invade Europe, they could count themselves lucky if they stayed for nine hours as at Dieppe, for "we have made thorough preparations to welcome them."

USED TIRES:
Frozen by OPA

Price Administrator Leon Henderson's action in "freezing" all used tires and tubes in the hands of present owners until a normal rationing program can be worked out was regarded as a further effective step toward accomplishing the rubber conservation program recommended by the President's rubber investigation committee.

Mr. Henderson said the new order would add considerably to inventories of rubber available to assure American motorists of "tires for essential uses."

In the order, the OPA prohibited the transfer of any used tires and tubes by dealers and consumers. The order, however, does not prevent the sale to a consumer of an automobile equipped with used tires. Automobile dealers also are permitted to shift their used tires that are mounted on cars in stock to other cars in stock.

Car owners are permitted by the order to have their used tires and tubes repaired and to have tires recapped if they qualify for the latter service.

MISCELLANY:

LONDON: Plans for a London recreational center for the United States armed forces on the lines of the New York Stage Door Canteen were announced here by Harvey D. Gibson, American Red Cross commissioner in Britain. The center, to be known as the "Rainbow Corner" will be located just off Piccadilly Circus and will accommodate 400 persons at one time.

WASHINGTON: Unofficial compilations of war appropriations since Pearl Harbor indicated that the total would reach approximately 140 billion dollars before January 1, 1943. The staggering allotments—with others even greater deemed a certainty by congressional observers—already represent an amount four times the size of America's bill for World War I. Appropriations voted by congress do not represent actual expenditures, but constitute authority for administrative officials to commit the government for definite purposes.

RUSSIA:
Race With Winter

As autumn brought blustery cold days presaging the advent of a Russian winter, the historic struggle for possession of the Volga area continued with the Germans hurling in new infantry forces, tank divisions and air units and the hard-pressed Reds stubbornly contesting every foot of territory.

In the ebb and flow of continuous battle, one Russian counterattack threatened the Nazis' right flank, while another against the Germans' left flank had pressed slowly down between the Don and Volga rivers. Meanwhile guns of the Volga fleet continued to pour death into the ranks of the Nazi invaders.

Despite local Russian successes, the gravity of the situation remained. The Germans retained mastery of the air. Their tank and mechanized forces were superior to those of the Red defenders. The German high command was spending blood and lives recklessly.

To the south of Stalingrad in the Caucasus, the news was more encouraging, for Soviet armies had continued to delay the advance of the Axis forces into the priceless oil fields.

SECOND FRONT:
Churchill Enigmatic

Somber was the report Prime Minister Winston Churchill gave on the Dieppe Commando raid when he revealed that Allied losses were "very nearly half of the troops involved."

The prime minister said that British tanks were held up by the "altogether unexpected strength" of defense blocks placed at the ends of Dieppe's streets by the Nazi defenders.

These statements together with a later admonition to Parliament about the undesirability of public statements or speculations regarding the opening of a second front had the experts puzzled.

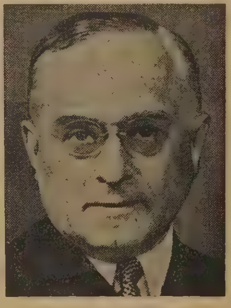
Was Churchill emphasizing the Dieppe losses to lull his Nazi enemies? Was he hush-hushing the second front for the same purpose, or to quiet home demands?

The between-the-lines implication of his statements, according to seasoned observers was this: "Let's keep Hitler guessing. Of course we have definite plans, but let's not expose our hands."

ISOLATIONISTS:
Urged to Recant

Pre - Pearl Harbor isolationists were urged by Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter to contribute to "the spiritual unity which the peril of the hour demands" by publicly repudiating their former views.

In an address at the inauguration of Dr. Harry Noble Wright as president of the College of the City of New York, Justice Frankfurter said:



JUSTICE FRANKFURTER
". . . candid recantation."

"Nothing would so make for a strengthening of the morale resources of the nation than a candid recantation of their foreshortened views by all prewar isolationists."

Justice Frankfurter cited as a distinguished example, the case of the Very Reverend Robert I. Gannon, president of Fordham university, who publicly admitted that he had been "completely wrong" in his prewar opinions.

LABOR:
Gets Blunt Advice

American labor leaders were bluntly told by Rear Admiral Ben Morrell that the people could live without labor unions and "they will damn well live without them, if all of us don't get in there and pitch."

Speaking before the building and construction trades department of the American Federation of Labor in Toronto, the chief of the navy's bureau of yards and docks said he was not implying that labor has any exclusive responsibility for the country's failure to produce the maximum of war implements, but that he felt working people had the biggest stake in the war.

U. S. BIRTH RATE:

J. C. Capt, director of the census bureau, revealed that the population of the continental United States, including members of the armed forces abroad, was about 133,965,000 last January 1, as compared with an estimated 132,638,000 on January 1, 1941. This represented a gain of 2,296,000 over the 1940 census figures.

Births in 1941 accounted for a population increase almost 50 per cent above the average annual gain, Mr. Capt reported.

Walter Winchell

Notes of an Innocent Bystander:

The Story Tellers: Following in the typewriter ribbon of Shirer and Flannery, the last CBS boy in Berlin, Howard K. Smith, dishes out a slice of exciting reportage in "Last Train From Berlin" (Knopf). Goebbels' barrage of lies, Smith states, has discredited him in Naziland and helped inflict a spiritual nervous breakdown on the Germans. Seems that the only people who take Goebbels seriously are a few American editorialists . . . The most eyebrow-lifting part of "Sabotage!" is that many of those in the Benedict Arnold camp have escaped the clutches of the law . . . It should be compulsory for all defense workers to read W. L. White's "They Were Expendable" (Harcourt, Brace). If that report can't make you put an extra ounce of steam in your work, nothing can . . . Wallace Carroll, the UP foreign correspondent, hangs the crepe around the crystal ball by predicting, in "We're in It With Russia" (Houghton-Mifflin) that after Hitler is crushed there will be a revolution in Europe. But it's hard to understand how Europeans will have any stomach for blood baths after this war is over . . . Corporal Hargrove's cap and bell version of army life, "See Here, Private Hargrove" (Henry Holt) is funnier than a top sgt. with a soprano voice.

If Clare Boothe gets to congress she'll make many of the windbags there let go of the flying trapeze and come down to earth . . . She's one to break up the demagoguery and force them to drop the ifs, buts and howevers . . . She revealed that in her initial oration with: "What's all this cooing with Franco and Laval, anyhow? All they wish us is bad luck!" . . . John Mason Brown's account of his operation will be called "Insides Out" . . . Jolson, back from Britain, reports the high morale there . . . "I went to see a movie," he says, "and it contained some newsreel scenes of the first Nazi air blitz—showing a movie audience shivering from fright. The Londoners in the real audience rocked with derisive laughter."

The explanation of certain military leaders (to the public relations execs, who take the brunt of squawks over lack of war news) is this: "We're not interested in good write-ups—only victory. The thing to remember is this: The public always cheers the winner!" . . . The peacetime use of inventions (which are now military secrets) will make the peacetime world a fairyland . . . If you wondered about those familiar voices (of the narrators) in "The Battle of Midway" film—they belong to Henry Fonda and Donald Crisp.

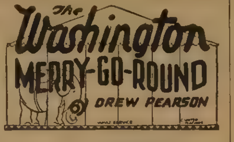
In case you were wondering about the difference between the Garand repeating rifle (used in combat) General MacArthur is the authority for rating it the tops. Said the General: "A child asked his dad the difference between a Garand and an ordinary rifle. 'There's a big difference,' said the father. 'It's just as if I spoke, and then your mother spoke' " . . . The one they still talk about at Fort Dix concerns the Sgt. who bawled out a rookie for standing around with his hands in his pockets . . . "You'd think," barked the Sarge, "you had a $1,000 and were afraid of losing it!" . . . The rookie happened to be Pvt. H. Morgenthau, 3rd, whose pop is the Treasury biggie . . . An acting corporal (one waiting for a corporalcy) is called "A Hollywood Private."

This story, which is sweeping the town — they insist — actually happened . . . A high-ranking Washington official came to see the President and delivered his views on a matter of importance . . . When he was finished, the President smiled and said: "I'm inclined to agree with you" . . . The man departed, glowing with satisfaction and goodwill toward F.D.R. . . . A few minutes later another caller discussed the same subject—taking the opposite stand . . . When he was through the President smiled and said: "I'm inclined to agree with you" . . . The visitor took his leave flushed with success.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who supposedly heard both conversations, criticized the President . . . "How could you do that to those men?" she observed. "It is not only unethical—but it is unwise politically!"

F.D.R. smiled and said: "I'm inclined to agree with you."

The Magic Lanterns: Far and away the film of the week is the gov't-sponsored Battle of Midway. Kodaked in color, the scenes of Jap havoc make you full of fight. The ragged effect you can blame on the bombs, which jolted the camera right off its perch. It's a real pulse whipper . . . Ginger Rogers rigs herself out in pigtails and pinafores to cut a swath among the puppy lovers in "The Major and the Minor." Ray Milland and R. Benchley chip in, and it all keeps you laughing out loud.



Washington, D. C.

WIRE TAPPING

Few people, even inside the government, realize the extent to which telephone wires are tapped today. The good old days when wire-tapping was done only by big-time gangsters are gone, and almost no telephone line around Washington is safe today.

Even the private wire from Secretary of State Hull to the President of the United States was found to have been tapped some time ago by an unfriendly newspaper.

The FBI, which has been doing the job of chasing down criminals for years, is scrupulously careful about wire-tapping. But with outfits like naval intelligence or military intelligence, which suddenly have come into lush funds and have inexperienced men spending them, it is a different matter.

Latest wire-tapping development is the system of tapping the wires of army and navy officers by the army and navy itself.

For instance, here is the transcription of a dictaphone recording in the navy department of a conversation on May 26, 1942, between Capt. John D. Crecca of the Boston navy yard, and Comdr. E. E. Roth of the bureau of ships in Washington, regarding tank landing boats.

Higgins Landing Boats.

The conversation shows that the navy finally yielded to Andrew J. Higgins of New Orleans, who had a long controversy with the bureau of ships over the design of tank landing boats. The bureau of ships had designed its own boat, called the "Bureau tank lighter," which Higgins claimed was not practicable, and the two designs were tried out at Norfolk, Va., on May 25. Here is an excerpt from their conversation:

Captain Crecca (in Boston): We just got some disconcerting information regarding a possible change in the design of the tank lighters.

Commander Roth (in Washington): Possible—it's a sure thing. Yes. Isn't that a blow?

Captain Crecca: It's terrible.

Commander Roth: We can't afford it. We had a test down in Norfolk yesterday. Captain Cochrane went down, Commander Daggett (Comdr. R. B. Daggett of the bureau of ships) went down. The army went down (telephone connection interrupted).

Commander Roth: Well, they had a showdown at Norfolk but a little breeze blew up. They got up to about 13 knots. The Bureau tank lighter almost capsized. They couldn't steer it. They just drifted around. They had to pack with the thing. Almost lost everybody on board, almost lost the tank. Higgins' tank lighter came through fine, upside in and made the beach and the poor old Bureau tank lighter was out there wallowing around. Captain Cochrane came back this morning and he saw the Chief and everybody else concerned and they sent out—did you get a copy of the dispatch?

Commander Roth: Commander Daggett is coming in late tonight and I guess he's pretty well tired out. It's a pretty hard blow for him, you know. He's sponsored this all along.

WOUNDED IN WASHINGTON

Two crippled soldiers drove up to the Shoreham hotel in a taxi. A friend was taking them to dinner, to bring a little cheer into their lives. One soldier carried his arm in a brace, the other had lost a foot. Both were officers of the air corps.

As they were getting out of the taxi, a limousine drove up behind them, and out stepped Jesse Jones. The big Texan watched the crippled soldiers for a moment, then took off his hat and stepped forward to open the door of the hotel. He held the door open as the fliers passed, and when they had gone, he said to a passerby:

"Gee, that hits you below the belt, doesn't it?"

GLASS STOVES

Next time you try to buy a kitchen stove, the salesman will probably ask: "What kind do you wish, madam—a terra cotta stove, a cement stove, or a glass stove?"

Stoves made of iron and steel are disappearing from the market, and manufacturers are trying to make stoves out of substitute materials.

Many manufacturers have gone out of the stove business—some because they can't get the iron and steel, others because they have converted to production of war materials. Of the country's 275 stove plants, half have been closed or converted.

President, on Tour, Stops at Bremerton

During a two-week coast-to-coast inspection of the nation's airplane and shell-producing plants, and army, navy and marine centers, President Roosevelt covered 8,754 miles. Throughout the entire period both press and radio withheld news of the trip, in compliance with a White House request. Photo shows the Commander-in-Chief giving a hearty handshake and a smile to a wounded sailor during his visit to the Bremerton, Wash., navy yard, near Seattle.

Heroes of Midway

Dallas J. Bergeron and his brother, Frederick Paul, who were recently awarded Distinguished Flying Crosses for their part in the battle of Midway. The two boys, who hail from Freeport, Texas, were cited for having "participated in bombing and strafing of fleeing enemy light forces as gunners of scout-planes which obtained bomb hits on a Jap ship." The brothers were decorated, with 34 other officers and men, at a mass ceremony aboard a ship at Pearl Harbor.

IF YOU want to laugh, want to stop thinking about the war for just a little while, be sure to see "The Major and the Minor." It's one of the most delightful pictures that has come along in many a moon. Ginger Rogers, as the young woman who dons little girl's clothes in order to ride half-fare on a train taking her home, gives an expert performance, establishing herself firmly as one of our leading comediennes. Ray Milland is excellent, as is the rest of the cast. It's a swell picture—don't miss it!

*

One of the best friends and former associates of Gen. Draja Mikhailovitch, leader of the Jugoslavian guerrillas, is Tom Lincir, now in Hollywood working for Columbia pictures. Columbia has made a number of war pictures—"The Commandos," "Submarine Raider," etc. but Tom Lincir's been in none of them—he's a conga dancer in "My Sister Eileen," movie version of the stage play laid in New York, with Rosalind Russell and Brian Aherne.

About a year ago RKO bought a novel, "There Goes Lona Henry," and afterward gave up the idea of making it. Now it's being readied as a picture for Ruth Warrick. It's the story of an ambitious Washington society woman.

Richard Arlen and Arlene Judge certainly started something when, working in "Wildcat," they suggested that each time a player made a mistake in his dialogue he make a contribution to the American Red Cross; fewer errors mean fewer retakes, so the company profits, and the Red Cross makes money when somebody does blow his lines. With film companies cutting expenses, it's a swell idea.

Alexis Smith has been urging Warner Bros. to contribute all the metal from its numerous hoopskirts, weighted petticoats and the like to the nation's scrap metal drive. "I had to wear costumes like that all through 'Gentleman Jim,'" said she, "and now I'm doing it again in 'The Adventures of Mark Twain.' I've packed around enough lead and steel to make a dozen of those General Grant tanks! The studio would be doing the government—and me!—a favor if they'd just turn it all in."

Olivia de Havilland's learning to play the saxophone — brings the shiny new instrument to her dressing room and tootles between scenes of "The Princess O'Rourke." She played "Happy Birthday" for the sound stage doorman the other day, her first public performance. She also offered him three cigars, in case he didn't care for her music. He didn't comment on the music, but took the cigars.

Sergt. Gene Autrey used to think he was pretty busy when he was making pictures, running his own rodeo and his two ranches and doing his regular air stint. But now! He does the air show, also the regular work of an army sergeant, and he's picking up flying hours and burning the midnight oil, studying up on the book work needed for army flying examinations!

*

Lewis Milestone, directing "The Edge of Darkness," was worried when the company went on location on the Monterey peninsula, for fear that some of the cast might be shot on sight. It's a story of the underground movement in Norway, and green-clad Nazi troopers play an important part in it. "If a German soldier is seen around Monterey, he'll be an actor," was part of Milestone's warning to citizens.

An Iron Man Is To Pull Us Out Of Rubber Morass

NEW YORK.—Iron men and rubber transport is better than vice-versa, if one wanted to ring the changes on the old wooden ship adage. William M. Jeffers, president of the Union Pacific railroad, the new rubber administrator, is, by all accounts an iron man. The occasional rubber man in the railroad business is apt to come from the speculative zone of railroading. Mr. Jeffers, the iron man, has come all the way up, in 52 years, entirely in operation and management.

The Baruch rubber report has stepped up the deep-throated national roar demanding hard-boiled management in this war, to say nothing of operation. When Mr. Jeffers succeeded the late Carl Gray as president of the Union Pacific in 1937, this writer talked to a former associate of Mr. Jeffers.

"He's hard-headed, hard-fisted and hard-hitting," said this informant. "He'll highball an order right through to where it is going, and make sure that it never gets sidetracked and that it gets results. His effectiveness lies in knowing what he wants and then getting just that. Like all good executives, he will hire a specialized intelligence to look after details which he is too busy to master and in doing so he never gets buried under the small impedimenta which sometimes swamp less purposeful men."

Mr. Jeffers is supposed to have been grooved into his new job by Averell Harriman, chairman of the board of the Union Pacific, defense liaison official and lend-lease administrator for Britain. It is obvious that Mr. Jeffers knows how to "keep 'em rolling," which is the main idea in wartime, whether the tires be of rubber or iron. This is the prevailing explanation of the detachment of a master railroader from his job at a time when such mastery is urgently needed where it is. Mr. Jeffers writes off a $70,000-a-year salary.

It was in 1890, in his native North Platte, Neb., that he started his career with the Union Pacific, as an office boy. By 1900, he became chief train dispatcher and he hasn't had a vacation in the succeeding 42 years. A most inflexible man takes over our most flexible, and indispensable commodity.

He's America's First Multiple Ambassador!

IT WOULDN'T be surprising to see Thurman Arnold proceeding against Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Jr. under the anti-trust laws. His widening monopoly of diplomatic posts in the various countries has been still further extended by the President's nomination of Mr. Biddle as ambassador to the exiled governments of Greece and Jugoslavia. His other ambassadorships include Poland, Belgium, Norway and The Netherlands, and he is minister to Czechoslovakia and Luxembourg.

He seems to like his multiple job, although it has caused him much inconvenience and cost him a lot of money. Senator Guffey of Pennsylvania recently put in a bill to reimburse him for $243,640 worth of his furniture, strewn over Europe in the litter of fallen thrones and dominions. The senate postponed action on the bill until after the war, and Mr. Biddle didn't seem to mind. He gets $17,500 a year for eight jobs which at prevailing rates would run up to about $150,000 a year in salaries.

He got his start as a diplomat with his appointment as minister to Norway in 1935. Then came the Polish ambassadorship and since then he hasn't had much quiet home life, bombed out of any comfortable over-night stopping place. In London, he needed elbow-room, finding embassy facilities limited for his large-scale operations, and took a spacious apartment at 40 Berkeley square, where he and Mrs. Biddle clear a prodigious amount of European diplomatic wreckage. Mrs. Biddle is the daughter of the late William Boyce Thompson, Montana mining magnate.

Mr. Biddle frequently is confused with his father, who once fought Philadelphia Jack O'Brien and who, at the age of 67, is now teaching jujitsu to soldiers. Like his father, Mr. Biddle Jr. is an athlete, at 45, and has hawklike features and a long, sharp, shrewd friendly face. The confusion is understandable. Sifting out the relationships of Philadelphia Biddles is tricky business for an amateur, but the most reliable finding is that the trap-drummer diplomat is the eighth cousin of Attorney General Francis Biddle and his brother George, the painter

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

MORAL ECHOES

By Rev. D. W. Haskew, D. D.

Once upon a time a king built for himself a beautiful palace and it became the wonder of the world. When it was complete the builders looked at the structure with their vision turned toward the sun. They thought the palace to be on fire and cried out for help. The friends of the king gathered in clusters about the building and set up a great squabble as to where the fire was located, and where was the best spot to apply the water in order to extinguish the flame. While they wrangled and wrung their hands in despair, thinking that soon the palace roof would tumble down, yet it did not fall. Presently they discovered that it was not on fire at all. Coming from the rays of the sun against the building there was a display of light that seemed to set the building on fire. Someimes we think that God's truth is setting the world on fire and we squabble and fume about it thinking that all of God's creation will tumble down, but truth lives on forever. Fear not when you see the flare of God's truth.

A big drive was being made during the World War number one along the British front. The Germans were in retreat and the huge tanks were following up the foe when one of the tanks stopped dead still. It was not disabled, neither was it out of ammunition and no one of the crew was injured. Finally an officer came up and with forcible language demanded why the huge beast had stopped and when the job was not finished. "The trouble is sir", replied one of the crew "we have come to the edge of our map." The driver of that tank had a small map of his duties and when he reached the border of his map he stopped in his tracks. Is there any danger that Christians may have too small a map of the work that God would have them do. The enemy is in retreat and we are following hard upon his heels but all at once we halt. We have reached the edge of our map and pause regardless of the command. "Go ye into all the world." There is not an edge to God's map.

A wild storm was raging around a prairie home in Texas one night. The windows were blown in, and no lights could be kept in the dark rooms. The doors were heavily barred while the mother, grandmother and three children sat in the darkness expecting every gust of wind to take the house away. The mother observed her ten year old son having a whispering conversation with his grandmother. Some time after this she missed her son from the room and calling for him with no reply. Frantic with fear the mother called for him at the top of her voice and still no reply. Then she wandered about the building in search of the boy. She found the missing lad fast asleep on his bed. Shaking him out of his slumber, she asked how he could go to sleep when they were all in such great danger. Walter sleepily replied, "Why mother, Grandmother told me that God would take care of us, and I thought I might as well go to bed and trust Him." We say that God will take care of us, but when danger comes we are often frantic with fear. Why not trust Mim?

Out of the past there comes to us a story of an old saint who was so good and so Godlike in all of his living, that he was known as the, "God Bearer." He was known to be the incarnation of the Christ. He was not without enemies, for there were those who hated him because of his goodness, and one day his enemies shed his blood. As the murdered saint lay dead on the ground his friends gathered about him and said, "Our God Bearer is dead, but he will live forever." Ignatius is still alive as the saint who carried God in his life. The title given to Ignatius is one that every Christian should humbly lay claim to. As children of God we should be none other than "God Bearers." It was Jesus who said that, Men shall take knowledge of you. At one time the public did observe that men had been with Jesus. Be a. "God Bearer."

The Telephone is VITAL to the Communication Needs of this "War Busy" Nation

"You FIRST...Uncle Sam!"

This is the kind of spirit we all must show if we are to keep vital long distance telephone lines clear for urgent war calls. Never before have long distance lines been so busy and played so vital a role in our nation's history.

But war calls are not the only calls. Calls by civilians and non-war businesses—calls that are not always necessary—are also increasing. The result is crowding of long distance lines and equipment, threatening war calls with serious delays.

YOU can help avert this threat to vital war communications by beginning now to voluntarily ration your use of long distance.

There is urgent need now for a special effort to avoid making "long haul" calls. The greater the distance you talk the greater the possibility of delaying vital war calls, because the "long haul" lines are the most heavily crowded with war business.

Our men need tanks, ships and guns. The steel for these must be made from 50% scrap metal. But the Nation's steel mills don't have enough scrap on hand to last even 30 days more! Keep 'em running. Help build up a huge scrap stockpile—the bigger the better.

GO down into your basement—your storeroom. Climb up to the attic too. Look at the unused stuff you're sure to find; and realize how important these odds and ends can be.

Important to a kid half way around the world. Important to a blue-clad gob—to a flyer; racing to reach the target before some knifing Messerschmitt can find its mark.

That old metal means steel for these men. And steel means armor plate for safety—weapons and ships for Victory.

Without it they'll die. They're not afraid of that—but it's better to give a life for a cause than to be sacrificed by thoughtlessness. And it's better yet to live; knowing that the folks back home didn't let them down.

And we won't let them down! Monday starts our big scrap collection drive—and you're going to help make it a good one. Don't let up because you see a full junk yard or a brimming salvage depot. That's the way they've got to be to make sure the mills won't run out!

YOUR NEGLECT WILL COST SOME BRAVE BOY'S LIFE!

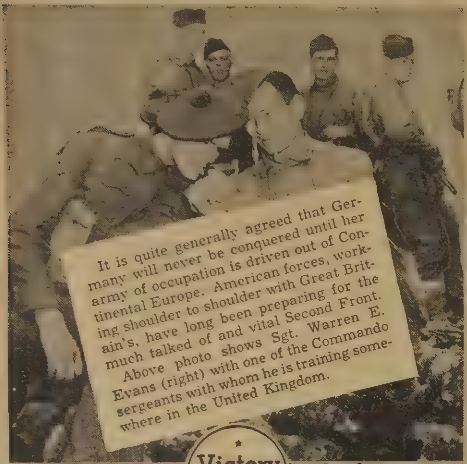
U. S. Rangers in United Kingdom Train Under Combat Conditions



It is quite generally agreed that Germany will never be conquered until her army of occupation is driven out of Continental Europe. American forces, working shoulder to shoulder with Great Britain's, have long been preparing for the much talked of and vital Second Front. Above photo shows Sgt. Warren E. Evans (right) with one of the Commando sergeants with whom he is training somewhere in the United Kingdom.

Live ammunition is used to create realistic effects, preparing the men for actual combat conditions, as shown in photo above.

First Lt. Warren E. Evans, chosen as "Typical Ranger" of the battalion, is being congratulated by Brig. Gen. Lucian K. Truscott, U. S. officer on Lord Louis Mountbatten's Combined Operations Staff. Lieutenant Evans is 6 feet 4 inches tall and 24 years of age.

Vaccination of Calves Checks Bang's Disease

Immune Heifers Obtained Through This Process

Because of the war and the desire to step up milk production in line with the Food for Freedom program, dairy farmers have adopted calfhood vaccination as a means of controlling Bang's disease more quickly than they would have in ordinary times.

Calfhood vaccination makes it possible for herd owners to replace old, unprofitable cows with heifers immune from brucellosis, or Bang's disease, Dr. George E. Taylor, extension dairyman at Rutgers university, reminds herd owners. However, the answer to the question of whether vaccination is the best method of controlling the disease, depends upon many things, Dr. Taylor says.

"As an example, U. S. department of agriculture officials point to many farmers who have tried the test - and - slaughter method and have not been able to eliminate the disease from their herds completely," he reports. "These farmers frequently are in communities where brucellosis is prevalent. And in all probability, calfhood vaccination would be recommended.

"On the other hand, a farmer may have only one or two cases of brucellosis in his herd. If he lives in a community which is comparatively free from the disease, he and his advisers often conclude that the best thing to do is to get rid of the reacting animals, make a thorough clean-up, and then keep close watch for any reappearance of the trouble.

"Also, there are circumstances which lead farmers to adopt a combination of calfhood vaccination and test-and-slaughter methods in their control of brucellosis."

So if you have brucellosis or Bang's disease in your herd, talk the matter over with your livestock sanitary officials, veterinarian, and your county agricultural agent, suggests Dr. Taylor.

This small herd, part of a larger one, is the kind that has to be watched for any outbreak of the dreaded Bang's disease.

Agriculture in Industry

By FLORENCE C. WEED

Hops

The relatively unimportant hops crop contains hop oil, hop resins and acids, hop tannin, hop bitters and hop wax, but few of these possibilities have been converted to industrial uses. Hops are used mainly in brewing malt beverages where their flavoring and preserving qualities are of particular value. American hops are of high quality but a few individual brewers prefer to import varieties which have special properties lacking in the domestic hops. This makes the market variable and in some years, 5,000,000 pounds of hops have been left unharvested when the price is low and labor is scarce.

The yellowish aromatic substance called "lupulin" contained in hops, has some outlet in medicines.

Research is under way to recover certain compounds found in hops which are lost in the brewing process yet might be valuable in other industries. Dyes, tannins, wax and pectin all might be recovered. Even the fibers left after the hop resin is extracted might be converted into plastics as is being done with soybeans.

Hops are like their name in the way they have moved about this country. They were first introduced in New Netherlands in 1625 and came to Virginia five years later.

Guard Livestock Health

More research on livestock health, and passing the information to livestock and poultry producers is urged.

A report pointed out that livestock losses in the United States, because of poor health and disease, total about 268 million dollars a year.

It was also suggested that farmers may be given the facts best through newspapers, periodicals, and the farm press, telling of practices that will conserve the nation's livestock and poultry resources.

Success for Dinner—Savory Stuffed Peppers
(See Recipes Below.)

Flavor's the Thing

Ever notice how ever-so-good foods run in combinations of three flavors? There's the steak, french fried potatoes and pie combination. Or, you can have fried chicken, gravy and biscuits as a threesome.

At one time or another you've all tried lamb chop, peas and mint jelly combination, or a melted cheese, toasted bread and grilled tomatoes plate luncheon.

Now other foods are joining the victory parade and new dishes are joining hands at the table to blitz their way to food fame. The nutrition rule which is rapidly gaining popularity is the one which says that if you miss one food combination at one meal, you must pick it up at another meal so you'll get all the energy units you need these busy days.

That's why today I'm offering you combinations of food which contain nutrients easy to miss if you're not careful. Take iron, for instance.

Iron is a mineral that has a big job to do for your system. It sees to it that your energies don't lag and guards against anemia and general digestive disturbances.

Biggest job of all that iron does is to see that your body gets all the oxygen it needs by making enough red blood cells to go through that 7,000-mile long circulatory system that will replenish with oxygen and carry off the poisonous carbon dioxide which is another word for the oxygen after you finished using it.

Now the thing about iron is that it's difficult to find it in a great many foods. You can see how important it is because you need it every day. You'll find iron in eggs, whole wheat cereals and oatmeal, for instance. Suppose you skip these things at breakfast. That means you've got to pick up iron in one of the other two meals, for instance, by having some iron-rich food like liver, heart, oysters, greens, dried fruits. Do you follow?

That's why today I'm including several iron-rich foods so you will be sure not to miss a day without having something with iron.

Browned Oysters.
(Serves 6)

1 quart oysters
4 tablespoons butter
1½ tablespoons flour
Juice of 1 lemon
Salt, pepper
Worcestershire sauce

Remove oysters from juice and drain. Dredge in flour and brown in 2 tablespoons butter. Remove from pan and set aside. Make a brown sauce by blending remaining butter with flour. Add juice from cooked oysters, lemon juice and sauce. Pour over oysters and serve.

Lynn Says:

Survey Notes: A nutritional survey by a large firm reveals the following interesting bits of information: that we are the best fed country in the world, but as a whole do not know enough about eating as wisely as we should.

Of the 11,582 interviews made, it is found that about 27.7 per cent of the families are eating more protective foods than two years ago. Marked increases were made in the consumption of citrus fruits.

Most women like to cook, it goes on to tell, three out of four in the first thousand like to cook, 11.6 per cent like to cook occasionally, and about 10.8 per cent "not at all."

Families are fed—at least 66 per cent of those interviewed—what women think are good for them. Then 58.5 per cent are fed what the family likes. Cost of food affects 42.19 per cent, and variety influences 28.2 per cent.

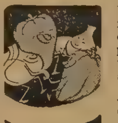
This Week's Menu
*Baked Stuffed Peppers
with *Tomato Sauce
Molded Fruit Salad
Bread and Butter Sandwiches
Pears Baked in Honey
Beverage
*Recipe Given

Here's a recipe suitable for lunch or dinner, made delicious and healthful by iron-rich molasses:

Baked Stuffed Peppers.
(Serves 6)

6 large green peppers
1 pound chopped beef
2 cups bread crumbs
3 tablespoons minced onion
1 cup canned tomatoes
2 tablespoons pure, dark molasses
2 tablespoons melted butter
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Remove seeds and membranes of peppers and parboil in salted water 10 minutes. Combine all remaining ingredients in order given. Stuff peppers with mixture and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 40 to 45 minutes. Try serving this with:



Tomato Sauce.

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 No. 2 can tomatoes
2 large onions, sliced
3 cooked carrots, diced
¼ cup pure, dark molasses
1 can green peas, drained
1 green pepper, diced
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper

Saute onions and pepper in butter. Push to one side of pan and mix flour with butter. Add tomatoes, molasses, and seasonings and cook, stirring until thickened. Add carrots and peas. Cook about 5 minutes.

When you talk about the mineral, iodine, you might as well ask about the I.Q., for this is the mineral that directly affects mental alertness. In addition to that, iodine prevents simple goiter and also affects how you tip the scales.

Rich in iodine are seafoods, so make a point of including them in your menu often. For example:

Shrimp Casserole.
(Serves 6)

3 cups ½-inch bread cubes
2 cans shrimp
1½ cups grated cheese
3 eggs, slightly beaten
2 cups milk
¼ teaspoon salt
Pepper
Paprika

Place layer of bread cubes, shrimp and cheese in casserole. Repeat until all are used. Combine beaten eggs with milk, and add seasonings. Pour over mixture in casserole. Bake in a moderate (325-degree) oven about 45 minutes.

In addition to containing iodine, shrimps also have about 17 other valuable minerals. Then, combining the curly pink shrimp with milk and butter, you have a real health-giving dish that's good to eat besides, as this:

Shrimp Soup.
(Serves 6)

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
Salt, pepper
¼ teaspoon celery salt
1 quart milk
1 can shrimp
Few drops tabasco sauce

Combine melted butter and flour. Add seasonings, then stir in milk gradually. Drain shrimp, add liquid to white sauce mixture and cook stirring constantly until thickened slightly. Break shrimp into small pieces and add with tabasco sauce. Heat Serve at once.

YOUR FIELD ARTILLERY PERFORMS

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS—Army Signal Corps Photo—This 105 mm howitzer has just blasted 90,000 spectators off their seats at the final performance September 12 of the great Army War Show at Soldier Field. There are 4 of these 105 mm guns and two 155 mm artillery pieces in the War Show, and when they all went off at once, the stadium rocked to its foundations. This field artillery crew distinguished itself last week by detaching their piece from the truck, setting it up and firing, all within 19 seconds. Following its Chicago engagement, the War Show will be seen in Cleveland, Louisville, Indianapolis, St. Louis and many cities in the south, including Houston, San Antonio and Dallas, Texas.

Books To Read

While everybody else is talking about war, there are a few people (a pity there aren't more of them) who write and think of peace to come. Herbert Hoover and Hugh Gibson have written "The Problems of Lasting Peace," a book that reviews the history of the seven dynamic forces that cause wars and make world history.

The book begins at time of American and French revolution and comes down to the actual events of today. The weaknesses of the League of Nations are disiussed.

Then the autnors come to the point of what we may do and expect after the present conflict to make a permanent and lasting peace.

This is a thought-provoking work well written by two experienced and capable authors. The whole situation is seriously and thoroughly thrashed out and should be read by every person interested in and working for peace.

Three Young Deer At Game Sanctuary; Fawn

MONTGOMERY, Sept. 16—Three fawn deer, a buck and two does, scarcely larger than a fox terrier dog, have been captured and placed in a rearing pen at the Fred Stimpson game sanctuary near Salt Springs in lower Clarke county, according to Chief Ben C. Morgan of the Game Fish and Seafoods Division of the Alabama Department of Conservation. They were captured when just a few days old in Clarke and Washington Counties by game warden Davis Henson and Coble Stanley.

Chief Morgan announced that the Game, Fish and Seafoods Division will pay $2.50 for each young deer captured in the woods and in an uninjured condition. Some 15 or 20 young fawns will be purchased. He emphatically stated they must not be trapped.

Bible Question

What is the middle verse of the Bible?

ANSW9R

Psalm 118:8—"It is better to trust in the Lord than to put confidence in man." It happens that this is a very appropriate verse for this middle position in all the Bible. The middle chapter is the preceding one, Psalm 117. It is very short and any one could easily memorize this middle chapter of the Bible. You ought to do so.

FDR ISSUES CHART ON TIRE LIFE

WASHINGTON, D. Presidential Secretary Early displayed the chart, prepared by the auto rubber industries tire committee of the Society of Automotive Engineers War Engineering Board. This is the chart FDR wants "all car drivers" to see. It details the speeds at which tire wear is greatest and speed at which most savings can be achieved.

by GRANTLAND RICE

NANA WNU Service

AMONG other somewhat tangled snarls the war department is facing a tough problem regarding sport for 1943. It is easy enough and simple enough to say that sport will be abolished.

Grantland Rice

"This would be a bad thing," a high-ranking officer tells me. "We need sport for future physical fitness, for revenue and for morale. There is no sense in solving headaches by cutting off heads. And we'll have plenty of headaches."

"There is a very good chance that before 1943 arrives all our big league ball players, our professional football players and our college football players will be drawn into some branch of the service. We need too many men. Being married or having dependents won't help those between 20 and 45, especially those who are physically fit, as most athletes should be.

"There is little use in building up a sporting nation if these men can't be used in time of war for active service."

Looking Ahead

"What will happen to competitive sport?" I asked. "I'm referring largely to baseball and football."

"Sport will have to get along with what it has left. There won't be any stars left on the professional side. I don't think there will be many stars left on the amateur side for college football either. There may be few big spectacles of any sort—or none at all." But that doesn't mean all sport will be thrown overboard. That would be a serious mistake.

With a draft limit fixed between 18 and 50, something almost certain to happen, with more and more married men drawn in—even those with families—it is difficult to see now how the two major baseball leagues or the professional football leagues can operate after 1942 has slipped over the hill. Men physically equipped to play hard games are the ones that are needed above all other types.

What will be used to fill in the huge gaps is another guess.

The College Side

College football may run into the same tangle. The season just ahead will be one of the most spectacular in football history. There will be far more men playing more games, when you include the different service teams.

But with the growing need for men, especially young man power, the colleges will get a terrific raiding. Which is the way it should be.

On a general average to find the best type of man power we must look to youth—to those between 18 and 30. So far as war and training for war is concerned, the best years range between 18 and 25.

No one but a complete idiot can gamble on this being a short war. Suppose it isn't a short war, which few who should know think it will be? In that case the younger men, the athletes, will be among those who can help most.

I saw a big chunk of the present German army in hard training around Berlin in 1936 during the last Olympic games. Kids by the thousands—12, 13 and 14 years old—marched mile after mile—up to 15 miles a day.

No matter what the game, youngsters must be caught and trained early in order to reach any real heights.

Training Plan

There should be some plan for training and developing boys around 13 or 14 or 15 in this country today. Those to whom I have talked in the army and the war department in general agree with this. These youngsters will be a vital part of our service in case the war lasted five or six years. Not forgetting the force that will be needed after the war is over.

An athlete might be no better than one who was never cast in any athletic test. But he should be. Not in the matter of courage, but along the line of physical condition and trained muscles—in co-ordination and endurance.

This country has been shy in leg strength and leg stamina for a long time. The place to start now is at far younger ages, and some war plan must be worked out to meet this vital situation.

• • •

There never has been a better coach than Bob Zuppke to get set for one vital contest.

Fritz Crisler, Michigan's able leader, discovered this when he happened to say that Tom Harmon was a better back than Grange ever was.

That was all Zuppke needed. Using this as his theme in a series of blazing oratorical sorties, Zuppke had his team so steamed up by game time that Harmon could find no exits.

AMERICAN RED CROSS

AMERICAN service men fighting the nation's battles overseas are making American Red Cross clubs their favorite meeting place during leave periods.

The Red Cross clubs, established in nearly all the major overseas war theaters, are open to the enlisted men of the United Nations in addition to Americans, but the atmosphere of the clubs is typically American.

Such home country stand-bys as hotdogs, soft drinks, hamburgers, and ice cream made the American way, are regulars on the clubs' bills of fare. They may be obtained for a penny at the snack bars which are open throughout the day.

The clubs are staffed by trained Red Cross workers with the accent upon competent American girls specially selected for conducting an active recreational program in the clubs. The girls are attractive, too.

Typical of the clubs in the larger cities is the Red Cross Washington club located in the Mayfair section of London. Here service men may use luxurious lounge rooms, a dance room, and recreation rooms where ping pong and billiards are the popular games.

A large restaurant, capable of serving 600 men at one sitting, is maintained in the club, and dormitories large enough to house 1,200 men are contained in the club and adjacent dormitories. For bed and breakfast the Yank on leave in London pays 50 cents. He can get a piping hot lunch and supper for 20 cents each.

Prices charged by the Red Cross are below cost, the deficit being met through Red Cross funds. Officials of the American Red Cross were reluctant to make any charge for food or meals and did so only after Secretary of War Stimson requested that a nominal fee for such services be made since other United Nations clubs also charge.

NEWSPAPERS BOUND TIGHTLY WITH MUSLIN STRIPS ARE PADDED WITH COTTON BATTING AND THEN COVERED TO MAKE STIFF BACK CUSHIONS FOR THE COUCH
A SECOND STITCHING MAKES A FINISH FOR OUT SIDE OF SEAMS

HERE is a way to give an old couch a new lease on life with style and comfort.

Start with 9½ yards of 36-inch-wide cotton twill to cover an average couch and three cushions. Here a soft tan is used to match one of the tones in the rug. Seams are accented with a second stitching, as shown. And there is no untidy slipping and sliding for this cover. The seam allowance around the top is sewn to the couch pad with long stitches of carpet thread. The cushions are made to stand erect by using an inside core of newspapers tightly bound together with muslin bands, and then padded with cotton batting.

Sometimes a man spends years seeking the ideal woman. And in the meantime he gets married.

Ready and Willing

She had gone to the fortune-teller and had listened with increasing interest to the sketch of her life as portrayed in the lines of her palm.

"Madam," said the fortune-teller, in his most impressive manner, "you should be very, very happy. A nobler man than your husband you have yet to meet."

"How absolutely thrilling!" gushed the woman. "But when?"

Needed Farm Machinery Can Be Bought--Posey

The Chilton County farm machinery rationing committee is now functioning and farm machinery, the sale of which was frozen by the OPA on September 17, now can be bought with the aid of certificates approved by the committe. Mr. Napoleon Posey, Chairman of the rationing committee, said this week.

Copies of certificates and other information may be obtained from farm machinery dealers or from rationing committee headuarters.

For rationing purposes, Mr. Posey said, farm machinery has been divided into three classes; Group A, including machinery which can be bought only with the aid of a certificate from the rationing committee; Group B. including machinery which can be bought if buyer merely will certify that it is needed for farm operations in the year 1942; and Group C, machinery which can be bought and sold without any restrictions.

Used machinery and repair parts are not effected by the rationing order and can be bought and sold as usual.

Besides Mr. Posey, serving on the Chilton County Rationing Committee are Mr. Willie Hamilton and Mr. Alvin Davis, both farmers in this county.

Letter To The Editor:

Dear Editor:

I would like to say hello to the Editor, and all the readers of the Chilton County News. I have been receiving the Chilton County News for two months. I am always proud when my copy reaches me. It is very interesting to read about what's going on in my home town and county and I happened to be from Chilton County. Best darn place on the map. Thanks to my dear sister. Mrs. Robert Ellison for having the paper sent to me.

I enlisted for three years in the army at Fort McPherson, Ga., on the 13th of September 1941, remained there six days, and was then shipped to Fort Moultrie, S. C., I remained there eight days, then I boarded a boat with hundreds of other soldiers. Well we took off out into the Atlantic I enjoyed the 5½ day boat ride fine. I made it all the way without getting seasick, but lots of the boys got awful seasick. I felt real good when I saw land again, one thing I didn't like about that boat ride was rolling off the bed at night. Well we reached ?? Well anyway somewhere in the tropics, about noon October 2nd, 1941, and the sun was shinning hot. We up with our baggage, I had about all I could easily get along with, two big Barracks Bags and a suitcase. We headed for camp. Somewhere I didn't know where. I didn't have a chance to look around much the first few weeks. But since we have had lots of time to see around I find the scenery beautiful. The jungles are pretty and green the year around, no cold weather at all. Plenty of Palms, bananas and cocoanut trees, and plenty of wild monkeys to climb those coconut trees. We Jungle Soldiers, known as (Jungle Mudders) and all who are not Jungle Mudders are going to show those Japs and Germans what Chilton county and other parts of the good old U.S.A. has contributed to Uncle Sam.

You don't give up. Just back us up, we won't let you down.

Thanks to the Editor.
Yours truly,

The Chilton County News,
Dear Sir:

Hello Chilton I will give you a monkey's viewpoint of the human race.

Three monkeys dining once in a coconut tree were discussing some things that they heard true to be.
"What do you think? Now, listen you two,
Here monkeys, is something that cannot be true,
"That humans descend from our noble race!
Why, it's shocking—a terrible disgrace.
Whoever heard of a monkey deserting his wife,
Leaving a baby to starve and ruin its life?
"And have you ever known of a mother monk
To leave her darling with strangers to bunk?
Their babies are handed from one to another and some scarcely know the love of a mother.
"And I've never known a monkey so selfish to be
As to build a fence around a cocoanut tree
So other monkeys can't get a wee taste
But would let all the coccanut there go to waste.
"Why, if I'd put a fence around this cocaonut tree,
Starvation would force you to steal from me.
And here is another thing a monkey won't do:
Seek a cocktail parlor and get on a stew.
"Carouse and go on a whoopee disgracing his life
Then reel madly home and beat up his wife.
They call this all pleasure and make a big fuss—
They've descended from something but not from us!"
(Author Unknown)

This proves that the people of the U. S. A. did not descend from the monkey race.

War Orders For Farm Security

War orders for the Farm Security Administration have reached Chilton County. Marvin Durbin, Farm Supervisor of FSA in this county, revealed today a communication from Claude Wickard, Secretary of Agriculture, who, writing as chairman of the Nation's Food Requirements Committee, outlined a six point war-time program for FSA here as elsewhere, based entirely on greater food production.

"There is no serious question that those who can produce more will produce more." said Secretary Wickard in the directive received by Mr. Durbin. "There is a serious question however, whether a great part of our farmers, a third or more of them, can bring their labor into full use and their land into full production through their own unaided efforts. Their wasted labor, wasted time and wasted production must be eliminated."

On this preliminary the following six points were outlined:

1. "To put the small farm operator with idle labor and resources to work on the Nation's food production line, and to keep him there, by: (a) credit and supervision; (b) a program of medical care, in order that they may perform their farm and home work efficiently; (c) debt adjustment and improved tenure arrangements."
2. "To establish, on the basis of individual planning, food production goals for all FSA borrowers."
3. To develop food processing, storage, marketing and transportation facilities.
4. To develop plans for housing, transportation and adjustment of farm labor.
5. To strengthen tenure arrangements and to call the public's attention to availability of land for lease or ownership.
6. To help small farmers overcome deficiencies of equipment by pooling their resources and efforts and buying and using machinery together.

Supervisor Durbin said it was plain that those fit well into the general purposes of Farm Security Administration program, and that already steps have been taken in Chilton County to carry them into effect. These steps, he said, amount to a broadening of the objectives which FSA has kept in sight from the beginning.

ALL CITIZENS COOPERATE IN SCRAP DRIVE

Too much praise cannot be given the Chilton County school children and the Clanton Scout Troop for the fine work they did last Friday afternoon in gathering scrap for the war effort.

More than fifty tons of the valuable metals were gathered and piled high behind the City Hall to be carried to the big furnaces for production of guns and ammunition to fight the Axis.

Many thousands of pounds are still in this county awaiting someone to gather it up and the campaign that ends next Saturday will not see the last of the scrap sent from here. It is up to you to keep bringing it in as long as you can find a piece anywhere. The special drive for Scrap is all that ends with that date. Uncle Sam still needs all that he can get.

To date there has been sent from this county 75 tons of scrap. That is nearly six pounds for every man, woman, and child. Some of the counties have sent as high as 40 pounds per person and our per capita average will have to be more than it is. Of course this will increase as scrap that has already been gathered is brought in. Many tons are on the side of the roads in this county, already gathered but with no way to get it into town. Earl Gore co-chairman with T. L. Williams asks that all who have this scrap to get them word either by post card or by messenger as to the amount and place, and they will have a truck call for it and get it into the scrap pile. This metal called for will be turned over to the State Committee and the money received from it will go to the County Defense Council.

JEMISON FHA HOLDS FIRST MEETING

The first meeting of the Jemison F. H. A. Chapter for this year was held October 8, 1942. The officers to serve this year are: president, Annie Joe Norwood; vice-president, Larue Varden; secretary, Jimmie Ruth DuBose; and reporter, Juanita Thompson. The new business to come before the meeting was the plans for making money for the club this year. One thing that was decided was to sell Christmas Cards. The club also decided to have an "Egg Day", one day of every week and let each member bring an egg or the money for an egg. The eggs will then be sold by an appointed committee. Due to the rationing of tires and the future rationing of gasoline, it was decided to have a fiddling convention instead of the F. H. A. and F. F. A. play. The committees for the various things to carryout the plans for the convention were appointed.

There were thirty pledged members who attended the meeting.

BILL JONES IS DEAD

By Roe Fulkerson, Kiwanis Magazine

Bill Jones is dead.

Bill Jones had just graduated from agricultural college. He was ambitious to put into action all he had learned about conservation of soil, better breeding of cattle, rotating crops, because his dad's farm was in pretty bad shape. When war came, Bill enlisted in the Army.

Bill went to the Phillipines and the little town where he was billeted was overrun by a horde of Japs. Bill fought as long as he could then, under orders, surrendered. They tied his hands behind him and a Jap soldier started to rape a white woman. He had torn her blouse off when Bill kicked him in the belly, and three Japs waiting their turn rammed their bayonets into Bill's guts.

This happened about the time you were telling the folks at your house that it was all darned nonsense to ration sugar because cake and candy were certainly no diet for soldiers.

Bill Jones is dead.

He was a soda jerker in a small town, and when the bands blared and the flags fluttered, he signed up for the Navy. They put him on a torpedo boat. He learned to wear his hat on the corner of his head, and to roll when he walked. Then his boat got in a scrap down in the South Seas. Bill stood by his gun and laughed as he fired it but a shell the deck beside Bill. When he tried to pull himself to his feet, he saw that his right arm was in the scuppers five feet away. He reached for his gun with his left hand and then things went black. The list of the ship rolled a dead sailor into the scuppers where his dismembered arm lay. Its extended thumb touched the tip of his nose, so that in death as in life, Bill was thumbing his nose at the Jap ship that got him.

This was just the same day that you were raising hell because they were rationing gasoline, and for fear you couldn't drive up to the lake to go fishing every weekend this Summer, you hid four cans of gasoline in your garage.

Bill Jones is dead.

Bill's dad had a lot of money, and when Bill wanted his own plane, dad bought it for him. Bill was a wild devil, driving a car out of all reason and flying a plane the same way, and getting drunk to often. But he was the first man in his town to respond to the Air Corps' call for fliers.

Bill got into a dog fight over the English Channel. There were six German planes, but with a "Tallyho!" Bill dived into the bunch of them. He got two before a third sent a burst of bullets into his back that almost cut him in half, but he held on to the stick until he rammed the fourth plane and went down with it locked in the flaming embrace of death.

This happened about the time you were bellyaching and felling abused because of the outrageous treatment given you by the tire rationing board which would not allow you recaps for your pleasure car.

Bill Jones is dead.

Bill was a boy who had inclination for the ministry, but when the call came, Bill laid his Bible aside and joined the Marine Corps. Bill wasn't 3000 SCHOOL CHILDREN TO PARADE SAT.

Editor, Chilton County News,
Clanton, Alabama.
Dear Sir:

All arrangements have been made for the parade of the school children and teachers next Saturday, October 17th, at 2 p.m. The busses and cars bringing children to Clanton will unload at the Thomason Hotel on the west side of Clanton. We expect all cars and busses bringing children to be here at 1:30. The parade will be performed from this point and will be led by the Chilton County High School Band through the main street of Clanton to the High School Ball Park.

Arrangements have been made to bring some 2,000 to 3,000 children and teachers. We have secured Prof. H. G. Dowling, Superintendent of Education of Tuscaloosa County, and Mr. Sims the head of the 4-H Clubs of Alabama to speak to the children. I hope as many people, and especially the parents of the children, will come to the speaking, and I feel like it will be worth the trouble and expense to see what a wonderful school system we have in Chilton County, and I feel like they will be surprised at the number of children that are already buying stamps and bonds.

This is the first county in the state to put on a special program for the children to encourage them to buy stamps and bonds and we hope to have the aid and assistance of all the people in this movement. Let's remember what our boys are going through with at this very moment and let's each and every one do our best to aid and assist them all we can.

Respectfully,
L. H. Reynolds,
Executive Chairman.

CHILTON WINS OVER B. B. COMER 33-6

(James Foshee, Sports Reporter)

The Chilton County "Tigers" defeated B. B. Comer High School of Sylacauga last Saturday night October 10, 33 to 6. The game was played in the Sylacauga Stadium.

The "Tigers" began to roll when Payton went over from the 2 yard line for the first marker. Then Payton passed to Paul Smith, Clanton's ace end for the extra point.

Guy Higgins, the right halfback, went over from the 7 yard line for the next score for Clanton.

Spradley went over from the 2 yard line for Comer's first score. At the end of the first half, the score was Clanton 14, Comer 6.

F. C. Cost, the plunging fullback, was unable to play because of an injury in a scrimage in the early part of the week. Acie Mims took his place and played good heads-up football all through the game. Mims plunged over from the 2 yard line for another counter.

James Payton, the flashy left halfback, raced through the line for 62 yards for a Clanton score. He broke loose again and raced 17 yards for another score. Payton also passed and punted all through the game with an excellent average.

McKey and Dennis, the guards, played good football, showing some expert blocking and tackling all through the game.

James Davenport, the center, played one of his best games with his expert blocking and backing up the line.

Stanley and Teel, the tackles, also played good heads-up football. The line broke through and set the opponents back for losses all through the game.

Captain Smith and Kellum, the ends, played a good defensive and offensive game. Smith caught several passes for nice gains.

Lloyd McGee lead the team to victory with his brilliant quarterbacking during the game.

Harold Argo was the best player for the opponents. He put his team in scoring position several times with his expert running.

The team played the best offensive game of the year. The line opened up the holes and the backs scooted through for the markers.

Both teams showed good sportsmanship and the best signs of fighting spirit was shown.

The "Tigers" will meet Maplesville High School this Friday Night October 16, at the Clanton Field. The Tigers will be seeking their 14th straight victory. Chilton has not lost a game since October 25, 1940.

Dothan has begun a new city well and hopes for an additional 750,000 gallons of water daily.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

1943 Farm Goals to Be Biggest Ever; U. S. Increases Strength in Pacific As Air-Naval Forces Blast Japanese; Nazis: 'No Need to Take Stalingrad'

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

A secret landing by American forces in the Andreanof group of the Aleutian islands made it possible to establish an airfield from which planes could blast Japanese positions on Kiska island. The above photo shows American troops in a "bucket brigade" passing supplies ashore from a small boat.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:

Yank Power Grows

The Japs learned a lesson about American air and naval strength in the Pacific when five of their ships including a heavy cruiser were damaged by a U. S. aircraft carrier task force which pierced Nipponese defenses at Shortland island in the north Solomons. In addition, an air field was blasted at Bougainville, main Jap air base, and numerous aircraft destroyed.

A navy communique reported that the Japs were caught by surprise and the American operation was carried out without loss of men or equipment.

Besides the heavy cruiser, the American battle score against the Jap forces included one transport damaged by heavy bombs, one seaplane tender and two cargo ships damaged by light bombs.

In New Guinea, the advance of the tough Australian bush troops continued over the Owen Stanley mountains which the Japs had penetrated weeks before.

Although craggy trails had prevented swift movement, the Australians had cleared the enemy before them and had removed the threat of a Jap surge that once had pierced to within 32 miles of strategic Port Moresby.

A communique issued by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters in Australia disclosed that the Allies' New Guinea advance had been made "with practically no loss."

"Information from native carriers who deserted the Jap forces plus reports from our own patrols, indicates the retreating Japs were exhausted, living on short rations and badly needing supplies," the communique reported.

Much of the Australian success was said to be due to a constant air attack on Japanese supply lines.

FARM GOALS:

Boosted for 1943

A nation-wide wartime [illegible] up next spring, reminiscent of the days of 1918, loomed as the U. S. department of agriculture drew up tentative production goals calling for even greater acreages and output of most farm products than was requested under the record 1942 production.

The goals for all farm crops but three—wheat, short staple cotton and commercial vegetables—were set higher than for 1942. Corn and other feed grains, beans, peas, peanuts, potatoes, sugar beets, hemp and vegetables for processing were given the green light. So were production goals for cattle, hogs, dairy products, poultry and eggs.

With less manpower, machinery and other facilities to operate with, farmers had their work cut out for them. Moreover, the needs of the armed forces and the Allies, particularly Russia, were said to be much greater than had been expected a few weeks before.

If 1943 farm goals are not reached, civilian consumers will have to tighten their belts. Consumer rationing was to be inaugurated January 1, but civilians had already been asked to limit meat consumption to 2½ pounds weekly.

A possibility remained that sooner or later, butter, cheese, cooking fats, vegetable oils, eggs, poultry and canned fruits and vegetables would be placed in the same category as meat.

RUSSIA:

Stalingrad Checkmate

Unnoticed at the start, Marshal Timoshenko's counteroffensive, begun far up the northern arm of the Don river in the vicinity of Kletskaya, had moved forward. Its object was to draw off German striking power from the Stalingrad area.

Timoshenko had struck first, in a 50-mile area between the Don and Volga northwest of Stalingrad and had extended his forces southwest to the German flank.

That Timoshenko's strategy had worked was indicated by a significant statement on the Berlin radio which announced that the Germans would abandon frontal attacks on Stalingrad and destroy what was left of the city with heavy artillery. "It is no longer necessary to send German infantry and assault engineers into the battle," the announcement said. "The finishing touches will now be entrusted to heavy artillery and dive bombers."

Observers noted that the German announcement was reminiscent of propaganda covering the Nazi withdrawal a year ago from Rostov, when the Russians gained their first victory of the war.

Southward, in the Caucasus the Nazis had succeeded in advancing in the Mozdok area, while Rumanian reinforcements were reported pushing southward from the German-held Black sea base of Novorossisk.

WAR COSTS:

210 Million Daily

War costs will exceed 210 million dollars a day by January 1, 1943, according to figures based on revised calculations by Budget Director Harold Smith. Mr. Smith's estimates placed total war spending at 78 billion dollars in the current fiscal year which will end June 30, 1943.

The budget director's upward estimate was about 25 billions more than President Roosevelt's figures last January and eight billions more than a previous calculation by Smith.

Increased expenditures for all war purposes would make it necessary for the treasury to borrow approximately $60,300,000,000 from the public during the current fiscal year.

LABOR:

Lewis Divorces CIO

Labor leaders and politicos had long awaited the formal secession of the United Mine Workers of America from the CIO. Bushy-browed UMW Chief John L. Lewis kept his own counsel, but chose a dramatic moment for the divorce. The occasion was the miners' annual convention at Cincinnati.

Brusquely warning the delegates that he would no longer remain the union's president if it remained in the CIO, Lewis obtained unanimous consent to withdraw. A committee report urging the separation charged the CIO with failure to pay a $1,650,000 debt to the UMW and denounced alleged attacks by CIO officers on Lewis.

The convention action merely gave public recognition to a situation that had existed for months. Lewis and Philip Murray, CIO president, were feuding after a friendship of years standing. Murray, a former miner and vice president of UMW, had been "read out" of the union, last spring.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

NEW YORK: Supplies of tea on hand in the United States are sufficient to meet present restricted demands for the next six or seven months, Benjamin Wood, managing director of the Tea bureau, declared. Wood said estimated stocks were 28 to 29 million pounds, enough to carry the nation well into 1943, under quota regulations restricting tea sales 50 per cent.

MELBOURNE: Australian chorus girls must be over 45 years of age, according to a recent government order. The age limit is one of the new "austerity" restrictions in force in the Australian commonwealth. Able-bodied women under 45 years of age should be in jobs "that contribute more directly to the war effort," the government feels. Hence the new theatrical restriction.

ALEUTIANS:

Japs Fold Tents

As mysteriously as they first appeared, Japanese forces disappeared from the two westernmost Aleutian islands, a navy communique revealed. The two islands abandoned were Attu and Agattu, lying close together nearly 200 miles from Kiska.

Heavy bombing by American aircraft which destroyed most of the Japanese buildings on the two islands was cited as a reason for the withdrawal.

The Japs still held a foothold on Kiska island, but Yankee flyers made their tenure precarious. Army heavy bombers operating from the newly acquired American bases in the Andreanof islands in the Aleutians blasted Jap-held positions on Kiska in repeated raids.

The islands of Attu and Agattu were originally seized by the Japs shortly after the Aleutian campaign opened last June.

SCANDINAVIA:

Headache for Nazis

Germany's influence in the Scandinavian countries had been weakening. This was evident when a general election in Sweden had returned a record number of Communist, anti-Nazi delegates to the national assembly. It was evident, too, in frequent peace feelers from war-plagued Finland. Thus when rioting and disorders broke out against the Axis overlords in Norway and Denmark, few observers were surprised.

Swift was the Nazi action in countering with force the Scandinavian threat. The Germans proclaimed a state of emergency in central Norway from the seaport of Trondheim to the Swedish border. Reprisal executions followed. Reports from Copenhagen said tension had mounted to fever heat because of clashes resulting from the "overbearing and provocative" attitude of the volunteer pro-Nazi "Free Corps."

The Nazi radio gave official confirmation of Scandinavian unrest by announcing that the Norwegian emergency was proclaimed because of recent sabotage attempts "which if they had succeeded would have endangered Norway's supply system."

RUMOR MONGER:

Menace Described

Americans were called upon to beware of rumor mongers by Robert P. Patterson, undersecretary of war.

Speaking before the American Federation of Labor convention in Toronto, Mr. Patterson cited rumors assailing the quality of and effectiveness of weapons made by American labor as evidence of Nazi propaganda. "Criticism of the Garand rifle, U. S. tanks and P-40 planes as inferior died away in the face of actual performance," he said.

ROBERT P. PATTERSON
Warns of Nazi rumor factory.

"In the days to come Hitler will redouble his efforts to divide the nations now united against him. In this task he will make use of the rumor mongers among us.

"His agents will spread stories in the United States and Canada that will reflect on Britain. In Britain, his agents will spread the story that Americans are not doing their part in fighting, but are interested only in making money out of the war. And he will try to alienate us from Russia."

Mr. Patterson said that production of armaments for the Allied nations will cut deeper and deeper into production of civilian goods and require suspension of many peacetime standards of hours and working conditions.

SNUB VICHY:

Urges Ex-Envoy

Even as Pierre Laval imposed a labor draft to speed the delivery of 150,000 French workers for German war factories, Walter Edge, former American ambassador to France, urged withdrawal of U. S. recognition of the Vichy government. Such action, he said, would solidify 95 per cent of the French people behind the United Nations.

Emphasizing that he was speaking as a private citizen, Edge said it was "unfortunate that the government seems to feel it necessary to continue recognition of the Vichy regime."

"There may be many things that warrant continued recognition that I know nothing about," he declared, "but only a small percentage of the French people are in sympathy with the Vichy government. It must be discouraging to the majority to see their overlords recognized by this country."

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK.—We know a broker, a Harvard graduate, who didn't so much as scalp an eighth for over a year. He salvaged enough of his fortune to buy a pair of overalls, went to New Jersey and got a job with Bendix Aviation. He has had a raise in pay and says the house percentage against a man at a work bench is far less than in Wall Street. It is one of many instances of the infiltration of Harvard, and Ivy league associates, into the ranks of skilled labor.

Harvard at Work Bench and Labor Goes to Harvard

It works both ways. At the suggestion of trade unions, Harvard opens a nine-months trade union fellowship course for labor organization men selected by their unions. They propose to build a bridge between labor and industry, in the seminar sponsored by the Harvard Business school, the Littauer School of Public Administration and the Harvard Department of Economics. Fifteen men begin the course.

Perhaps, under current stress and strain, everybody is working the other side of the street. But there are encouraging precedents. Toynbee Hall of London, around the turn of the century, was comparable. While it flushed many doctrinaires and ephemeral dreams, it stirred much honest discussion and helped induce social responsibility both in British labor and industry.

Lucius N. Littauer, the glove magnate of Gloversville and New York city, who established the above school of business administration, was 83 years old last January. When he endowed the school with $2,250,000 in 1938, he said it was to be "administered in the cause of better understanding among all mankind." He was graduated from Harvard 63 years ago, picked up his father's glove business, and in practical business administration, learned much of the interdependent problems of labor and industry.

In congress, 1897 to 1907, he sponsored and established the United States bureau of standards. Somewhat pertinent to this is his bureau of human standards at Harvard.

FERENC VASARHELYI, distinguished Hungarian biochemist, reconditioned, and re-energized Benito Mussolini. We had lunch with him recently. We gathered that, in the case of Il Duce and certain other European careerists he wished he had just let nature take its course. He's against the dictators.

This Biochemist Will Steam Up No More Iron Men

He came here three years ago and has been revitalizing and restimulating Greta Garbo, Alice Marble, Elisabeth Bergner, Antoine de Paris, Jessica Dragonette, Gabriel Pascal and other eminent persons who may safely be revivified without any danger of their becoming Frankensteins. At luncheon, he extolled sauerkraut as an energy builder. The fact is that sauerkraut had a lot to do with upping Horthy and ousting Mr. Vasarhelyi.

When Horthy was a minor naval officer, the men in the fleet went on strike, saying they would rather be shot than eat another yard of sauerkraut. Disobeying the orders of his commander, Horthy seized a cruiser and made the sailors eat sauerkraut, days on end, at the point of a gun. Its inspiring effects were such that Horthy was rewarded by being made chief admiral of the fleet. He ate still more sauerkraut and reached out and grabbed the country.

Mr. Vasarhelyi's career is one of the most unique in the backwash of the first World war, lying as it does in the overlapping zone of politics and dietetics. He thinks food has a profound and determining effect on individual and collective human behavior and that scientists will some day read history in terms of starches and proteins. His political career came to a peak in a dramatic climax in 1917, when he helped ease out the monarchy and bring in the liberal Count Karolyi as premier.

Mr. Vasarhelyi is 70, trim and erect, clear-skinned and hard as nails. He ascribes this to the fact that he practices what he preaches. He thinks a democratized Danubian federation will shape up after the war, and that Europe will be reorganized on sound economic and biological fundamentals. Roughly, these two fields of interest have filled his life, but he puts the main stress on the latter. Much devastating human activity he thinks may be traced to food poisoning.

ON THE HOME FRONT

with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

ANY dining room may be made fresh and smart with built-in cupboards, a little paint and inexpensive curtains. But what may be done to bring a set of outmoded chairs up-to-date? The one sketched at the upper right is typical of many that are substantial and sturdy though scarred by long use. All they need is an up-to-date frock to make them perfectly at home in a modern dining room.

If your chairs do not have the supports shown at the sides of the seat they will be easier to slip-cover. This cover is of medium blue cotton rep with darker blue for the bias binding and the cotton fringe around the bottom. Large button moulds are covered with the slip cover material for the button-up-the-back opening. If you are not expert at making bound buttonholes, snaps may be used under the buttons. The narrow ties sewn to the corners of the inside of the seat cover hold it neatly in place.

Often a crust forms on rising dough. To avoid that, spread a little fat over the dough and cover it with a cloth.

For a flavorful top coating for meat loaves, spread with a thin layer of chili sauce the last 20 minutes of the cooking period.

Grass stains usually come out when saturated with lard or other fat, then washed several hours later in warm soapy water.

To prevent windows sticking after house has been painted remember that for two or three days after the frames are painted each window should be opened and run up and down two or three times a day. Unless this is done the windows are almost certain to stick.

Sittin' down in Jed's General Store the other day, it was kinda impressed on me that the weaker a fellow's argument is, the stronger the words he uses!

Well, when I get to talkin' about KELLOGG'S PEP and vitamins I don't need any high-powered words. You see, to feel really good you got to eat right, which includes gettin' all your vitamins. And while PEP hasn't got 'em all, this swell-tastin' cereal is extra-long in the two that are oftenest extra-short in ordinary meals—B_1 and D. Try PEP, won't you?

It's a Long Way to Base Hospital

Australian soldiers who were wounded while battling Japs in New Guinea's rugged Owen Stanley mountain country have a six-day trek ahead of them before reaching the base hospital. All suffer from gunshot wounds. The Nips, who were once only 32 miles from Port Moresby, have been driven over the mountains.

Ahead of Schedule

The Alaskan highway will be ready December 1, less than 10 months after the first bulldozer left Edmonton. Here we see Brig. Gen. W. Hoge, in charge of construction, and Maj. E. J. Stann discussing the route in front of headquarters at Whitehorse.

This picture and caption are from a German source and were copied from a German publication which was received in the United States through a neutral country. Grim and unhappy German soldiers are shown stepping from a rubber boat, wearing raincoats and carrying shovels and guns, about to establish a Russian bridgehead. Meanwhile, the Russian defenders of Stalingrad in one of the greatest battles of history had fought valiantly in the rubble-filled streets of the Volga city to stave off the German offensive.

Economic Director

James F. Byrnes, formerly associate justice of the U. S. Supreme court, now director of economic stabilization, is shown arriving at the White House for a conference with President Roosevelt. The general stabilization order puts a clamp on wages, salaries and prices at September 15 levels. Byrnes has been vested with powers exceeding those of Leon Henderson, head of the Office of Price Administration, and other key governmental figures. The order creating the new office also provided for the appointment of a board to work with Byrnes.

FARM PARITY FIGHT

To Roosevelt advisers, the farm parity fight was an ominous runner-up of what many of them expect during the next two years—IF the November elections turn sour for the Democrats. It left people a little worried around the White House.

Up until now, the White House has been confident that the house of representatives would remain Democratic—despite the warning of Chairman Ed Flynn that the Middle West and probably California would go Republican.

So the fight over farm parity was a shock; and administration leaders shrink from the prospect of facing that type of congressional battling for two long years to come. But, if the Republicans organize the house, or even if the Democratic majority is appreciably cut, that is exactly what will happen.

Three reasons are given, backstage, for the faulty handling which resulted in the terrific farm battle.

1. The President himself, who couched his message to congress in terms of such a strong ultimatum, rather than the usual Roosevelt pep-talk strategy at which he is so adept. Incidentally, the speech was written in large part by brusque, bulldozing Leon Henderson.

2. Speaker Sam Rayburn, who dropped his usual kindliness and stormily told congressional friends that the President had promised him not to send a farm price stabilization message until later. Rayburn's attitude was a tip-off in deeds if not words "To vote as you please, boys."

3. Price Czar Leon Henderson, who was considered the political ogre and bogeyman for whom the farm stabilization bill was being passed.

WAR BONDS

A war savings bond salesman in Buchanan county, Iowa, was nonplussed when the spokesman for a colony of 75 families flatly refused to buy even so much as a 10-cent stamp . . . The salesman was about to leave, but was called back and handed $6,450 in cash as the colony's donation to the war effort . . . Seeking an explanation, the bewildered bond seller was told that the community was composed of Amish families and that their religious creed forbids them to make a profit out of war . . . They were willing to make a gift of the money, but could not buy interest-bearing bonds.

Presidential adviser Isador Lubin, after 36 straight hours of hard work, went to bed one morning at nine o'clock, slept until nine the next morning.

The infantry company at Fort Devens, Mass., boasts that every member of the company is buying war bonds, and it is 101 per cent correct.

ARMY SHOES

If you are a draftee with high arches or low arches, one flat foot or two flat feet, or even if your right foot is a half size larger than your left foot—it doesn't matter. The quartermaster will fit you anyway.

Even if no one of the 238 different sizes of army shoes fits you, instructions to army posts are that every foot shall be fitted, and fitted comfortably. This order is to be obeyed even if it means making a plaster cast of the odd foot and making a special shoe from an individual last.

In such cases, the individual last is tagged with the name of the soldier and filed away until he needs another pair of shoes. Such service would cost $25 a pair in private life.

Army experts declare that a soldier with sore feet is worthless.

NO CELLOPHANE COMMISSION

Siegfried Bechhold, president of the Armored Tank corporation, is now a private in the army. After making a small fortune in manufacturing tanks, Bechhold joined the army as a private, age 42, was sent to Camp Lee, Va. Friends expected to find him unhappy after exchanging his soft life for the rigors of the army. But when Bechhold got away for his first week-end, he declared:

'This experience is making a man of me, and I wouldn't miss it for the world! I've served in other armies, but there's no army to compare with this one. You talk about 'morale'—the soldiers don't need 'morale'; they already have it.

"You have to get out of Washington to learn what Uncle Sam's army is really like. If I had ten sons, I would tell them all to join the army."

- President Ernest M. Hopkins of Dartmouth will be campaign manager for Republican Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire against ex-Republican Francis Murphy, now Democrat. Like Bridges, President Hopkins has been a militant supporter of Roosevelt's foreign policies.

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good heath is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

CHILTON'S REPUBLICANS

"Does Chilton County want to kill the Republican party?" The Republican Union-Banner at Clanton asks in a double column front page editorial. It proceeds:

The propaganda is being spread over the county that: "If we can defeat the Republican ticket in Chilton County this time, we will be through with them once and for all." We will not argue the soundness of this statement, although we believe it to be misleading. If the Republicans should be defeated this Fall, which we do not think will happen, the party with its sound principles and hundreds of loyal followers will live on and on, and will continue to get out tickets and elect county officers for years to come . . . Therefore, Chilton County will do well to keep the Republican party Its past services have been of inestimable worth to the county, and its future existence, we are led to believe, will continue to be valuable. We can ill afford to kill it and be deprived of its obvious contribution to the county's future welfare. Chilton County voters will keep the Republican party, not merely for what it has done but for what its possibilities are for the future.

Speaking on behalf of the Democratic party, we too, think the Republicans ought not to be annihilated in Chilton County. We should save enough of them for seed, for there is no telling when we will need them to point at as a horrible example of conduct that good Democrats should shun.

Whats Doing At Isabella High

By Jesse Culp

We regret to announce that Mr. Matthews has resigned as principal at Isabella. Mr. Williams is acting as principal until the new man arrives.

The Chilton District of the Future Farmers of America met at Isabella Monday night for the purpose of electing district officers and for initiating the candidates for the Future Farmer Degree. All the chapters were well represented.

After business had been attended to, refreshments were served in the Home Economics department to everyone present.

Last period Monday afternoon, all the students met in groups, according to the bus which they ride. The purpose of the meeting was to organize in groups in order to get the scrap collection campaign under way.

Each student was asked to get in touch with his or her neighbors and ask them to collect their scrap. This student will then weigh this scrap (or find the weight of it) and turn that amount in to the school. We understand that it is to be arranged in the form of a contest, with the bus group that collects the most scrap getting the prize. In this way, a bit of healthy, good-natured competition will be stirred up, as well as getting in that scrap that the government is needing so badly.

If any of these students come to your door and ask for your cooperation in this matter, please give it to them.

Speaking of scrap, we were noticing that the scrap pile on the campus is swelling a little. Let's run it over . . . A problem at Isabella is to get the students to play during Physical Education. We always thought that it was more fun to play than to work. Perhaps they just need to read the article in this week's issue of the Isabella School Journal on the importance of taking physical education . . . Farewell parties are in order, now that Sara and Bill Matthews are leaving us. Honest, we do hate to see them leave. . . .

You bet, we are really looking forward to that parade in Clanton Saturday. Chilton County needs to be shown what her school youth can do, if given the opportunity and encouragement And while we are still on that subject, are you buying war stamps? We are Everybody at Isabella has determined to put the war stamp drive over in a big way. Last week, Mr. Reynolds came out and gave us some facts that really emphasized the need for action. Practically all of the classes got together and worked out plans for putting over the drive. Several of the classes, along with the F.F.A. are selling war stamps.

The F. H. A. Chapter here, in their last meeting had a varied but interesting program: The Planning of the family meals, by Elizabeth Williams, "The Wonderful Tar-Baby Story" by Evelyn Owen, and jokes by Ester Lee Mizzell.

They also appointed a committee that is to decide on some project that they may carry out during the coming year. This committee consists of Annie Laura Calfee, Evelyn Owen, and Elizabeth Williams.

The new cheer leadens were down on the field the other afternoon with a bunch of other girls kinda practicing a few yells. It sounded to us like they have the capacity for making quite a bit of the right kind of noise, too . . Everyone seems to feel a little relieved, now that we are back on the full school day . . . Uncle Sam pointed his finger at one of our bus drivers, H. C. Gray. H. C. is a nice guy and we hate to lose him, but here's wishing him lock . . . The Seniors are meeting their annual fate; the study of "Macbeth".

The theme for discussion in chapel Tuesday was the scrap campaign. The program, which was in the hands of the Senior Class, was based principally on this topic. Hudson Calfee made a talk on the importance of getting in the scrap.

We plan to organize the student body for collection of this vital material immediately. It is believed that all of the students will be willing to lend their cooperation.

WATCH YOUR PEANUT MARKETING

Warning that every pound of peanuts marketed is subject to a three-cent penalty, Mr. M. H. Lane, county administrative officer. Chilton County urged growers and biyers to acquaint themselves with the marketing provisions in orrer to avoid this penalty.

Provisions are:

(1) Any peanuts marketed without proper identification by a marketing card (whether, "in fact", they are excess peanuts or not) will be considered excess peanuts and liable to the penalty.

(2) Excess, or oil, peanuts sold to an agency designated by the Secretary of Agriculture will not be subject to the three-cent per pound penalty. Oil peanuts sold to buyers other than a designated agency are subject to the penalty of three cents per pound and the buyer is responsible for collection and payment of this penalty.

(3) Any disposition or acquisition of peanuts by any means, including gift, is considered marketing.

Any person planning to buy peanuts and desiring further information on marketing procedure should contact the local AAA office, said Mr. Lane.

FARMING A BREEZE TO 23-YEAR OLD GEORGIA WOMAN

Twenty-three-year-old Lucile Turk is not afraid of snakes, yellow jackets, a mean mule or a little hard work.

As the sole operator of a farm eight miles west of Abbeville, Ga., she knows how to plow with a mule. And little things like plowing up snakes or dislodging hornets nests have failed to deter her.

She has cultivated, without any extra help, 15 acres, proving that a woman can make a crop singlehanded. She plowed and planted five and a half acres in cotton, three and a half acres in corn and four and a half acres in peanuts. In addition she has a garden and is canning hundreds of quarts of vegetables, along with fruits, juices, jellies and jams.

The young woman farmer lives with her mother. A sister recently accepted a position in a Macon defense plant. With all of the farm work falling on her, she says she still has some leisure time which she spends in reading.

Millard Lancaster flew to Spartanburg last week. He would have gone on to Charlotte by air but couldn't on account of the restricted area. He was in quest of the automobile of Melvin Weil who has gone to Ireland Melvin is well known here having worked at the Bus Station for some time before joining the Air Corps Anyway, to get on with the story, Millard says nothing of interest happened especially. On the return trip he was exceeding the speed limit of 35 miles considerably, he says, when two highwaypatrolmen pulled up beside him and asked him what his hurry was. He had a Texas license on his car and had on a uniform, so he told them he was in a hurry to get to Texas. One of them said, "Soldier, don't let us stop you." So he continued homeward. Millard was much surprised at the industrial and war spirit of that part of the country. He says that everyone and everybody thinks first of winning the war and their own wellbeing second.

Mr. M. A. Pinson of Cooper, has the right idea. He brought in to the News office this week fifty keys to aid in our Key Kampaign. Mr. Hicks at the High School reports a very good collection and Mr. Abrams had to ask for another container at the Grammar School. National Salvage Headquarters says that the higest grade brass, nickle and copper are contained in keys and that is why they are so valuable at this time to the WarEffort. Right now Mr. M. A. Pinson is high man in bringing in keys and the man that beats him will have to bring in more than fifty. Remember, "A Key In The Kan, Keeps A Jap In Japan."

UNITY THAT GETS THINGS DONE IN A BIG WAY

You hear a lot about pooling these days—pooling materials—pooling machines—pooling man power.

This is an old story to the railroads.

For nearly sixty years, the freight cars of any railroad in North America have been used by every other railroad—the greatest continental pool of carrying capacity ever conceived.

To accomplish this free use of any car by all railroads has meant

. . . that track gauge must be the same

. . . that couplers must work together

. . . that brake systems must be uniform

. . . that parts must be so standardized that any shop anywhere can service and repair any car

. . . and that there must be plans and arrangements among railroads for this continuous flow of cars from line to line.

This marvel of practical coordination is one big reason why, since war came, the railroads have been able to meet demand upon demand for more and more transportation service—hauling more freight more miles in 1941 than any transportation system anywhere in the world had ever before hauled in a year—and they are leaving that record far behind in 1942.

Yes, unity—unity among the railroads, unity between the shippers and the railroads, and between both of them and the government—gets things done in a big way. The nation's other war needs limit the amount of materials which can be used to equip the railroads to do still more, but with what they have, and what they may be able to get, the railroads will deliver the last measure of transportation.

First she convinced Columbia Pictures that Janet was perfect for the title role in "My Sister Eileen"; then she waived the exclusive star clause in her contract so that Janet could share star billing. Sportlight

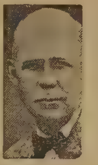
by GRANTLAND RICE

NANA WNU Service

THERE was a certain cluttered up road leading somewhere between Avocourt and Montfaucon in France, late in September, 1918. The night was dark and the rain was even wetter than usual. There was an artillery captain, getting his battery through this muddle and mire, and he wasn't very gentle about getting the right of way.

"These guns go through," he barked, and you could see he wasn't particular about how they got through. Through the jumble and the tangle and the rain and mud and darkness this battery moved on its way.



Grantland Rice

The artillery captain was a fellow by the name of Larry MacPhail. He was a rough and ready officer looking for action, and he has been the same ever since.

Now he is on his way back to his old artillery job, and whether you like him or not, the army will. And that happens to be the main idea.

Then and Now

Larry MacPhail is no longer a kid. It has been almost 24 years since that night in France where refugees, stray army outfits and complete confusion almost blocked the road which MacPhail helped to open for his guns.

Since that time he has been the major factor in building up two pennant winners in the National league—first, Cincinnati's Reds, then Brooklyn's Dodgers.

There have been many times when he looked to be hard and ruthless, but he was always smart. As someone has said, "MacPhail's mistakes, and he had made many, have always been about minor matters. He has yet to make a mistake that was important."

If the charge that he has been hard and ruthless is true, there could be no bigger boost when it comes to the matter of winning this war.

McPhail and the Dodgers

MacPhail was talking about the Dodgers of 1942.

"When the season opened," he said, "I thought we could win. We had done all we could to strengthen a team good enough to win the pennant the year before. But when we were ten games in front you will remember I told you that I was worried about what might happen.

Larry MacPhail

"The year before we were only thinking about winning the pennant. Through this summer we have been thinking only about meeting and beating the Yankees. It was easy enough to see our pitching was crumbling. It was also easy to see that we were no longer hitting. The box scores showed that better than any large bale of words could hope to do. No one could figure at that time that the Cardinals, a young hustling team, would suddenly move into a .900 per cent pace. But that's what they did.

"Then there came the injury to Pete Reiser, who suddenly changed from a .355 hitter to a .240 hitter. These are no alibis. The Cardinals had their share of hard luck last year.

"The main point is that we ran into a change in mental attitudes. Last season we were pennant-hungry and world series money-hungry. By this season we'd gotten ours. The Cardinals hadn't. And don't forget this Cardinal team is quite a ball club. I mean skill, speed, and spirit.

The Difference

"Mental attitude," MacPhail continued, "is one of the big factors in any game. I've heard Bobby Jones say it was at least 75 per cent of golf. Any football coach will tell you the big part it plays in his sport. Of course, skill is important, speed is important and power is important. So is experience. But mental attitude is even more important.

"I recall late last summer when Whit Wyatt would walk into the clubhouse before some hard game and say, 'Listen, you bums, give me one run today. That's all I need.'

"And when the pinch came, that's all Whit needed. This season you had the feeling that for many of our pitchers even three or four runs were not quite enough."

About Football

Lou Little said some time ago that 1942 would be football's best offensive season. Columbia's mandarin makes few bad guesses. It will take some remarkable defensive formations to keep the combined speed and power under check which most teams have to meet.

That Missouri backfield will be one of the best. It has speed, drive and experience, headed by one of the best in Steuber, a big fellow who can move.

(1.) On their way to feed the bombed out population of a stricken British city, roll these American donated food vans. This is only one of many services rendered by British War Relief.

(2.) Like this young lad, many Polish citizens have been shot at the border while trying to escape the cruelties of Nazi oppressors. Poland, although occupied, is not conquered. Millions continue their struggle for world liberty.

(3.) German invaders watch as a city in Holland goes up in flames. The Queen Wilhelmina Fund aids Dutch refugees, including many families of the Royal Dutch Army, Navy and Air Forces which still fight with us.

(4.) Aviators on the Russian front don scarves knitted by American women, and shipped by Russian War Relief. This agency sends drugs, medicines, and clothing to the Russian people.

(5.) Main road through a dreary prison camp in Germany. Over 4,000,000 men, including numbers of our own soldiers and sailors, are prisoners of the enemy in the "Barbed Wire Legion." These are aided through the War Prisoners' Aid Committee.

(6.) Making the rafters ring at a USO recreation center. USO makes a "home away from home" for our boys in the service wherever they go. It maintains club houses and canteens at army camps and training centers and in cities where soldiers go on leave. It follows our boys overseas.

(7.) Carrying a cargo of flour and medicines for the starving peoples of Greece. "Mercy Ships," like this, sent by the Greek Relief Association, are the chief source of food for thousands of courageous Greek civilians.

(8.) These war orphans in China, after trudging hundreds of miles along with hordes of other refugees, were placed in orphanages run by Mme. Chiang Kai-Shek with the help of funds sent through the United China Relief.

ALABAMA'S War Chest Appeal to raise a fund of $589,500 for eight war service agencies will be launched simultaneously in sixty-seven counties, next Tuesday, October 20th.

Funds contributed by Alabama citizens thru this one appeal, which takes the place of eight separate appeals, will be used to care for bomb shocked children, to send food to starving peoples of conquered countries, to furnish clothing and medical supplies to war ravaged families in nations which are fighting with us side by side. A very large portion of the money raised will go to USO, which makes a "home away from home" for those in our armed services wherever they are sent. Some of it will also go to the War Prisoners' Aid Committee which helps Americans who are held prisoners by the enemy. These services to our sons in the service and stricken peoples of Europe are rendered thru eight approved national agencies. These are the United Service Organizations (USO), British War Relief, Greek Relief Association, Russian War Relief, United China Relief, War Prisoners' Aid Committee, Queen Wilhelmina Fund (Dutch Relief) and the Polish American Council.

In every county of the state citizens will be asked by appeal leaders to "make your standard of living your standard of giving with a minimum of one day's pay from those who work for wages and much more from those who have more to give."

Alabama War Chest President Haygood Paterson and Appeal Chairman W. A. Steadman and T. D. Johnson emphasized today the urgency of the need and called on campaign workers in each county for an all-out effort to reach their goals in the shortest possible time.

"This war appeal is the most urgent ever made in Alabama," their joint statement said. "We must not fail our boys who fight for us or our gallant Allies who fight with us. Thru this one appeal we help promote the welfare and morale of our sons in the service and help keep alive our Allies' will to win.

"We, who still enjoy relative security, cannot even imagine the conditions which exist in many of our Allied nations. In Britain one home out of every five has been damaged or destroyed by bombs with 44,000 civilians killed and more than 50,000 injured. In gallant Greece starvation, pestilence and disease are rampant. In China, Poland, Russia and among the refugees from Holland, there is an urgent call for clothing, food, surgical and medical supplies from vast numbers who have suffered war at its savage worst.

"Every family with a son, brother, husband in the service should remember, too, that a part of their gift will go to provide comforts, recreation, entertainment for their loved ones. Thru USO it will follow our boys wherever they may go and be a way of reaching out a helping hand to them.

"We urge all citizens to give as much to this one appeal as they would give if separate appeals were made by each of these eight agencies.

"No state surpasses Alabama's patriotism or Alabama's fighting spirit. Let's prove it by prompt and generous response to Alabama's War Chest Appeal."

Planting Legumes Saves Explosives For War Use

Nitrogen is one of the principal elements used in the production of high explosives. Every successful acre of winter legumes you grow and turn under means that an additional 200 to 400 pounds of Nitrate of Soda can go to make powder to help stop the enemy.

All indications point to the fact that commercial nitrates for crop production will be even less in 1943 than they were in 1942.

For these reasons, the wise farmer will plant every acre of winter legumes that he can possibly turn next spring. Some suggestions on planting winter legumes are given below:

1. Plant as early as possible.
2. Drill or broadcast at least 30 lbs. of Austrian Winter Peas or Williamette vetch per acre, or 20 lbs. of Hairy Vetch per acre.
3. Plant only inoculated seed and plant them immediately after inoculating. (Allowing seed to become dry after being inoculated kills inoculation.)
4. Apply 200 to 400 lbs. of Superphosphate or 400 to 800 lbs. of basic slag per acre before planting. (Apply Superphosphate directly with the seed kills innoculation. Basic slag can be applied with the seed.)
5. When following a heavily fertilized raw crop-plant legume seed as close to the old cotton or corn stalks as possible. This practice stimulates growth and allows early turning
6. Legumes growing on a ridge seems to warm up and begin growth earlier in the spring than those planted flat.

Austrian Winter Peas are now available through the AAA in the same manner as in the fall of 1940 These peas will cost $6.76 per 100 lbs. They may be obtained by making application for them at the AAA Office in Clanton.

Fertilizers for legumes and pastures are available also. Basic Slag is available for $9.55 per ton at Clanton. Of this amount $8.75 will be deducted from the 1942 ACP check and the remaining 80 cents per ton (4 cents per bag) will be paid in cash at the time the fertilizer is received. Eighteen percent Superphosphate is available for $16.10 per ton in Clanton. Of this $15.10 will be deducted from the 1942 ACP check and the remaining $1.00 per ton (5 cents per bag) will be paid in cash. These cash payments are to help pay for unloading and storing the fertilizers.

Ground limestone is available in 5 ton lots at $3.60 per ton delivered to the farm. All of the above fertilizers are now available to Chilton County farmers at the local AAA Office in Clanton.

Regardless of where the seed and fertilizer comes from the important thing is to plant these winter legumes and grow your own nitrogen for your 1943 crop. By planting early and fertilizing legumes, crops may be planted early next spring following these legumes and it is now time to plant

Just how important the automotive mechanic's work is to the nation will be clear to all who consider the following facts*:

- Automobiles and trucks form the sole practicable means of transportation for war workers and war materials in many communities throughout America.
- In some sections, 78% to 100% of the workers drive by automobile to vital war plants.
- 2,314 U. S. cities, with a population of 12,524,000, depend on private cars for transportation; 54,000 communities depend entirely on motor vehicles.
- Six out of every ten farms use one car or more; 67% of farm car mileage is necessity driving.
- More than 65.2% of all war plants reporting in Michigan (a typical war production state) depend on trucks to haul their incoming and outgoing freight.
- Trucks haul nearly 100% of the milk supply of most large cities—and 58% of all livestock marketed in the U. S.
- Trucks are the sole transportation system serving our 54,000 communities not reached by railroads.

The automotive mechanic—the trained Chevrolet Victory Service Man—is the lifeguard of America's millions of cars and trucks. Help him to help you and America by getting a skilled service check-up at regular intervals.

Loans To Increase Acreage Made By FSA

Farmers of Chilton County who have the necessary qualifications and want to be considered for loans with which to buy family-type farms of their own under the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Tenant Purchase program should apply immediately to the Farm Security Administration office in Clanton it was announced today by R. M. Foshee, Chairman of FSA's county farm ownership committee.

Under the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, a limited number of loans can be made in designated counties each year to farm tenants, sharecroppers or farm laborers who are American citizens, to enable them to buy farms of sufficient size to support their families adequately. The loans are repayable within 40 years, at three percent interest.

Loans also will be considered, the chairman explained, to enable bona fide farm owners with insufficient land to enlarge their acreage into economic family-type units. To qualify, the owner must have personally operated his farm at least one year, must derive all or most of his income from the farm, and must intend to operate his enlarged unit on a full-time basis. Farmers who are interested in this type of loan can obtain details from Marvin Durbin, County FSA Supervisor.

In the four years the Tenant Purchase program has operated in this county, fifty-one farmers have achieved farm ownership through these loans. Most of the TP borrowers in the county are current with their principal and interest payments, Mr. Durbin said, and several have paid ahead of schedule.

The War Production Board Order L-41 limiting construction work in a continuous 12-month period to $500 on a farm dwelling and to an aggregate of $1,000 on buildings other than the dwellings on any one farm is being observed in carrying out improvements on farms bought with TP loans, The committee chairman pointed out.

The farm ownership committee passes on the application for all loans involving purchase of additional land for enlarging farms, and in the case of the former, must approve the farm to be purchased.

Government Needs Radio Mechanics

C. F. Anderson, Director for Alabama of the United States Employment Service today announced that 360 men between 17 and 35, who have a high school education or who have had radio or high type mechanical experience, now have an opportunity to enroll in a mechanic learner (radio) course at Florence or Livingston and to collect $85 a month while in training.

Every man who is in Class 1-A should investigate this opportunity at once by calling at the nearest office of the United States Employment Service, Mr. Anderson said. The course at Livingston will open October 12 and the one at Florence will begin October 19.

All persons enrolled for the course at Florence Teacheds' College will be required to enlist in the Signal Corps Reserve, while all persons who are now in Class 1-A and are enrolled at Livingston Teachers' College will be required to enlist in the Signal Corps Reserve. In every case a person in class 1-A will be required to obtain the consent of his draft board before beginning the course.

Mr. Anderson also pointed out that young men between 17 and 20, who are not eligible for draft, may take advantage of an opportunity to en military service under favortbl cumstances . They wil be given tra ing which will equip them for ar ratings which will mean more pay th is now given to army privates

"How Much Should I Give to the ALABAMA WAR CHEST?"

When the Alabama War Chest makes its appeal to you next week, you may ask yourself: "How Much Should I Give?"

Here Is The Answer!

When making your donation, keep in mind that this one appeal is for eight war relief agencies that are rendering a vital service to our Allies and our own armed forces.

These are the United Service Organizations (USO), British War Relief, Greek Relief Association, Russian War Relief, United China Relief, War Prisoners' Aid Committee, Queen Wilhelmina Fund (Dutch Relief) and the Polish American Council.

If you work for wages, the Alabama War Chest is asking you for "one day's pay." If you have a larger income, the War Chest asks that "you make your standard of living your standard of giving."

Assuming that you work for wages and make $1.00 an hour, your Alabama War Chest gift would be $8.00. Is this too much to give?

Alabama's War Chest will raise all of Alabama's share for USO. The USO is serving all our men in uniform. How much would you do for them? You would certainly be willing to buy one pack of cigarettes a month for a boy in the service. That would be $2.40 a year.

In Britain, one home out of every five has been wrecked or damaged by bombs. Thousands are homeless. What will you do for them? Will you give $1.00 to buy medicines and $1.00 more to help rehabilitate some bomb shocked child? That's only $2.00 a year.

In gallant Greece, thousands are dying of starvation in the streets. Greek War Relief sends Mercy Ships with food supplies which are distributed through soup kitchens and feeding stations. Is 60c—the price of twelve soft drinks—too much to give to save one of these brave people from starvation?

In China, Russia, Poland, Holland—ravaged by a ruthless war—there is desperate need for surgical supplies, clothing, medicines and food. Is $2.00 too much for you to give to the many millions in these Allied nations who are fighting for you?

Behind barbed wire in enemy concentration camps, many thousands of our fighting men are now held prisoners. These are aided by the War Prisoners' Aid Committee. Is $1.00 too much for you to give to keep up their courage and their spirit until victory is won and they are once again free men?

ADD IT UP! Is "one day's pay from those who work for wages and much more from those who have more to give" too much for Alabama's War Chest to ask of YOU?

Navy Carries War to Japs In Fogbound Aleutian Isles

The Japs are in the Aleutians, where is found the worst and most dangerous flying and sailing weather in the world. However, our navy is after them, and it blasted the main Jap stronghold on Kiska island the very same day the battle for the Solomon islands began.

No attempt will be made here to tell the continuing story of the U. S. navy's heroic efforts to blast the emperor's little brown men from the fog-shrouded islands that lie off Alaska. "The record," says Secretary of the Navy Knox, "speaks for itself."

Vitamin Ways

Comes winter and fall when vegetables and fruits are more scarce than during summer and fall, and many a homemaker is apt to fall shy on serving her family these vital body regulating and protective foods. Yet, this is the time when the body needs them most. These foods build up the body's resistance to disease—and keep you, to pick a common example, from having a cold as soon as warm weather and sun flee.

Minerals are busy building and repairing, replenishing body tissues that get torn down and used up, daily with every movement you make. Vitamins help you use the foods you eat.

Good-to-eat foods help the family take in all these vital minerals and vitamins. Drab, uninteresting dishes will send them off to eating other foods to take the edge off their hunger—wherever they can put their hands on something. I need not point out that in this way they may really be losing out on foods necessary to the body.

Cooking vegetables well, and doing pretty things to their appearance will help their consumption rating. A bit of sauce or extra seasoning will put an ordinary vegetable over and at the same time insure your family of what it needs most:

Scalloped Peas and Onions.
(Serves 5 to 6)

1 pound small white onions
1 No. 2 can peas
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
3 tablespoons finely crushed bread crumbs

Parboil onions 25 minutes. Drain. Drain peas and reserve ½ cup pea liquor. Melt 2 tablespoons butter, blend in flour, salt and pepper. Add pea liquor and milk and cook until mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Pour into casserole. Melt remaining butter, stir in bread crumbs, sprinkle over casserole. Bake in a moderately hot (375-degree) oven for about 25 minutes.

Lynn Says:

Vital Statistics: There are about seven inches in the Nutrition Yardstick which bear checking every day in every way so as to keep you and your family in the running:

The first inch includes milk: 1 pint per day for every adult and 1 quart for every child. Of course you don't have to drink all this milk. Use part of it in cooking.

Second honors go to meat, fish or poultry, and this is not hard to use up. For lunch or dinner, whichever fits best for your family, one serving per person should be counted.

At least one egg a day or at least four to five per week marks the third inch. Have it for breakfast or toss it in the hot bread for dinner, or custard for lunch.

Cereal's important, too. Serve it in the breakfast, or a pudding or even cookies. Bread and rolls come under this category, also.

Fifth inch includes the vegetables: two besides potatoes, one should be a leafy vegetable—spinach, lettuce, broccoli, romaine, etc.—and the other raw. Cabbage is perfect.

Now, the fruits. Two a day isn't hard to manage. Of course you start off with breakfast, and then include one for lunch or dinner dessert.

The last and seventh inch includes butter or some fat rich in vitamin A. This is for fuel and energy.

*Cranberry-Pineapple Salad
Hot Biscuits
*Apple Juice Mince Pie
*Recipes Given

Vegetable Bouillon.
(Serves 2)

½ cup water
¾ to 1 cup juice strained from canned string or wax beans
1 bouillon cube
2 small sprigs parsley

Add water to bean juice and heat to boiling. Dissolve bouillon cube in boiling liquid. Serve hot garnished with parsley.

A one-dish meal that's good for fall is this one with many vegetable favorites:

Ham Hock With Vegetables.
(Serves 5)

2½ pounds ham hock
5 medium-sized potatoes
1 bunch carrots
5 medium-sized onions
1 medium-sized head of cabbage

Wipe ham hock. Cover with boiling water, cover and simmer two hours or until tender. Clean vegetables, add to meat, cook, uncovered 20 to 30 minutes or until vegetables are tender.

Fried Squash Cakes.

Slice squash very thin, being certain to slice it across. Place the slices in salt water, wipe them dry, sprinkle with salt and pepper, dip in flour, beaten egg and then in cracker crumbs. Repeat the process twice and then drop into hot fat for frying. When they have cooked through and are brown, drain on brown paper and serve.

Festive Squash.
(Serves 6)

3 small squashes
1 cup drained canned tomatoes
1 cup shredded, processed cheddar cheese
1 tablespoon chopped onion
2 cups soft bread crumbs
Salt, pepper
3 tablespoons melted butter
Parsley
Broiled bacon

Wash the squashes and cut them in half, lengthwise and cook in boiling salted water until almost tender. Scoop out the centers, leaving a ¼-inch shell. Cut the pulp into small pieces and drain thoroughly. Combine with tomatoes, cheese, onion, 1 cup bread crumbs and seasonings to taste. Pile this into the squash shells and sprinkle with remaining crumbs mixed with the melted butter. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven until the crumbs are brown. Arrange in a round platter and serve with parsley and crisp, broiled bacon.

A few green leaves of lettuce, romaine, watercress or other salad greens guarantee much of the important, but hard-to-get vitamin D. Perhaps, you like the greens plain, or perhaps with a bit of color such as:

Cranberry-Pineapple Salad.

Cut slices of canned cranberry sauce and top with slices of pineapple. Arrange in lettuce nests. Soften cream cheese with milk and add a few chopped nuts. Shape into balls and place among lettuce leaves. Serve with mayonnaise.

Apple Juice Mince Pie.
(Makes 1 9-inch pie)

1 package orange flavored gelatin
2 cups apple juice
⅛ teaspoon lemon juice
1 cup mincemeat
Cream cheese

Dissolve the gelatin in apple juice that has been heated to the boiling point. Add lemon juice and mincemeat. Cook until thick and creamy, then pour into a baked pie shell. Chill until firm, then decorate top with cream cheese put through a pastry tube.

No Curb Service

Clanton, Alabama
August 21, 1942

We, the undersigned merchants and business houses of Clanton, hereby petition the trading public to be considerate of our problems and points of view regarding unnecessary curb service which we are called upon to care for. Due to the shortage of labor, we must conserve as many steps for ourselves and employees as possible. Therefore, we respectfully ask our customers not to call for curb service except where the same is absolutely necessary, which will be a great help to us at this crucial time in our national life when we must all contribute and make various sacrifices toward the preservation of civilization and our cherished American mode of living. Will you please help?

THE STORY OF BILL JONES

much fun around the blanket where they were shooting craps, and he wasn't so hot at the beer drinking contests in the jukes, but he earned his sergeant's stripes before they sent his gang ashore in one of those new boats which land through the surf.

The first full of fighting fools charged a machine gun nest, and Bill had just taken careful aim and let go with a hand grenade when another machine gun caught him. Four bullets hit his head, but a Marine has four speeds forward and no reverse, and Bill fell toward the enemy.

That was the afternoon when you were sitting at the golf club with a highball in your hand, telling the other three fellows in your foursome that if income taxes were not reduced, they were going to kill initiative in this country.

Bill Jones is dead.

Bill was a football player who had good prospects as professional coach at a good small college. Then came Pearl Harbor. Bill used some football language and headed for town to sign up with the parachute troops. He did all right.

Bill got action in an air raid in enemy country. He hit the ground with a dozen of his pals and raced to where their machine guns and grenades had landed near them. Fully equipped they made for a nearby farm house from which bullets were spraying like water out of a garden hose.

Six of those machine gun bullets fairly cut Bill's legs off, but he lay on his belly in the mud and got two Heinies. Bill's last words were, "Of all the damn fool luck!"

That was the time you were telling the boys at the poker game that the union rackateers and the munition manufacturers were making fortunes out of this war, when we had no business getting into it in the first place.

Bill Jones is dead

Bill was an uneducated clam digger on the New England coast, but he knew about boats. He had only one eye and uniformed ranks would not take him, so he shipped on a tanker. His ship was bringing oil up the coast when a German pig boat came up out of the slime and sent a torpedo into the hull amidships. The freighter burst into flames and Bill went over the side into the burning oil.

When he came to the surface, a machine gun was practicing on the bobbing heads. When the bullets hit Bill's head, it burst open like a dropped egg. His charred bullet riddled body sank beneath the surface.

That was the night you were telling the folks at your party that this war is being run by a lot of old women in Washington, the most mismanaged mess you ever heard of.

Bill Jones is dead. When God in His infinite kindness meets Bill Jones at Heaven's gate, He is going to say "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

What He is going to say to you, God alone knows.

The Selma Times-Journal says: "For patriotism, if not from common decency, let's keep glass out of our gutters and out of the streets, and give our poor thin, irreplacable tires a chance." The paper says a person who will leave glass in the streets is "opening himself to the justifiable description of war saboteur."

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

By BEN

THE KID HAS GONE TO THE COLORS

The Kid has gone to the Colors
And we don't know what to say:
The Kid we have loved and cuddled
Stepped out for the flag today.
We thought him a child, a baby,
With never a care at all,
But his country called him mansize
And the Kid has heard the call.

He paused to watch the recruiting,
Where, fired by the fife and drum,
He bowed his head to Old Glory
And thought it whispered: "Come!"
The Kid, not beng a slacker,
Stood forth with patriot joy
To add his name to the roster—
And, God, we're proud of the boy!

The Kid has gone to the Colors;
It seems but a little while
Since he drilled a school boy army
In a truly martial style.
But now he's a man, a soldier,
And we lend him listening ear,
For his heart is a heart all loyal,
Unscourged by the curse of fear.

His dad, when he told him, shuddered,
His mother—God bless her—cried;
Yet, blessed with a mother nature,
She wept with mother pride.
But he whose old shoulders straightened
Was granddad—for memory ran
To years when he too, a youngster,
Was changed by the flag to a man!

Chilton County Experiences Bloody Week-End

What with fist fights, cutting scrapes and other forms of rowdyism Chilton County experienced one of the blackest week-ends in many a moon.

According to Ed Propst, State Highway Patrolman from early Saturday night until late Sunday morning the Highway Patrol was kept steadily going from one place to another trying to keep things under control.

Let's ride awhile with the Patrol car: Early Saturday night while cruising over beyond Maplesville the officers came upon 150 to 200 people fighting out in the middle of the highway in front of a honky-tonk. It took several minutes to quiet the crowd and it is reported that the fight started where it left off after the Patrolmen left. After picking up a delinquent and coming back to Clanton to the county jail with her they heard Martin's ambulance go out. Following on down the highway, south they came upon a fight in front of Tourists Cafe. It is reported that Saford Jones had cut his half-brother, Durwood Jones pretty bad. Durwood or "Duck" is in Central Alabama Hospital and is in a critical condition. Before the officers could even leave Tourists Cafe word came that there had been a fight at Starlight Inn, Just north of Verbena. It is reported there that Jim Burnett cut Erby Popwell in several places and a number of others were cut in the same fight. Erby is the most seriously injured but according to hospital authorities has a fifty-fifty chance of recovering. Robbery, automobile wrecks, driving while intoxicated, fights, etc., harassed the officers constantly throughout the week-end.

ALRED DRUG STORE ROBBED

Sometime Friday night burgulars entered Alred's Drug Store and took jewelry estimated at between $1500 and $2000. City, county and state officers are working on the robbery but no arrests have been made yet. Entrance was obtained by knocking a panel out of the back door. It seems that the loot was carefully selected and only the most valuable articles taken.

School Children Bond Parade Big Success

October 20, 1942.

To The Editor of the Chilton County News.

Dear Editor:

The quota for Chilton County in October is $30,300.00. Through the combined effort of the good people of of our state we have made the record that has already brought to us National honor and fame, and I want Chilton County to meet its full obligations and raise our quota for October, so that we can share the honor with our State. Thousands of our American boys have crossed the Atlantic sacrificing their lives at the various war fronts that you and I might continue to have liberty and freedom.

Thousands are on the Pacific, many of them at this very moment sacrificing their lives for you and I. Some noble boys went down a few days ago from Chilton County when the Japs dropped bombs on the vessels that they were on.

Some few were saved by hanging on the rafts in the water, fighting off the shark in the dark expecting every moment to be bombed again by the Japs.

Will you reflect again for one moment and think of the great sacrifice our boys are making, and think what little we are asked to do. I hope every man, woman, and child in Chilton County will do their part in this great drive for War Stamps and Bonds.

We had a great parade last Saturday, I have never seen such a parade of school children as we had in Clanton. I wish I had the opportunity to personally congratulate every teacher and every child from the Kindergarden to the Senior class for their interest and for their splendid performance on this occassion. I know these school children will go their full limit in buying stamps and bonds. I want the schools of this county to stand at the head of the list in this great program.

I want to congratulate our county on having such a fine lot of teachers as they have, and I do hope and trust that when the next Legislature meets, that the salary of the teachers will be increased and that they will be paid in proportion to the great good that they are doing. I am

Respectfully,
L. H. Reynolds.

Tuesday, October 27 Is Navy Day

Montgomery, Ala Oct 21 — By proclamation of Governer Frank M. Dixon, Tuesday, October 27, will be observed in Alabama as Navy Day, a day set aside to pay tribute to the United States Navy and a day for citizens to become more familiar with the Navy.

In his proclamation, Governor Dixon said "within the past year our Navy has again demonstrated its vital importance to the country, both in defense and offense. The will to win has been evident, even when that involved a willingness to die."

Text of the Governor's proclamation follows:

"October 27th has been observed as Navy Day annually for the past 20 years. This date was selected because it is the anniversary of the birth of Theodore Roosevelt, who devoted much of his life to the building of a strong Navy. It is eminently fit and proper that this anniversary be observed again this year. Within the past year our Navy has again demonstrated its vital importance to the country, both in defense and offense. The will to win has been evident, even when that involved a willingness to die.

"The men who compose this Navy are entitled to know that a whole nation regards it with pride and appreciation."

The Navy League of the United States, an organization of patriotic citizens formed in 1903 to build up the American Navy, was responsible for setting aside October 27 as Navy Day every year, which was first observed in 1922.

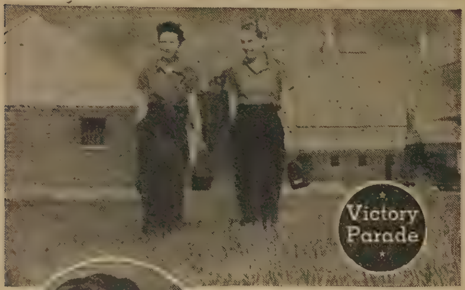
Modern Iowa Dairy Farm Harvests Millions of Shells to Blast Axis

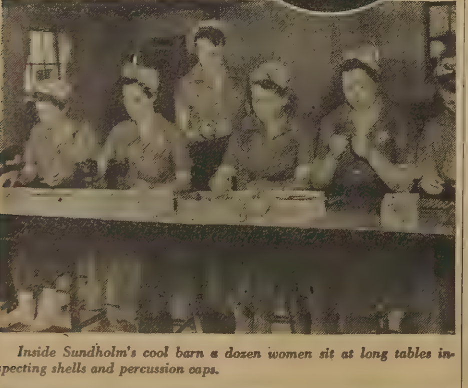


It's lunchtime for Virginia Johnson and Cleoda Knoblauch, two employees on this unique "dairy farm," which is devoted 100% to victory.

A YEAR ago last June Ed Sundholm, president of the Superior Manufacturing company, Albert City, Iowa, found that he was getting more contracts for war production than his over-crowded shop could handle. At the same time his model dairy farm a few miles west of the city was nearing completion, the modern farm buildings only awaiting installation of farm equipment and the arrival of a herd of purebred Brown Swiss. But nary a reaper has been delivered to Mr. Sundholm's barn, and no purebred has ever set hoof inside the barn. In the space of a few weeks Ed Sundholm converted his model farm into a model factory—producing vital ammunition for the U. S. army. Sundholm is pictured above.

Left: The only milk that flows around this dairy is the soluble oil, known as "coolant," which keeps the drill press cool.

Assistant Manager Harriet Danielson has to hurry back to the shop in Albert City. Here Foreman August Rebhuhn gets final instructions from Miss Danielson before she leaves the "farm."
Right: Ann Johnson, foreman of inspection, inspecting bomb-percussion primers.



Inside Sundholm's cool barn a dozen women sit at long tables inspecting shells and percussion caps.

Farm Topics

Use Native Material For Farm Structures

Building Substitutes Found Satisfactory

Although building construction is limited by government order to conserve materials for the armed forces, some agricultural construction is necessary and can be realized through the use of native and local materials which are not critical.

Among the materials recommended for use in farm construction in these times are concrete, concrete blocks, field stones, brick and tile. Unskilled labor can do a fair job with these materials. Poultry houses, machine storages, granaries, dairy barns, milk houses—in fact, practically all buildings normally constructed of wood can be built of these materials with assurance of excellent results. Electric and water supply facilities can be added after the war.

Wood stanchions and partitio will substitute for steel. Roll roofing provides an inexpensive and temporary covering which serves as a base for other types, excepting steel which should not be placed in contact with a tar or asphalt surface because of corrosion. Home-sawed lumber can be used in place of costly West coast supplies.

An important use for heavy hemp ropes is shown in this scene on the Harper Carroll farm near Ellicott City, Md.

Violation of the building conservation order, designated as Order L-41, which limits building to $1,000 for farm construction and $500 for house repairs, may result in being prohibited further deliveries or use of material under priority control.

For details about this order and how it applies in your case, contact your county agricultural war board. Your county agricultural agent is the secretary.

Maple Products

Nearly one-third of the annual yield of maple syrup in the United States, is puffed in cigarette and pipe tobacco. Manufacturers have discovered that by holding moisture, it gives proper burning qualities to tobacco. Syrup grades that are not up to fixed color standards are used for flavoring chewing tobacco.

The sugar belt runs from Maine to Minnesota, from Canada south to Maryland west to Arkansas and nearly every farmer raises sugar for home use. Vermont tops the nation in the amount of maple products, and has earned the reputation for producing the best.

It is no secret that a large amount of syrup from elsewhere is shipped into Vermont and processed and sold under Vermont labels.

The eastern states produce nearly all the maple products sold commercially. Some sugar groves are 150 years old and are still paying taxes on farms for the grandchildren of the men who planted them. Sugar trees do not reach top form until they have lived 50 years.

Old time open kettle methods were used in sugar making until 1875, when modern machinery appeared and the picturesque quality of the business disappeared. Now there are sterilizing hydrometers, evaporators and streamlined sugaring-off pans. In some camps where the contour of the land is right, an elaborate pipeline system collects sap and conveys it, by gravity, to the sugar house.

Hens Have High Body Heat

Hens have a body temperature of about 106 degrees F. The heat given off by the body of the hen is quickly lost with a few birds in a large house, or with any number of birds in a cold house. But if the house is tight and properly constructed otherwise, and if the house is filled to capacity, the body heat will many times keep it warm enough to make the birds comfortable, increase egg production, and reduce the danger of diseases.

UNNECESSARY EXPOSURE

By J. T. BARBER

McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

"O'KEEFE, upstairs!"

Patrolman O'Keefe dropped his dissembled pistol on the assembly room table beside the rags and cleaning oil and hot-footed it up to the lieutenant's office. He knew what the lieutenant would say. The lieutenant would say: "O'Keefe, what are you mooning about? You're slowing up."

O'Keefe would reply: "Lieutenant, do you know Miss Polly Cudahay that lives at 400 North Woodbine?"

And the lieutenant would say: "No, O'Keefe. Tell me about her."

Then Patrolman O'Keefe would go on to say how a woman could trouble a man by deliberately ignoring his brass buttons and his tall blue-coated figure of authority.

And when a woman like that had dove's eyes and hair like the pale amber fire in honey under sunlight and a nose that rivaled the poetry of her mouth—why it was nothing less than unnecessary risk and exposure. He would ask the lieutenant's advice.

"O'Keefe!" the lieutenant snapped when the patrolman had saluted, "get set for a quickie in your district tonight. You're going on duty now. Dust out to Woodbine and Hamilton. Hide in the grocery store there and do your duty."

O'Keefe's mouth closed over his private troubles with the abruptness of a sprung trap. It was probably the mob from Philly, who had been hitting a different grocery in town every Saturday night. They were raiders, "quickies" who swooped down and carried off the day's receipts.

"O'Keefe," the lieutenant was saying, "a good piece of work on this job will get you a promotion."

"Yes, sir," replied O'Keefe, even while his will power struggled to submerge the disconcerting influence of Polly Cudahay. It was the more difficult because unfortunately she lived just across the street from the store.

When he got to the corner he paused on the curb for one last look around before entering the store. It was not entirely necessary, but his bright blue eye had fallen upon the alluring face of Polly Cudahay and he thought it would be a swell idea to ignore her officially.

Accordingly he paused there by the waterplug and, glancing unconcernedly about, straightened his belt with just that unstudied touch that makes efficiency a pleasure.

He wanted her to get a good look this time at a fine looking policeman and evidently she did because she seemed to be looking him up and down without seeing him at all.

He was burrowed among boxes and bags in the grocery three torturous hours when they came in. Three of them. O'Keefe studied the men from the black shadow of his vantage point. It wasn't much of a place to shoot from. His hands twitched under the strain, but there wasn't anything to do but wait.

The trio fiddled around until the last customers left the store and then at a signal they pulled their guns. It was all done in the flick of an eyelash. Now it was time for O'Keefe to act. But someone else was acting.

With the suddenness of a squall a riot squad had come pouring in through the front and side doors, shooting as they came. In ten seconds the place was a madhouse of staccato shots. Cans of vegetables began to leak over everything.

Patrolman O'Keefe was in the thick of it then. The stumbling figure of a riddled gunman crashed into him. He grappled with the bandit and took his gun. Then he did some effective shooting with it. It gave him a thrill to shoot the robbers with their own weapon.

Afterward when everyone was congratulating him he became more and more indignant. It was something that had come up to gnaw within him and to embitter his triumph. And when he could get away it took him no more than a split second to reach Polly Cudahay's door. He wanted to ask her if she thought he was so weak and wan he needed help on that little job. And what business was it of hers anyway?

He didn't expect her to deny it, but she did. She denied with flashing eye she had anything to do with calling the riot squad. He could see then that if he ever kissed her it would have to be a delight separate and remote from any subject that happened to be up for discussion.

"And you didn't wonder what I was doing on the curb?" he growled.

"I did not," she said. "Policemen stand around on curbs all the time, like the braggarts they are, all brass and buttons."

"It's the uniform, Colleen," he informed her with dignity. "It isn't the man. The badge on the tunic and the gun on the hip—they clothe a common man with the authority of the law."

"Oh, yes?" said Miss Cudahay with a belittling eye on his right hip. "Well, you've practically been a nudist for hours!"

With that Patrolman O'Keefe clapped a dismaying hand to his heavy service holster and found it as empty as his pride.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

WICKARD FEARS FOOD CRISIS

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard has made it very clear in private conferences that he takes vigorous exception to Donald Nelson's recent statement: "We are going to have enough to eat throughout this war and we probably will not have to put any very drastic limitations on our range of choice in that regard."

On the contrary, Wickard says that we are going to be more and more up against it for food—unless we give the farmer more machinery and more labor.

Briefly here are the reasons why:

1. An army uses twice as much food as civilians, (a) because a lot is lost at sea, (b) a lot is lost in the field of battle, and (c) soldiers eat more than civilians.
2. We have to feed our allies more and more.
3. We will also have to feed the occupied regions when they are set free.

But meanwhile, farmers actually are killing good dairy cows for beef because they cannot get labor or machinery to keep up their dairy herds. In the Chicago milk shed alone, 1,700 dairy farmers have sold their herds and gone out of business.

In one specific case, a dairy farmer lost the use of his litter-carrier when the tub went bad. The carrier, complete with trolley and hoist, had cost him $250. A new tub to replace the rusted one would cost only $10. But he couldn't buy a new tub. And he couldn't find additional hands to do the work of the machine.

So he sold his cattle and closed the dairy.

Foreseeing this machinery shortage, Secretary Wickard asked WPB to permit manufacture of agricultural machinery up to 38 per cent of normal. The request was made July 22. He did not get a reply until this week.

Principal log-jammer is WPB's civilian supply committee, headed by Joseph L. Wiener, which has to act on a great variety of civilian problems and does not pretend to be expert in agriculture.

Its lack of expertness was indicated by two questions asked by members of this committee, in discussing farm problems:

"If there is a labor shortage on the farms, why can't farmers work overtime, just as factory workers do?"

"What is the difference between a wheel type tractor and a crawler type?"

So the United States may fail as the larder of democracy if a farmer can't have a new plow point or some other item—and the necessary farm labor.

NO NIX ON NAVY'S PIX

On the important question of photographs, the navy has completely reversed itself, with the result that the stay-at-home public is seeing daily action shots of the war.

Until recently, there was a ban on taking pictures of "confidential" scenes. But on September 1, the navy issued General Order 179, which stated that "commanding officers are directed to obtain photographs at times of emergency, disaster, and combat action."

Picture taking in the navy used to be confined to "nuts and bolts photography"—routine shots of materials to observe their action under stress. But now the navy is taking pictures of some of the most dramatic and colorful incidents in the history of warfare, with some 1,400 photographers.

If you saw the picture of the Jap carrier sinking in the Coral sea, or the Jap heavy cruiser sinking at Midway, or the U. S. sailors leaping overboard from the carrier Lexington, you have seen the work of navy cameramen.

Some were appointed to do nothing else but take pictures of the battle, but some did their camera shooting only after laying aside a machine gun. The famous picture of the sinking Jap carrier in the Coral sea was taken by a machine gunner from the rear nest of a navy plane.

Primary purpose of the picture taking is not to inform the public, but to inform the navy. The pictures are used to check on operations, to instruct learners, and, most important, to study the enemy's position. Today, tomorrow and every day, navy planes are flying over New Guinea and the Solomons, taking pictures of whatever lies below. The developed shots may disclose that the Japs have moved into a new area, and that the little black spot, seen under a microscope, is an oil tank just installed.

IT IS not necessary to make our economies so dull and dreary that they depress every one. Let's make them so gay and attractive that they give us a lift and a bit of a challenge too. This old rocker is an example.

A saw and a wood chisel were used for removing projections and rockers. An old quilt was found for padding and the feathers from an old bolster were packed into a thick seat cushion to raise the seat which has been lowered by removing the rockers. This required a yard and a quarter of ticking. Four and one-half yards of inexpensive chintz in a bold, modern pattern did the rest. Total cost for an up-to-date chair less than two dollars, that will serve well for the duration.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Before rubber allocation programs, one large rubber manufacturing company made close to 35,000 separate rubber items. The weights of these items ran from fractions of an ounce to hundreds of pounds.

Supported by old inner tubes that have been blessed, natives of Benares, India, stay in the waters of the Holy Ganges River for weeks at a stretch.

Rubber shortage was no worry when the first roads were constructed in the Empire of Assyria and Babylon in 1900 B.C. or when the Romans built their military roads in 302-298 B.C.

In 1941 89% of the rubber consumed in the U. S. came from lands that are now in the hands of the enemy or cut off from U. S. ships.

Two-thirds of all the natural rubber in the U. S. is in the tires and tubes on American cars.

THAT MARTIAL AIRE

Thursday afternoon of last week the citizens of Chilton County and Clanton were honored by a visit of the Gunter Field Band, from Montgomery. A right good band it is and with the airplanes flying overhead, also from the Montgomery field, an atmosphere of military might, soldiers and WAR was brought closer home to us.

It is something that we need more of.

We, in Chilton County, haven't fully realized yet that there is a war. We do not know what it means to sacrifice. We mean really sacrifice as others are doing in order to win this war.

The Band and the soldiers and the Recruiting Officers will be back sometime before the First of November to spend a few hours with us. It will be well worth your time to watch for the date and come to Clanton to hear them.

EVERY DAY NAVY DAY

America will observe its first war-time Navy Day next Tuesday Oct. 27. with the United States Navy engaged in the most difficult task of its long and heroic life.

Our Navy—and it is OUR Navy, it's not THE Navy—has been carrying the offense thus far in World War No. 2. To the Navy has fallen the task of doing the bulk of the fighting. The Navy also must carry our soldiers to faraway battlefields and must take food and supplies to our allies across the seas. One can say witdout exaggeration that the hope of the world rests with the American Navy today.

Our Navy dasn't fallen down on its job and it won't. No job ever has been or ever will be too tough for our Navy, your Navy and mine.

Men make the Navy and more men are needed now. Alabama does have and always has had wonderful representation in our Navy, your Navy and mine. The state has been a leader in Navy volunteers and its sons have been heroes.

This is a time for an increase in Navy enlistments. The need is great and opportunities are many.

In peace-time elaborate ceremonies are held on Navy Day. There won't be any great ceremonies this year. There shouldn't be. Instead there should be an awakened conciousness of our Navy and what it means to all of us.

SMITH-McCARY

The marriage of Miss Annie Cordelia Smith, daughter of Mr. Milton Smith and the late Mrs. Inez Smith to Staff Sgt. James B. McCary, formerly of Mitchell Dam now stationed at Elgin Field, Florida, took place at an impressive ceremony Sunday afternoon at three o'clock at the Baptist Church. The Rev. Roswell Owens pastor of the Baptist church performed the ceremony in the presence of the families and close friends. The double ring service was used.

Decorations were confined to the chancel and consisted of large baskets of white gladioli and tube roses placed alternately with branched candelbra. Lower arrangement consisted of smilax and ferns.

Mrs. Earl Ellis rendered a beautiful ceremony of nuptial music. During the ceremony "Because" and "I Love You Truly" were softly played.

Robert Newton of Mitchell Dam served Sgt. McCary as best man.

Miss Frances Smith, only sister of the bride, was lovely as maid of honor. She was becominly attired in sage green velvet wth brown accessories. She carried talisman rosebuds and brown chrysanthemums.

Miss Sara Nell McCary, sister of the groom, and Mis Eugenit Newton were bridesmaids. Each wore a gown of velvet, fashioned along simple lines. Miss McCary wore Salute blue and Miss Newton wore wine. Their corsages were white gardenias.

The bride entered with her father by whom she was given in marriage. Her gown was fashioned of orchid velvet bodice with skirt of orchid wool jersey. Her hat was an off-the-face pompadour of matching velvet. Her bouquet was of rosebuds and carnations centered with an orchid in showered arrangements.

Sgt. McCary and his bride will reside in Fort Walton, Florida after a short wedding trip.

The bride is a graduate of Chilton County High School where she was outstanding in scholarship. She is lovely and attractive.

The groom received his early education at Mitchell Dam and graduated from Verbena High School.

FARMERS TO RECEIVE AID FROM WAR BOARD

Facilities of the Chilton County War Board will be used to assist farm truck operators, and other operators who engage in hauling farm supplies to and from farms, in filling out applications for Certificates of War Necessity under ODT's General Order No. 21, Mr. Napoleon Posey, Chairman of the County War Board, said this week.

The plan, announced jointly by ODT and the Department of Agriculture, will make this assistance available 3 days this month—October 22, 23, 24.

Under the Certificate of War Necessity order, all commercial vehicles are required to carry Certificates of War Necessity after November 15.

Joseph B. Eastman, Director of ODT, explained that the Certificates of War Necessity will govern the miles that may be operated and the loads that must be carried by all vehicles affected by the order. Mailing of the applications has been started by the ODT from its central mailing office and as the mailing is completed in a particular area, the state and counties covered will be announced.

Any operator of commercial vehicle, including a farm truck, who has not received his application blank when the mailing has been announced as finished in this county should apply to the nearest field office of the ODT Division of Motor Transport for forms covering his fruck or trucks, Mr. Posey, said.

The Chilton County Farm Transportation Committee is to be made up of five regular and four alternate members appointed by the County USDA War Board.

The Chairman of the County USDA War Board will serve as a member and as committee chairman. Headquarters for the committee will be the office of the County USDA War Board.

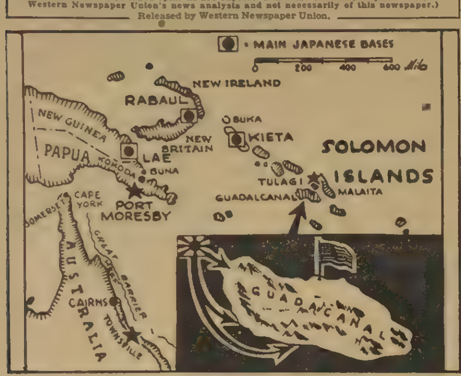
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Roosevelt Outlines Manpower Program; 18-19 Year-Old Army Draft to Release Older Men for Needed War Production; Willkie Renews Second Front Demands

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.



Japanese efforts to dislodge the marines from Guadalcanal and obtain possession of this strategic link in the Solomon islands chain have taken a three-pronged pincer movement, according to military experts. Possession of Guadalcanal by the Americans provides a springboard for further offensive action against the Japs.

SOLOMONS:
All-Out Struggle

Good news balanced bad as the navy made public accounts of thunderous encounters between American and Jap war craft.

On the credit side was the report that five Nipponese warships and a transport had been sunk in a midnight battle near the Solomons. Included in the sinking were a heavy Jap cruiser, four destroyers and a transport. In addition, another destroyer was reported probably sunk, three cruisers torpedoed and bombed and 15 aircraft destroyed.

On the debit side was the somber tidings that three heavy American cruisers had been sent to the bottom of the Pacific in a night engagement during the first phase of the Solomon islands offensive last August. Announcement of the sinkings had been withheld as a military precaution. The cruisers were the Quincy, Vincennes and Astoria.

The struggle for naval supremacy in the area was accompanied by engagements in the air and on land for control. On strategic Guadalcanal proper, the marine defenders had been re-enforced by U. S. army units. Offsetting this added American strength, the Japs had landed re-enforcements of their own, covered by heavy naval concentrations. Continued possession of their positions including the Guadalcanal air base by the U. S. forces meant that a heavy gun was thrust in the ribs of Japan's positions to the north and east.

WILLKIE:
Persistent Advocate

Back from a 31,000-mile aerial tour of 14 countries in the war zone, including embattled Russia, the Middle East, India and China, Wendell L. Willkie reiterated a demand for a second front in Europe. He had made this demand frequently during his tour.

Reporting personally to President Roosevelt the results of his observations and of conferences with Joseph Stalin, Chiang Kai-shek and other Allied leaders, Willkie emphasized his conviction that the United Nations inevitably will defeat the Axis and that "Germany will never crush Russia."

In an interview later the 1940 Republican presidential candidate defended his right as a non-military expert to advance proposals which he believes will help shorten the war, reduce its cost in human life and help shape a better post-war world.

EMPLOYMENT:
To Reach 62,500,000

Eventual employment of 62,500,000 Americans in all lines of industry, commerce and agriculture by December, 1943, was predicted by the National Industrial Conference board.

The board reported that current employment figures were 57,700,000 with the total moving steadily upward.

Rise in employment in the past 12 months has been 4,000,000, while 10,000,000 have been added to payrolls since the defense program was undertaken in 1940.

18-19 DRAFT:
Oldsters Go Home?

Symbolic of the nation's united determination to prosecute the war vigorously was the swift congressional action which followed President Roosevelt's radio recommendation that the minimum draft age be lowered to 18.

A larger and younger army, fit to cope with the exhausting demands of modern combat was envisioned by Gen. George C. Marshall, U. S. chief of staff, as a result of making youths 18 and 19 years old eligible to fight. The army's goal is 7,500,000 by the end of 1943, compared with an enlisted strength of 4,250,000 at present. There are 2,000,000 men in the 18-19 category, it was estimated, of whom 1,500,000 would be physically fit. About 100,000 men will become 18 during each month next year.

Declaring that some of the older men already inducted are a burden on the army because of physical handicaps and their lack of training, General Marshall said that many of these men may have to be discharged from the army.

ROOSEVELT:
Outlines Manpower Plan

Reviewing the war effort at home and abroad, President Roosevelt outlined for the American people the harsh necessities that face the nation in the future and proclaimed that the United States is winning the battle of transportation and production.

In unequivocal words the President recommended that 18 and 19-year-old youths be drafted for military service. He warned, too, that compulsory allocation of manpower to war industries and agriculture might become necessary.

Recommending a program to ease the manpower situation, Mr. Roosevelt urged: a virtual freeze of workers to their jobs; a system to "stop employers from stealing labor from one another"; a system to use "older men, handicapped people, more women and even grown boys and girls wherever possible; elimination of nonwar enterprise by measures to "stop the wastage of labor in all non-essential activities."

RUSSIA:
Nazi's New Strategy

Hitler's new Continental strategy of consolidation and defense was evident in tactical moves centering on the Soviet front. As the Russian winter approached, Nazi attacks in the key Stalingrad sector and in the Mozdok area of the Caucasus were described as minor compared to the tumultuous battles which had rocked the Soviet Union for five months.

The Russian relief army that had edged down from the north of Stalingrad through the German left flank was reported making continued progress. Communiques revealed that American-made tanks were being used by the advancing Reds.

News from the Caucasus was more favorable to the Russians. Fighting time as well as the attacking Reds, the Nazis around Mozdok were slowed down in their drive to the nearby Grozny oil fields.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

VICHY: For lack of merchandise to supply the half million saloons and cafes, or one for every 80 inhabitants, a virtual prohibition regime has been established in France. Thousands have gone out of business since it has become impossible to get supplies. When a cafe proprietor gets a little stock of liquor or wine there is an immediate run on his place.

MIAMI: Albert John Capone, younger brother of Chicago's former gang czar Alphonse Capone, obtained a court order here to change his surname from Capone to Rayola. The order covered Capone, his wife and their son Robert Francus. Capone told the court the family wanted the name changed for the future benefit of the child.

AIRCRAFT OUTPUT:
Approaches 60,000

President Roosevelt's goal of an annual airplane production of 60,000 planes this year is being approached, the aeronautical chamber of commerce revealed.

Reporting that monthly plane production was pressing at 5,000, the chamber noted that more than 4 billion dollars worth of airplanes, engines and propellers will be produced in 1942.

"From the standpoint of numbers," the report said, "it is estimated that what was once a year's production of combat planes is rolling out of the American aircraft plants in a single week."

As production mounts, quality improves, the report stated. "Despite the stellar performance of America's combat planes," it said, "the aircraft manufacturers are perfecting new and improved types which can fly higher, travel faster and spray more lead and destruction than the models presently in service."

TIRES:
Limit Is Five

The four tires they drove on, plus a spare for emergencies were all that American motorists could legally possess, as the U. S. government began acquiring excess civilian tires. The government was paying ceiling prices of from $1.50 to $11.15 for used tires, depending on the amount of tread.

Although the tire sale was voluntary, officials of the Office of Price Administration warned that car owners with more than five tires would be denied gasoline rations when the nation-wide registration took place November 9. Fines of $10,000 and prison terms of 10 years faced those who falsified their tire statements in applying for gasoline rations.

The government asked each motorist to keep the five best tires he had. Owners of two cars were told to keep 10 tires, five for each. The American Railway Express, with 23,000 offices in the United States, was the official collection agency.

The program to buy excess tires was expected to increase the national stockpile by from 2,000,000 to 5,000,000 units.

ENEMY ALIENS:
Italians Lose Stigma

Significant of the breach which the United Nations hope to effect between the Italian people and their Nazi mentors was Attorney General Biddle's action in freeing 600,000 Italian nationals in this country from the stigma of "enemy aliens." The ban still applied to German and Jap aliens.

Italian aliens had earned this recognition, Biddle said, because of "the splendid showing they have made in meeting the test of loyalty to American ways and traditions since the attack on Pearl Harbor."

ATTORNEY GENERAL BIDDLE
" . . . stigma unfair."

Under a new department of justice policy, the attorney general revealed that Italians would still be subject to internment if they proved "dangerous or disloyal." But he explained that the general regulations affecting enemy aliens, specifically Germans and Japanese, would no longer pertain to Italians.

LABOR:
More 'Farm Union'?

Extension of his attempt to unionize agricultural labor was announced by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America in a statement at the close of the organization's convention in Cincinnati.

"There are millions more to organize, clamoring for organization," he said. "Great segments of agriculture are knocking at the door of the UMW for help toward becoming free and independent citizens."

While Lewis' statement sounded optimistic, observers recalled that his previous efforts to unionize dairy workers in a number of states had failed signally.

CHURCHILL:
'Stern and Somber'

In ancient Edinburgh, once the home of the Scottish kings, Prime Minister Churchill served notice on the Axis that the United Nations have built up their striking power remarkably in the last two months.

One of Churchill's statements was interpreted by some observers as implying an early opening of a second front, when he said the United Nations had reached a "stern and somber moment in the war."

CONNIE MACK was talking about the Cardinals. "They take me back a long way," he said, and Connie can go back a longer way than any in baseball. At the age of 80 there is much to remember.

Connie Mack

"I'll tell you what I mean," Connie said. "During the series I noticed them all hanging around the front of their hotel, looking at the sights. No motion pictures—no nightclubs — just a bunch of young fellows sticking together as we used to do a long time ago.

"In the same way they take me back to the days of defensive baseball. They only ask a run or two, as a rule and then they're hard to handle. This means high class pitching and fine fielding. They are fast and aggressive on defense. They actually turn a defense into an offense. Baseball has been ruled by pluggers for many years. The Cardinals turned back the clock in the games I saw them play."

There isn't any question but that the Cardinals finished the season with one of the best pitching staffs in baseball history.

This list includes Mort Cooper, Ernie White, Pollet, Beazley and Max Lanier.

Starting Pitchers

I can't recall a team with so many good starting pitchers.

White and Pollet were afflicted with sore arms most of the season. If they had been in shape all year there is no telling how many games the Cardinals might have won. They might even have passed the old 1906 Cub mark of 116 wins. They had all these men ready for the main series—especially White who needed a shut-out to win. Only brilliant pitching could have stopped Spud Chandler in that third game.

To allow one clean hit in eight innings is a working job that deserved something better than defeat.

One of the outstanding stars in this past series was Bill Dickey. This is Bill's 15th season with the Yankees. He has been suffering from a heavy cold, with a touch of allergic nose poisoning from rug carpets or anything that has a fuzz. He has been physically low. Yet he caught brilliantly and after the first three games was hitting around .445.

Bill Dickey didn't need this series to prove his place. He has caught more than 30 Yankee World Series games, and has never shown a flaw in all that time.

The Irrepressible

Old Irrepressible, better known as Ole Diz, is still one of the most colorful parties concerned with baseball.

In the years I've known him Dizzy Dean hasn't changed a leopard's spot. He never will.

Except for a tough break, an injury to his shoulder, he might have been one of the all-time greats.

I've never heard Dean complain about this tough luck. Nothing that can happen ever will wipe that quick grin off his face. And there is no mental expert who can make him quite sane.

Looking Back

Ole Diz is still around broadcasting and advising the players. Here are some of his forgotten classics:

1. The day in St. Louis with the thermometer at 108 when Diz, sitting on the Cardinal bench, built a fire and wrapped a big blanket around his shoulders.

2. The day in Florida when I went fishing with him and he overstayed his time six hours.

"What will Frank Frisch do about this?" I asked him.

"Ole Frank can't do nothing," Dizzy said, "except ball me out and fine me $200. What's $200?"

3. The day he walked into the Tiger ball park in 1934 before the World Series—wearing, among other details, a gray felt hat and a blue overcoat, he grabbed the bat from Mickey Cochrane's hands and hit one on the line—much to Mickey's astonishment.

"That's the way we do it," Dizzy said as he walked away.

4. Warming up before the Tiger game that year someone told Dizzy the odds were 2 to 1 on the Cardinals when he was pitching.

"Them gamblers," he said, "are pretty smart people. They don't miss no sure thing."

5. The day he was warming up, as a Cub, to face the Yankees.

"How do you feel, Diz?" I asked.

"Well," he said, warming up a sore arm, "I ain't what I used to be. But who in hell is?"

Mort Cooper, as a pitcher, is the closest approach to Dean that the Cardinals ever have known. Mort hasn't Dean's color, but as Ole Diz almost said: "Who has?"

Cooper is a big, powerful fellow who only came along this season as one of the best in the game. He still has to prove he is another Dizzy Dean.
